True Bill Charges Bribery to Alderman Buchanan

OFFICIAL ACCUSED OF TAKING MONEY FOR HIS INFLUENCE

'ACCUSATION 'FALSE,' OFFICIAL DECLARES

Total of $750 Involved in Transactions Which, According to True Bill, Took Place in 1924.

Return of an indictment charging Alderman Claude E. Buchanan, of the eighth ward, with bribery in two counts Saturday afternoon marked the discharge of the March term Fulton county grand jury. Bond for Alderman Buchanan was set at $1,000 by the solicitor general's office.

The true bill which added Alderman Buchanan to a long list of city graft-defendants charges that the accused accepted bribes totaling $750 in 1924 for his influence in matters before general council. One count involves city sewer bills against the Realty Sales Corporation for work done in Sylvan Hills; the other is in connection with acceptance by the city of bids filed by Case & Cothran for paving three streets.

Alderman Buchanan is charged with receiving $500 from the Realty Sales Corporation for voting on a resolution to cancel sewer connection bills in lieu of improvements made by the corporation, at its own expense, and a resolution reducing bills for sewer construction also in lieu of improvements in Sylvan Hills subdivision made by the corporation.

The other count charges Alderman Buchanan with receiving $250 from Case & Cothran, a partnership composed of C. C. Case and J. R. Cothran, for voting on acceptance of bids by Case & Cothran for paving on Todd road, McLynn avenue and Clifton street.

To Prepare for Trial.

It is expected that the graft probe will be continued when the May term grand jury is sworn in Monday morning by Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of the first division of criminal court. However, work of the solicitor general's office will be devoted chiefly to preparation for the trial of City Clerk Walter C. Taylor on May 12. In spite of the action of the Fulton county grand jury in stopping further extra expenses of the solicitor's office for the investigation, it is believed that the probe will go on into the May term. Prosecutor William Schley Howard has announced that he will remain with the solicitor's office until the entire graft case is disposed of.

The investigation originated during the November-December term of the grand jury, and was continued by the January-February body. The latter grand jury returned sensational presentments charging that graft honeycombed the city hall. It also indicted City Clerk Taylor, ex-Councilman Harry York, Jack White, a broker; City Purchasing Agent W. P. Price, and others. York and White were convicted and have motions for new trials pending. Price was acquitted. Taylor's trial was continued until May 12 after Judge John D. Humphries had disqualified himself and Judge G. H. Howard had announced that he would strike out a large portion of the counts in the indictment. The grand jury returned a new indictment gainst Taylor to remedy defects in the previous true bill.

That the new grand jury may turn its attention to the last session of the general assembly of Georgia was indicated several days ago. The solicitor general's office is said to be in possession of considerable evidence of alleged irregularities in connection with the meeting of the legislature.

Sewer Connections.

The true bill against Buchanan alleges that on November 13, 1924, while Buchanan was a legally qualified alderman of the city of Atlanta and a member of the general council of the city of Atlanta, and being chairman of the sewers and drains committee of general council, he did unlawfully receive of and from the Realty Sales Corporation $500 as a present and reward given to him by the corporation to influence the official behavior of Buchanan in voting on two resolutions which thereafter became pending in council.

One of the resolutions, adopted by council November 17, 1924, upon recommendation of the sewers and drains committee, provided that sewer connection bills Nos. 462 to 470, inclusive, against the Realty Sales Corporation for sewer connection built by the company in Sylvan Hills

Heavy Majority Sustains Hoover on Subsidy and Again on Repeal of Sliding Tariff.

BY D. HAROLD OLIVER.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—The house, by big majorities, stood by President Hoover twice in the long contest over the tariff today and refused to accept the senate's export debenture amendment and modified flexible clause withdrawing executive authority to make emergency changes in the rate structure.

Party lines split on both votes, the debenture plan rejected 231 to 161 and the legislative flexible provision, 236 to 154.

Republican leaders regarded the debenture vote as definitely eliminating this form of farm aid as a part of the Hawley-Smoot measure. They feel that a compromise ultimately will be worked out in conference and approved by both houses with respect to the flexible provision.

The actions on the two controverted administrative provisions, placed in the bill by the senate coalition of democrats and western republican independents over the protest of the president, came after an all-day debate. They completed the house work on the eight major disputes left unsettled by the conferees of the two branches and sent the complex document back to the senate, where it is expected to be considered next week.

There is a possibility that the measure will be returned to conference first, but this had not been definitely determined tonight.

By unanimous consent the house agreed to return to conference for adjustment the differences over the make-up of the tariff commission. The house measure calls for a non-partisan fact-finding body of seven reporting to the president. The senate measure provides for a bi-partisan commission of six, as at present, but answerable to congress under its new flexible clause.

Of the eight rates and administrative provisions reserved for separate votes in the house, only the senate rates on silver and lumber, the Blease amendment exempting state and municipal cement from duty, and the debenture, flexible, and tariff commission proposals are subject to further consideration. The house concurred in the senate rate on sugar and the senate's free listing of logs and shingles, settling these disputes.

A letter from President Hoover addressed to Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the republican leader, in which the executive said he had not changed his views in opposition to the debenture farm relief plan, was read to the house by Tilson.

Denying that he was authorized to speak for the president, the republican chieftain prefaced the reading of the letter with a statement that it was a "fair deduction" that Mr. Hoover would not sign the bill if the debenture were a part of it.

This statement led to a series of

HEATED PRIMARY RACES FORECAST

Three Mayoralty Candidates Announce and Others Are Expected To Enter Lists.

BY HERMAN D. HANCOCK.

Prospect of one of the most heated primary campaigns in the borough of Atlanta was seen Saturday with three announced candidates for mayor, and the prospect of at least two others before entry lists close May 17 in the primary slated for June 18.

Alderman Ben T. Huiet, of the third ward, Saturday cast his political hat into the arena as the third avowed candidate for the mayor's post, and Councilman Wiley L. Moore, of the seventh ward, was considering importunities of a large number of his friends that he become an aspirant.

Rawson Collier, foreman of the grand jury which returned the first indictments in the probe of graft conditions in the municipal government, also is being urged to enter, and a meeting of a strong group of business leaders to consider placing a "citizens' ticket" in the field opposing every incumbent for the 23 posts for which nominations are to be made is

Last Concern of Dying Girl Is for Max Warren, Held for Murder; Funeral Monday Morning.

With her last concern for Max Warren, 18-year-old youth who fatally wounded her last Monday night while in a fit of jealous rage, Miss Edna Estes, 18, of 860 Gilbert street, S. E., gave up a brave fight for life shortly before 6 o'clock Saturday night, and succumbed at Grady hospital to a 22-caliber rifle bullet wound in her back.

She was conscious until the end, and it is reported that her last words, uttered a few moments before her death, were, "What will Maxie do without me?" An uncle and a cousin were at her bedside when the end came.

According to hospital attaches the pulse of Miss Estes had practically ceased to beat at 3:15 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and her temperature had mounted rapidly to 105 degrees.

Warren, in his cell at police headquarters, when told that his sweetheart was dead, fell onto his cot and sobbed for several hours. His cellmates reported that he stated to them that he "didn't care what happened now."

Miss Estes, who had been a patient at Grady hospital since the shooting Monday night, was fatally wounded by Warren when the latter, in a jealous rage, called her from a party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Bean, 872 Confederate avenue, and shot her through the back. It is said that he was angry because he was not invited to the party and the victim was accompanied there by another boy.

There were 18 young people at the party and when Warren rang the door bell and asked for Miss Estes several followed her to the porch. There they stated they heard her pleading with him not to shoot her.

After the shooting Warren went to the home of P. H. Wilson, 981 Underwood street, and telephoned police headquarters to come for him. He gave himself up to Detectives J. M. Austin and W. J. Anderson. To them he readily admitted the shooting and stated that the family of Miss Estes objected to his attentions to her. This was confirmed by her uncle, H. B. Andrews, with whom she had lived since infancy.

Warren was held at police station all during the week on a technical charge of "suspicion" which was automatically changed to that of murder Saturday afternoon with the death of Miss Estes. At one time he was informed that a blood transfusion might be necessary to save the life of his victim. He readily offered to donate his blood, maintaining that he did not wish to kill her when he shot her, but that he shot her "because he loved her." At the hospital earlier in the week Miss Estes told attaches that she hoped nothing would happen to Warren.

Mrs. Estes, mother of the girl, had been prostrated since the shooting, it was reported, but had shown improvement when it was thought for a while Friday that the girl would recover. Mrs. Estes was again confined to her bed Saturday when she received the news of the death.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning from the Ormewood Presbyterian church, with the Rev. A. R. Howland officiating. Interment will be in Crest Lawn cemetery with Awtry & Lowndes in charge. Miss Estes is survived by her mother, Mrs. Pattie Estes; a sister, Mrs. W. B. Bean; her grandmother, Mrs. Sara Andrews, of Marietta; two aunts, Mrs. R. L. Benson, of Marietta, and Mrs. C. W. Bowles, of Detroit, and six uncles, H. B. Andrews, J. R. Andrews, of Buckhead; Paul and J. H. Estes, of Atlanta; C. O. Estes, of Detroit, and A. R. Estes, of Asheville.

Congress To Probe U. S. Reds, Fish Says

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Investigation of communist activities in the United States by two house committees was proposed today as the official reaction in the capital to the disclosure of alleged communist documents in New York city.

Chairman Johnson of the house immigration committee, who long has advocated more stringent legislation to deal with aliens entering the country illegally, requested the labor department to furnish available information on the manner of entry of some 30 persons named in the documents made public in New York yesterday.

Almost simultaneously an announcement came from Representative Fish, republican, New York, that he had obtained assurance that his resolution proposing that a special committee delve into communist propaganda activities would be acted upon favorably by the rules committee within a few days.

LITERY DIGEST FIGURES.

For enforcement	1,863
For modification	2,684
For repeal	3,001

Final figures in The Constitution's poll to ascertain whether or not the figures of the Literary Digest prohibition poll showing a strong repeal sentiment in Atlanta were correct, would indicate that, at least in so far as the sentiment of those who participate in straw ballots are concerned, they present an accurate statement of the attitude of the people of the city.

The Constitution poll shows a considerable decrease in percentage in those favoring modification and a like increase in those who think the eighteenth amendment should be repealed. In the Literary Digest figures the combined modification and enforcement totals would be larger than the votes for repeal, but in the same totals in The Constitution's poll repeal would have a considerable majority, indicating that many who voted for modification had switched to repeal.

This conclusion is further strengthened by the fact that if a sufficient number of ballots in The Constitution poll were changed from repeal to modification the percentage in the two polls as between the three questions would be almost identical.

Few features appearing in The Constitution have attracted as wide interest as the two-week poll which closes today, this interested being manifested by the large number of letters received from both drys and wets expressing appreciation of the opportunity given to put themselves on record as to their position on the present prohibition laws.

The Constitution was especially praised for the precautions thrown around the balloting and for having clearly pointed out that the poll was taken not for the purpose of securing an expression as to the merits of prohibition, but as to whether the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead law were the best methods by which temperance could be secured.

From ministers, lawyers, doctors and leading businessmen of the city came letters explaining the votes of the writers and telling of their personal observation of the working of the present prohibition laws. The handling of these letters and the careful checking of all ballots received during the conduct of the poll required the services of a large clerical force which at times was forced to work late at night in order to keep up with the flood of votes.

The Constitution is appreciative of the many kind expressions received as the result of its check on the figures of the Literary Digest poll and feels that it was correct in holding that its readers would welcome an opportunity to express themselves on the topic of greatest public interest at this time.

City Officials Scored and Changes Urged In Presentments of Fulton Grand Jurors

Mayor Ragsdale is sharply scored for his inability to co-ordinate administrative control and correct wrong conditions.

A plea is made for the selection, in the coming primary, of a strong administrative head.

Some effort should be directed to cutting expenses instead of devising ways to spend more money.

One system of closely checking all revenue receipts should be installed. Absence of a unified checking system is deplored.

W. P. Price is declared unfit to serve the city as purchasing agent.

To say the least, the grand jurors assert, Price has been guilty of culpable stupidity.

The mayor, asked if steps had been taken to remove Price, contented himself with saying: "A letter was received from someone about it and I sent it to council."

Price should be replaced with someone in whom the public has confidence.

To do this, a group representative of all classes and sections should be formed and it should seek a form of government successful in other cities similar to Atlanta.

The schools should set themselves to the task of providing the fundamentals of education, within the budget prescribed.

The practice of diverting bond funds is unqualifiedly condemned and this condemnation is extended to the members of the board of education cognizant of it.

Castigation of council for failure to take action regarding the Chosewood and John A. White parks.

The auditorium-armory committee of council is saddled with blame for permitting conditions conducive to dishonesty.

Transfer of control and supervision of Grady hospital.

Immediate building of a police station.

Correction of the marked lack of discipline in the police department.

Excoriation of a system of corruption and mismanagement of city garage as evidenced by indictments.

GOVERNOR'S RACE CANDIDATES BUSY

Indications of an immediate start in the intense gubernatorial campaign predicted for this summer were evident Saturday when John N. Holder, former chairman of the highway board, formally announced his candidacy, and C. C. Brantley, chairman of the committee in charge of the Rivers' campaign, announced preliminary plans for his campaign.

The announcement of Holder makes the fifth entry into the governorship race, George H. Carswell, secretary of state, and Gordon S. Chapman, of Sandersville, having announced last Sunday, and James A. Perry, chairman of the public service commission, and Richard B. Russell, Jr., speaker of the house, being already actively in the contest.

Reports from Washington to the effect that Representative Charles R. Crisp of the third congressional district, was being widely urged to enter the race, were being generally discussed in local political circles Saturday, because of the effect his entry into the race would have on the lineups of the various candidates who already have announced. Mr. Crisp is one of the outstanding democrats in congress and as such during his long tenure of office has rendered splendid service, not only to his own district, but to the state as a whole. As a result he has strong friends all over Georgia and his entry into the gubernatorial race undoubtedly would result in many of his politically influential friends deserting other candidates.

Nothing definite has come from Mr. Crisp but the Washington reports indicate that he may be giving serious consideration to the urgings of his friends.

In his announcement Holder makes it plain that he will base his candidacy largely upon a good roads platform, although he outlines his position on other questions of state government now prominent before the people of the state. His platform is similar in many respects to the one on which he made his race for governor two years ago and at which time he secured a substantial vote in practically every section of the state.

Senator Rivers, according to Mr. Brantley, will make the opening speech of his campaign at Lakeland, in Lanier county, on Saturday, June 7, and from that date on will conduct an active speaking campaign, "making from two to four speeches a day every day except Sunday."

Senator Rivers, who also was a candidate for governor two years ago, launched his campaign then at the same place at which he will make his first speech this year. In 1928 he made 138 speeches throughout the state and it is announced that he intends to make not less than 175 this year.

Neither Mr. Perry nor Mr. Carswell have outlined their plans, but

Fulton, DeKalb Population Total Nears 400,000

With the population of Fulton county standing at above 312,000, and that of DeKalb county approaching 70,000, that portion of the Atlanta trade territory embraced within the immediate confines of the two counties bid fair at the final count to come within a narrow margin of 400,000.

The exact population total of the two counties, as based on preliminary reports released by Dr. Elizabeth Broach, local census director, is 378,189, a figure subject to considerable upward revision both through additional preliminary reports and in increases obtained through checking and rechecking the first given figures.

Fulton county's population is placed at 312,396 in the completed preliminary count. It is believed that the total will be increased by at least four or five thousand.

DeKalb county, with three districts unreported, stands at 65,793. Reliable estimates are that the final count will show a population of 70,000.

The city of Atlanta in the final count, it is also estimated, will be given a population of not less than 360,000. The preliminary count shows 353,108. Since the announcement of the preliminary count several days ago hundreds of new names have been added to the census list.

No further announcements on the Atlanta population will be made by the local census bureau until the final reports are ready, it was stated Saturday. It would take from two to four weeks, it was said, to complete the work.

The 312,396 population attributed to Fulton county indicates a clean gain of 79,489 from the population of 1920, when the final count showed 232,907. The increase in DeKalb county is expected to be in excess of 25,000. Ten years ago it stood at 44,051.

London's Daughter Is Divorced Again

OAKLAND, Cal., May 3.—(AP)—Charles Malamuth, assistant professor of Slavic languages at the University of California, today won an interlocutory decree of divorce from Mrs. John Malamuth, daughter of the late Jack London. The complaint charged Mrs. Malamuth was a "poor housekeeper" and that she called her husband's friends dull and uninteresting. It was the second time she has been divorced.

Right Rev. Flannery Is Dead in New York

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The Right Rev. Monsignor Michael D. Flannery, rector of the Queen of All Saints' Roman Catholic church in Brooklyn, and a leading Catholic historical student, died today in the rectory of the church of a throat ailment. He was 68.

SENATE TO PROBE GIFTS TO CANNON

Calls Capitalist Who Is Charged With Giving Bishop Slush Fund.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—An investigation of funds contributed by E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, to Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Southern Methodist church, for the 1928 anti-Smith campaign in Virginia, was determined upon today by the senate lobby committee.

The committee directed Jameson to appear next Tuesday for questioning concerning the contributions. It took this action after Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts, had charged that $65,300 was contributed but only $17,000 accounted for.

Cannon, who was chairman of the Virginia anti-Smith committee during the 1928 presidential campaign, will be called later. He said he had no comment to make at present.

Jameson was described by Tinkham in his testimony before the lobby committee as the largest single contributor to the Hoover campaign. Tinkham said reports showed $172,000 had been donated.

The Massachusetts representative, who is an outspoken wet, added that Cannon had explained that he acted as banker for the Virginia committee, advancing it his personal funds when necessary and being repaid when funds were available.

After questioning Jameson, the committee will adjourn until Thursday when F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, will testify. The adjournment will be taken at the request of Senator Blaine, republican, Wisconsin, the only wet member of the committee, who will be unable to be present Wednesday.

Chairman Caraway said the committee had been given access to the league's records at its Washington office and that if the desired information was not obtained there it would be secured from the national headquarters at Westerville, Ohio.

Other dry organizations will be investigated later, including the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, the Federal Council of Churches and the Southern Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service of which Bishop Cannon is chairman.

Carnegie's Partner Dies at Age of 77

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—William Latham Abbott, formerly of Pittsburgh, who retired as chairman of the board of the Carnegie Steel Company in 1892, died here yesterday. He was 77 years old.

Mr. Abbott recently divided his time between his residences in Florida and Canada. As a young man he was a leader in the steel industry.

He was a partner of Andrew Carnegie and later became president of Carnegie-Phipps & Company, Ltd.

MAYOR ASSAILED IN PRESENTMENTS OF GRAND JURORS

GRADY HOSPITAL MANAGEMENT HIT

School Authorities Urged To Provide Fundamentals of Education Within Budget.

Fresh and sharper criticism of Mayor Ragsdale, the charge that W. P. Price has been guilty of "culpable stupidity" in his transactions with Harry York and Jack White and recommendation that he be removed pointed emphasis on the importance of selecting—in the June primary—of "a strong administrative head" and the pertinent suggestion that school authorities should set themselves to the task of providing the fundamentals of an education within the budget prescribed stand out in the report of the March-April Fulton county grand jury which Saturday returned presentments before Judge Edgar E. Pomeroy.

Strongly voicing opinion that Atlanta is entitled to the form of government which has proven successful in similar cities in the United States, the grand jury recommends that a group of citizens, to represent all sections, all classes—capital and labor—be formed to make a searching analysis of Atlanta's and other cities' forms of government to the end that a more suitable one than the existing form may be had.

The grand jury pointed out that "the mayor's testimony reveals a system of government conducive to conditions which make possible the existing situation," and declared that while the jurors believe Mayor Ragsdale has been actuated by an honesty of purpose, "he has been hampered by administrative authority and lack of willingness to force a correction of those conditions of which he admits he possessed knowledge."

"At this time, when we are on the eve of an election, it is hoped that a strong administrative head will be selected to bring about a correction of existing conditions," the grand jury said. The presentments pointed out that the mayor's testimony was to the effect that the attention of the committee chairman would be called to deficiencies or irregularities and his authority did not extend further. "This grand jury is not content in the belief that the mayor of a city elected by the people as their administrative head should be or is powerless, either through restriction of law or personal unwillingness, to demand and secure a correction of

To Hold Oratorical Contest Finals During Next 2 Weeks

Southeastern Zone Contest at Pittsburgh on May 16th.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(Special.)—High school orators will be rapidly reduced from hundreds to seven regional champons in the next two weeks, through the district, state and regional finals scheduled by the sponsors of the seventh national oratorical contest on the constitution. Many prizes of medals, certificates, cash and scholarships have been received by participants as they were eliminated. Each of the regional champions to be selected within the next two weeks will be given, in addition to his or her preliminary awards, a free trip to the national finals at Washington on May 24, and by virtue of participation in that event, without regard to rating received, will be given a two and a half months' educational tour through Europe this summer with all expenses paid.

The first of the national finalists will be selected in the national capital finals, to be held under the auspices of the sponsor in that area, the Washington Star, in Washington, May 8. Eleven contestants, winners of preliminaries in Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, will compete for the area championship, which carried with it a place in the national finals a cash prize of $300 and the European tour. The judges of this area finals will include Honorable Tom Connally, United States senator from Texas; Honorable Ruth Bryan Owen, member of congress from Florida; French Strother, secretary to the president, and Robert V. Fleming, president of the Riggs National bank of Washington.

On the following evening, May 9, at Utica, N. Y., the New England zone finals will determine another regional champion. The judges on this occasion will be Dr. Albert Bushnell Hart, prominent American historian, professor of government at Harvard University, and author and editor of numerous historical books and papers; Honorable Hugh M. Morris, United States judge for the district of Delaware, and Dr. Edward Frank Humphrey, professor of history and political sciences at Trinity college, Hartford, Conn., and author of historical documents and reviews.

On the same evening—May 9—in the municipal auditorium at Seattle, Wash., the Pacific coast national finals will be held with the following distinguished board judging: Honorable Oliver P. Coshow, chief justice of the supreme court of Oregon; Honorable William H. Folland, associate justice of the supreme court of Utah; Honorable William J. Millard, associate justice of the supreme court of Washington; Judge James Franklin Ailshie, former chief justice of the supreme court of Idaho, and Dr. Alfred Atkinson, president of the Montana State College.

Two Already Chosen.

Two of the Pacific coast winners have already been chosen. They are LaVon Sorenson, 19-year-old senior of the Madison (Idaho) High school, who has for the second successive year won the Idaho state finals sponsored by the Idaho Education Association, and Margaret Bairos, 15-year-old junior of the Punahou school, Oahu, Hawaii, winner of the Hawaiian territorial finals sponsored by the Honolulu Star-Bulletin.

On May 16 three other regional finals at Chicago, Pittsburgh and New York city, will be held. The north-central champion will be picked at Chicago under the auspices of the Chicago Daily News. He will receive a cash prize of $500, a place in the national finals at Washington and the two and a half months' European tour, in addition to medals and cash scholarships won at school, district and group preliminaries.

Southeastern Finals.

On the same evening the southeastern-central zone champion will be selected in Carnegie hall, Pittsburgh, with the following serving as judges: Dr. Frank B. Trotter, of Morgantown, W. Va., president of the University of West Virginia; Dr. Charles Henry Ambler, of Morgantown, W. Va., professor of history at the University of West Virginia, editor and author of historical papers, articles and textbooks, and Judge Frank W. Nesbitt, attorney, of Wheeling, West Virginia.

The contestants at Pittsburgh, in the order of their speaking, follow: (1) John Clement FitzGerald, of the Hudson Falls High school, Hudson Falls, N. Y., representative of "District X" (the fringe area embracing all high schools outside of territories financed by sponsors), who will speak on "Roosevelt and the Constitution;" (2) Carolyn Russell, of Winder, Ga., representative of The Atlanta Constitution, speaking on "Personalities in the Constitutional Convention;" (3) The representative of the Louisville Courier-Journal, to be chosen in the Kentucky state finals on April 25 at Danville; (4) Margaret Louise Royall, of the DeLand High school, DeLand, Fla., representing the University of Florida, the contest sponsor in that state, who will speak on "Origins of the Constitution;" (5) The representative of the Birmingham Age-Herald-News, to be chosen in the Alabama state finals at Birmingham on April 25; (6) The representative of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette, to be chosen in the Western Pennsylvania finals at Pittsburgh on May 2; (7) The representative of eastern Pennsylvania, to be chosen at Philadelphia on May 9 under the auspices of the Pennsylvania Forensic League, contest sponsor in that territory.

The New York-New Jersey zone finals will be held in the town hall at New York city, with Honorable John W. Davis, former ambassador to the Court of St. James, presiding, and with the following five college presidents judging: Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, acting president and dean of Bryn Mawr College; Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, of Brown University; Dr. George B. Cutten, of Colgate University; Dr. Frederick C. Perry, of Hamilton College, and Dr. James L. McConaughey, of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.

Eight finalists who will have won through an intensive series of preliminaries in Greater New York, Westchester county, New York, Long Island and northern New Jersey will compete for first place in this regional contest.

The New York Times is sponsor of the contest in the New York-New Jersey region. In the current New York Times area contest approximately 80,000 high school students enrolled at the opening of the contest in the original, or manuscript, phases of the work. Dr. William J. O'Shea, superintendent of schools of the city, has made the writing of these orations on the constitution part of the regular course of study in history and civics in the public high school jurisdiction, and thus has automatically made 50,000 such students potential if optional candidates for the subsequent oratorical awards.

The school champion in each of the 318 participating schools in this area has been awarded a cash prize and a bronze medal. In addition those receiving first, second and third places in each school finals have been presented with bound copies of the constitution of the United States containing an inscribed honor certificate. Also the student in each school whose manuscript was adjudged the best from a written standpoint only has received a $10 "research prize."

The seventh and last of the national finalists will be chosen in the mid-western regional finals to be held in Kansas City, Mo., on May 17, with the following serving as judges: Honorable James Renwick Dean, of Lincoln, Neb., associate justice of the supreme court of Nebraska; Honorable Jesse W. Barrett, of St. Louis, Mo., former attorney general of Missouri; Dr. Francis G. Blair, superintendent of public instruction of Illinois; Professor Philo Melvin Buck, Jr., chairman of the department of comparative literature of the University of Nebraska and author of literary textbooks and articles, and Honorable Charles Frank Reavis, former member of congress from Nebraska.

Navy Flyer Plans Attempt To Set 8-Mile Altitude Mark

Lieutenant Apollo Soucek (left), navy flier, will try to climb eight miles high for a new world's altitude record in his converted seaplane (right) with equipment similar to that worn by army pilots (top) who recently flew in formation to 30,000 feet.

Soucek Will Risk Life in Effort To Wrest Record From German Holder.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—America's highest flier, Lieutenant Apollo Soucek, will attempt to pilot an airplane eight miles above the earth.

The navy pilot's goal will be a new world's altitude record for airplanes to add to his holding of the world seaplane mark.

He hopes to surpass by more than 10,000 feet the 30,000-foot altitude recently reached by 19 army pilots of the 95th pursuit squadron, first to push their way in formation to such a height.

He held the honor last year but 18 days after establishing a mark of 39,140 feet, Willi Neuenhofen, a German, flew to an altitude of 41,794 feet.

To wrest the record from Germany, Lieutenant Soucek must fly 328 feet higher—to an altitude 118 feet less than eight miles, where the air is thin and cold.

Only one man has flown higher, Captain Hawthorne Gray, who lost his life in a balloon in 1927 when he accidentally severed his oxygen tube. His barograph registered 42,470 feet.

Lieutenant Soucek will use the same Wright Apache in which he set the existing seaplane record of 38,580 feet and the short-lived airplane record. Pontoons have been replaced by landing wheels.

The plane has been groomed for the attempt with re-covering of the wing and tail surfaces and installation of a new Pratt and Whitney Wasp engine with high-compression pistons which step up the power 10 per cent.

Lieutenant Soucek will wear electrically-heated goggles to eliminate the danger of frost encrusting the glass and obscuring his vision.

He will carry three flasks of oxygen, a supply sufficient to last him one and three-fourths hours. In former attempts and practice flights he has taken one hour and one-half from take-off to landing and does not turn on the flow of oxygen until 15,000 feet in the air.

The flier has less than two months in which to make his altitude trials as he expects to be ordered to sea duty the middle of June.

LONE BANDIT LOOTS GROCERY ON JUNIPER

Woman Customer Frees Three Men Robber Had Bound.

A lone unmasked white bandit held up and bound a grocery store manager and his two clerks at 830 Juniper street Saturday night, robbed the cash drawer of $75 and escaped as customers were walking in the door.

According to W. G. Smith, 12 Oak street, Hapeville, who is manager of the grocery, the bandit entered ostensibly to make a purchase. Getting near Smith he flashed a pistol and after forcing him and his two clerks, Robert Callaway, 1276 Highland avenue and William Love, 842 Juniper street, to lie face down on the floor, tied their hands and feet with wrapping twine. Then the man proceeded to rob the cash register.

In leaving the store he brushed against Mrs. H. E. Draper of 807 Penn avenue, who was entering to do her Sunday marketing. Mrs. Draper freed the three men, but when they gained the street the bandit had disappeared.

COLORADO WILL TAKE NEW DRY LAW VOTE

DENVER, Col., May 3.—(AP)—For the third time in the last 14 years Colorado wets have started a formal effort to obtain repeal or modification of the state prohibition law.

A notice of intention to circulate a petition among voters, seeking to have the question of repeal placed on a state ballot, was filed yesterday with the secretary of state.

Battle lines immediately were drawn on the issue with announcement by Mrs. Adrianna Hungerford, president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, of Colorado, that the move would be fought to a showdown. The suggested repeal is expected to become the main issue in the fall elections.

Headquarters for the group sponsoring the wet drive will be established in Denver in a few days, Dr. J. M. Vroom, leader of the repeal move, said. After the necessary signatures are obtained a direct campaign to carry the proposition directing to all voters will be started, he asserted.

In the statement filed with the secretary of state the wets stated specifically that legalization of the saloon would not be sought. A vote is to be asked on intoxicating liquors by "such agencies, persons, firms or corporations," and under such laws as would be enacted by the legislature.

The first attempt at modification of the state law took place less than 12 months after it went into effect in 1916 when a light wines and beer campaign met an ill-fated end at the polls with a majority of 85,789 against modification. The second attempt, in 1926, had a like result when 107,749 votes were cast for the proposal and 154,672 against.

"The state is dry," Mrs. Hungerford said, "and it's going to stay dry. The W. C. T. U. will not shirk its responsibility to the electorate to keep it informed of attempts to repeal the law."

Dr. Vroom was equally emphatic in stating his case.

"This is in the nature of a referendum," he said, "on the question of prohibition in Colorado. We seek, of course, repeal, as against the aim of the referendum four years ago to obtain modification. The prohibitionists contend Colorado is a dry state. We believe the electorate is against prohibition. We shall see."

Among the backers of the move for repeal is S. Harrison White, a democrat and an avowed wet, who was elected to congress from Denver county in 1926 and two years later defeated by William Eaton, a republican dry.

Algiers Ready For Centennial Of French Rule

ALGIERS, Algeria, May 3.—(AP)—The city of Algiers was ready tonight to participate in the celebration of the centennial of the French conquest of Algeria, which will begin shortly after the arrival of President Gaston Doumergue tomorrow.

From more than a thousand miles deep into the interior of Africa the Berbers and stately Arabs have come to attend the solemn ceremonies consecrating France's great colonial achievement in northern Africa.

The streets of Algiers tonight were filled with amazingly picturesque figures, including white-turbaned African chieftains who have traveled for several months by camel across the Sahara desert, and the Touaregs and Chambas from the distant Hoggar district.

Everything in the preparations for the celebration indicated that for France this centennial is more than a tribute to the remarkable commercial development of Algeria.

Just as the visit of the Italian dictator Mussolini to Libya several years ago was regarded as an affirmation of Italy's international prestige in Africa, so President Doumergue's visit is considered by foreign observers to be a direct message to the world that France is determined to insist upon her greatness and dignity as the possessor of a colonial empire.

Coming immediately after the London naval conference, the centennial assumes great political significance. A vast amount of French wealth is being devoted to the development of what was once "darkest Africa." France is convinced that Africa is the golden continent of the future.

President Doumergue's nine-day visit will rival in strenuousness anything that Theodore Roosevelt ever attempted. Practically every hour of his trip is filled with official ceremonies and special courtesies to his Mohammedan citizens. Trips to Constantine, Bone and other cities have been planned.

Byrd's Dog Driver Gets Royal Welcome

TAMWORTH, N. H., May 3.—(AP) Amid the welcoming plaudits of his fellow townsmen, Arthur V. J. Patel, one of Rear Admiral Byrd's aides in the recent antarctic expedition, returned tonight to his home here. He was officially received by a committee of welcome, given a public reception by the state of New Hampshire and later tendered a testimonial banquet by his admiring townsmen.

Weather-beaten by antarctic blizzards and bronzed by the tropic sun, Walden looked the picture of health and happiness as he arrived from Boston accompanied by his wife. Missing only was his famous Chinook, lead sled dog who disappeared on the antarctic ice.

The New Hampshire legislature has appropriated $7,000 and the town of Tamworth an additional $3,000 for the new "Walden highway," which will run from Tamworth to the Walden home at Wonalancet, a distance of six miles.

BRITAIN TO EMPLOY FORCE AGAINST GANDHI

Stiffening of Government Attitude Is Discerned as Riots Continue.

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—Observers of the Indian situation tonight could not escape the impression of a decided stiffening of the government's attitude.

Whatever the ominous portent of a superficial quiet which for most of the week pervaded Peshawar, one fact stood out clearly. The British government is fully alive to all events in India and is ready to use arms against any aggression upon its northwest frontier.

It has not escaped the government's observers that beneath a seemingly tranquil surface events have been boiling.

Clashes in Peshawar and surrounding districts have been frequent. Workers' congress propagandists have been particularly active in the villages where misrepresentations regarding the "sardar act" against child marriage has played a prominent part in attempts to arouse excitement, although it has been pointed out that the congress party staunchly supports the measure in the assembly.

It is understood that propaganda has been carried on across the frontier, though thus far little response has been evident. The government recognizes, however, that the wild tribesmen of the region are ready to turn any difficulty of the British raj to their own advantage.

Experienced observers today therefore made it unmistakable that the government could quickly be induced to thow its position as to armed forces in the event of necessity.

Today was celebrated throughout north India as "Peshawar martyrs' day" and the government expressed satisfaction that it passed without disorders of major nature.

At Calcutta police were called into action, charging into a procession escorting V. J. Patel, former president of the legislative assembly. Patel arrived in Hoorap, a suburb. Several persons were reported to have been injured.

There were further disturbances in the evening when a crowd gathered in the hope of hearing Patel speak. One man was seriously injured and several others suffered lesser hurts. Patel did not make an appearance.

An extraordinary Gazette, issued today at Simla, gave notice that the application of the act for prevention of seditious meetings would be applied to the Peshawar district and the whole northwestern frontier.

The Statesman and the Bengalee today were the only two newspapers which had not suspended publication in protest against the government's press ordinance. The Indian Chamber of Commerce telegraphed the viceroy protesting against the decree.

Rickenbacker's Radio Plane Opens Big Aviation Show

:: NEW YORK GETS BIGGEST DISPLAY OF AIRCRAFT ::

BY FOSTER B. HAILEY,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

ABOARD RADIO PLANE OVER MANHATTAN, May 3.—(AP)—From this aerial broadcasting station Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, ace of American war aces, officially opened the New York show in Madison Square Garden today where $2,000,000 worth of planes are on exhibit.

The sky is full of planes, big transports, little training ships, middle sized cabin jobs—87 of them—giving New York its biggest display of commercial aircraft.

At this altitude, 5,000 feet, are 25 small cabin and open cockpit planes. Just above are several great transports, two named Condor after the great natural air cruisers of the Andes, a flying train rivalling in luxury the earthly speedsters that run on rails.

In this air argosy is enough space and carrying capacity for 30 tons of bombs, enough to blow the little island below into the Atlantic ocean off there to the east!

Forward of each pilot on the engine is a little metal cap, which if unscrewed would reveal a machine gun mounting, ready to synchronize the bullets that would fly from the guns' throats through the propeller and spray death into the uplifted faces that today smilingly watch this aerial circus.

This story was dictated over radio telephone from an experimental plane of the Western Electric and Bell laboratories to a reporter for the Associated Press in Madison Square Garden.

The convoy has turned away to the east and is fast disappearing from sight. The party is over.

Station WUT (way up there) signing off.

SHAH OBSERVES 4TH ANNIVERSARY

TEHERAN, Persia, May 3.—(UN) The fourth anniversary of the accession of Riza Shah to the throne of Persia has been observed throughout the land, in the cities and towns and in the numerous colorful hamlets which stud the vast mountainous regions to the east and to the west.

It was just four years ago that Riza Khan, who had risen from the humble estate of cossackdom to minister of war and prime minister, was crowned shah in this crossroads between Asia and the western world. The coronation was the outcome of years of planning and hard work during the days following the World War, when Persia, like so many other countries, was in upheaval and while the young Sultan Ahmed Shah was whiling idle hours away in European pleasure resorts.

Riza Khan first set his political house in order, introduced organization where chaos reigned, and in spite of many political enemies became the absolute ruler of the land.

The economic development of Persia, started by him during his days as prime minister, he continued as shah and the progress made there in these comparatively few years is considered even more remarkable than that of Turkey. The Persian government gained so much in prestige during the few years that in recognition it has been placed on the council of the League of Nations.

It made a successful treaty with the soviets, who were reported to have had an eye on the country since the 1917 revolution. It made a successful treaty with Great Britain. It has become on peaceful terms with all its neighbors and all the nations of Europe and Asia. And for the most part it has held on to its vast oil resources, much to the disgust of western oil barons.

It is probably with a greater feeling of security and national dignity than ever before that the natives of the plains and mountainsides today celebrated the fourth anniversary of their shah's ascension to the throne.

Thousands of miles of road fit for modern automobile traffic have been built during the past year and a great railway from the Caspian sea to the Persian gulf now is on the program of the indefatigable shah. His early training as a cossack has taught him to be constantly on the alert and to work 20 hours a day when pressed for time.

Noises of City Breed Gangsters, Doctor Thinks

NEW YORK, May 3.—(UN)—Noises of the great American cities are responsible for the increase in the ranks of gangsters, according to Health Commissioner Shirley W. Wynne, of New York, in the Woman's Home Companion.

Noise, he declares, produces a constant fear reaction, and it is natural that children who have spent most of their lives under conditions which create this reaction, will be more ready to fight and less amenable to reason than children reared in serene surroundings.

"This nervous alertness," says Commissioner Wynne, "is one quality of primitive man which has not disappeared before civilization. We are still startled by unexpected sounds. It was primitive man's greatest safeguard against danger which stalked him day and night. With people of today, it is as if the primitive were aroused within us to fight against marauding wolves every time we hear the cry of an automobile horn, or as if we braced ourselves to meet the attack of an invading army every time we hear the rat-a-tat of a riveting machine. It is safe to guess that every hour the average New Yorker is stirred this way by as many alarming noises as the hardiest hunter in prehistoric days was in his entire lifetime."

Dr. Wynne declares that while harmful results of constant noise may not be readily visible in vigorous persons, it creates a different pulse tempo, an increased rate of breathing and unnecessary activity of certain glands, which cannot help being harmful.

That noise is really injurious, the commissioner continues, is shown by the fact that one of the first principles of healing discovered centuries ago, was that patients must have quiet. Noiseless machinery will come in time, he concludes, but unless the people themselves realize the danger of increasing noises, serious consequences may result within a few generations.

Aviators Caught In Desert's Grip Returned Home

LISBON, Portugal, May 3.—(AP)—A French airplane came out of the skies today and placed tenderly upon Cintra aerodrome the aviators of the ill-fated Coullette expedition, which it had lifted from the white death of the Sahara desert.

The rescued airmen, Lieutenants Marchesseau and Coullette, were suffering intensely from their experiences and not for a long time after their return to France will they dispel the horror of their experiences of the last week.

The birdmen were lost when a sandstorm reached up and drew them from the air to the bosom of the desert. They were flying at an altitude of about 50 meters (200 feet) when the storm overtook them. The sand overwhelmed their plane and they crashed. The aircraft was wrecked, but the fliers escaped unhurt.

Stunned, they lay in the wreckage until the sandstorm subsided and then, with the returning of daylight, started out afoot to seek rescue.

The birdmen were lost many hours before coming upon a caravan of Meharists. Meanwhile the blistering sands had burned the shoes from their feet and the aviators were suffering greatly from lacerations.

The caravan offered them aid and they traveled with it for four days before finding water, of which the camel train had exhausted its own supply. On the sixth day they arrived at the Taureg village of Gao, where the Moors gave them generous hospitality, treated their wounds and provided them with soft sandals.

Aviators Bailli and Reginsensi, who presently arrived at Gao, picked them up and conveyed them first to Algiers, by way of Reggan, and then to this port, on their homeward flight.

League of Women Voters Indorses Naval Treaty

Resolution Unanimously Supporting London Pact Closes Tenth Anniversary Convention of Group

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3.—(AP) The League of Women Voters placed itself solidly and actively behind the London naval disarmament treaties at today's closing session of the tenth anniversary convention, at which feminine enfranchisement was celebrated.

A resolution of "hearty support" was unanimously voted, supplemental action pledging the league to further all national legislation relating to international naval reduction treaties.

Re-enacting of the maturity and infancy act was the second main objective of the league, both by special resolution and by sweeping reindorsement in the national program.

The special resolution dealt with the difficulties confronting the measure in Washington. Calling attention to President Hoover's recommendation in his annual message that the children's bureau administer the act, the league demanded that its administration be continued, disregarding a subsequent "administration measure" dividing funds between the children's bureau and public health service.

In the face of yesterday's earnest plea of Mrs. Florence Keeley, of New York, executive secretary of the National Consumers' League, and for more than 40 years a labor leader, the league voted to continue to study but not to support unemployment compensation acts.

Then, with brown portfolios filled with legislative projects for two years to come, the 1,000 women conventioners left a Louisville already gala with preparations for the Kentucky Derby.

They took with them also colorful memories of an historically authentic celebration of the entire sweep of the woman's rights movement, from 1810 to 1920, including an exact reproduction of the famous "bloomer costume" worn by the first Seneca Falls leaders.

They took home a list of 71 illustrious names of staunch women's suffrage campaigners, "the national roll of honor," to be perpetuated in bronze in Washington headquarters of the league. In the week's convention, the faces of 19 of the living pioneers on that honor roll had become familiar. State honor rolls rounded out the tenth anniversary recognition.

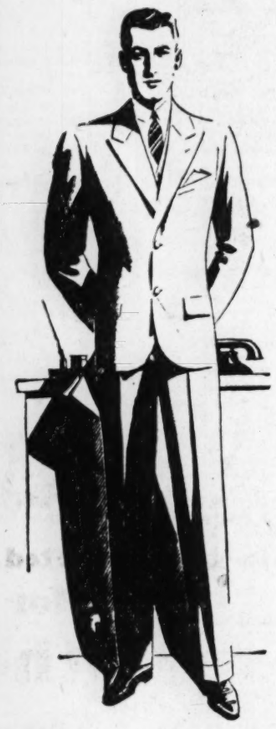

Glimpses of Louisville's rare gardens, picturesque river front, one and only international and coast guard station, and famed Kentucky horses in the stables at Churchill Downs completed the mosaic of the tenth anniversary convention.

Forest Fires Rage Through Delaware

GEORGETOWN, Del., May 3.—(AP)—Forest fires which for three days have been ravaging the eastern shore of Maryland and southern Delaware, today balked the efforts of fire departments of 12 towns and hundreds of volunteer workers and swept on toward Georgetown after burning over 40 square miles of timber between Millsboro and Fairmount, Del.

The fire between Millsboro and Fairmount is one of several which have been sweeping the timber lands, starting Friday near Delaware Colony, a state home for feeble-minded near Stockley, four miles south of here. This fire has burned over between 25,000 and 30,000 acres of second growth timber on a strip four miles wide and ten miles long.

Friends of Judge E. C. Kontz, prominent Atlantan, Saturday also were urging him to make the race for mayor, and he had the matter under advisement, declaring he would give a definite answer within the next few days.

Frank R. Fling, attorney, Saturday announced his candidacy for recorder of the second division to succeed Judge Murphy M. Holloway, who announced his retirement. Mr. Fling is the first one to enter the field definitely, but it is certain that John L. Cone, city paymaster, will be a candidate, and there were rumors that Leo Sudderth and John Chambers, attorneys, also may be in the race.

Callaway Unopposed.

Judge A. W. Callaway, of the first division, has qualified, and thus far has no opposition.

Former Councilman James E. Bowden, of the fifth ward, Saturday announced his candidacy for alderman from that ward, opposing J. Allen Couch, incumbent. It is expected that Mr. Couch will offer for renomination.

Thus far Alderman Robert F. Pennington, of the first ward, nor Alderman G. Everitt Millican, of the tenth, have announced, and no opposition has appeared.

W. Paul Carpenter, councilman from the ninth, will be opposed by Homer C. Foster, attorney, according to the latter's announcement Saturday.

Qualification of Councilman William R. Johnson, of the 11th ward, for the race for renomination Saturday assured the first contest, however, because of the fact that Cecil V. Whiddon previously had qualified.

John M. Owen, attorney, already has qualified for council from the sixth ward, opposing Luke Arnold, elected by council to succeed Harry York, resigned. Mr. Arnold has not yet qualified, but it is expected that he will do so.

Another councilmanic battle loomed when Thomas W. Jones, attorney, declared he will oppose William E. Saunders, incumbent, for council from the 12th ward.

Councilmen Charles L. Chosewood, of the third, and W. Garland Cooper, of the tenth, have announced definitely that they will not seek renomination.

J. Raymond Curtis, prominent Atlanta businessman, Saturday announced his candidacy to succeed Mr. Cooper.

Gossett Mentioned.

Albert W. Gossett, head of the local bricklayers' union, was mentioned Saturday as a probable candidate for councilman from the third, and Councilman William T. Knight, of the fifth, announced for re-election.

Councilman H. Turner Loehr, of the first ward, has not yet made his intentions known, and neither have Howard C. McCutcheon, of the second, or Joseph E. Berman, of the fourth.

If Councilman Moore becomes a mayoralty candidate he will not seek the post as councilman from the seventh ward again, but in the event he fails to accede to the wishes of his friends he probably will be an aspirant to succeed himself to that post.

Councilman Frank H. Reynolds, of the eighth, has reoffered and qualified.

Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, school commissioner from the sixth ward, Saturday declared she will be in the field to succeed herself.

Other members of the board, whose successors are to be selected and who have not yet declared their intentions are James W. Maddox, fifth ward; Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, seventh ward, and John T. Hancock, eighth ward.

Huiet's Statement.

Text of Mr. Huiet's announcement follows:

"Having definitely decided to be a candidate for mayor of Atlanta, in the white democrat primary to be held June 18 next, I feel it my duty to give to the people of Atlanta some of the main issues confronting them and which must be considered during the term of the incoming mayor.

"There are many important subjects to be dealt with, such as our taxes, education, and general improvements of our city and the unemployment now existing in the city of Atlanta.

"Of course, our laws are passed by the general council. The mayor may approve or disapprove, but he cannot enact ordinances. He may make suggestions to your lawmakers and may urge the consideration of ordinances, but it is entirely with the general council as to what will be done. It therefore behooves the people of this great city to consider seriously the type of men that are selected to represent them as mayor and general council. The mayor should work with and co-operate to the fullest extent with the general council in passing laws that will be beneficial to all the people of Atlanta.

"Having served as a councilman and alderman of Atlanta for the past four and a half years, I feel that I could secure the hearty co-operation of the members of general council in passing ordinances that would be beneficial to all the people of our great city. It has become very popular with many people to criticise the members of general council for doing or failing to do certain things. Atlanta, in my opinion, has entirely too many councilmen and aldermen and I am in favor of reducing the number. Just how many I could not say but this could be worked out, I am sure, so that it would be satisfactory to the citizens and the body would still be known as mayor and general council, better known as the representative government by the people and for the people.

"I am not in favor of raising taxes as I feel that the present rate of tax should be sufficient to take care of all the needs of our city at this time. In some instances the assessments, in my opinion, are too high, especially on the home owners. The city has many ways in which to get its revenue to support its institutions, namely: Real estate and personal property tax, fees collected at recorder's court, streets and highways, school funds from state of Georgia, library fees, cemetery, municipal industries, trust funds, licenses, and various other sources. The estimated income of Atlanta for the year 1930 is $15,948,482.76.

School System.

"The heads of our educational department should draw a program that should give us a most complete and economical system, with prompt payment for every teacher in the system and keep the unfavorable publicity out of the papers that we are going to have to cut the teachers' salaries and close down the schools so many months during the year. This, I believe, can and will be worked out satisfactorily to the city and school department.

"I am not in favor of prorating payments of the employes of our city but all should be paid promptly, as it was never intended that this great city of ours should be classed as insolvent. No appropriations should be approved by the mayor unless the general council has made provisions for the payment of same.

"I am not in favor of any department having to close down to half time on account of lack of funds but I am sure that this can be worked out in some way so that said departments will not be handicapped as at present.

"Having served as councilman and alderman for the past four and a half years I feel qualified to hold the office of mayor of Atlanta and I am asking the good people of our fair city to elect me mayor on my past record as councilman and alderman which is a matter of record at the city hall."

Mr. Huiet was born March 1, 1895, attended school in Atlanta, Ga., at Richmond Academy in Augusta, Ga., and Clemson College, Clemson College, S. C. Upon leaving college in 1917 enlisted in the army for the duration of the World War, having entered the army as a private and upon leaving the army in 1919 he had risen to the rank of lieutenant. In 1924 he helped organize the 122nd Infantry, Georgia National Guard, receiving a commission as first lieutenant. In 1925 he was commissioned as a captain, which rank he held for five years. February, 1930, he was promoted to major in command of the first battalion, 122nd Infantry.

In 1925 he was elected to council from the third ward over two opponents. In 1927 he was returned to council from said ward without opposition. In 1928 he was elected alderman from that ward by the vote of the entire city, receiving 11,653 votes against 2,662 for his opponent.

He is a member of St. Paul Methodist church, also a member of the board of stewards of said church, and a member of Masons, Shrine, Atlanta Lodge of Elks. He is also a member of the Atlanta Association of Fire Insurance Agents.

Mr. Huiet has been in the insurance, real estate and renting business for the past 10 years, being president and secretary of the Huiet-Williams Co., Inc.

Moore Considering Race.

Councilman Moore is said to be giving the importunities of his friends that he make the race for mayor serious consideration.

"I wish to ask my friends to withhold pledging themselves to any other candidate for the next few days and to be patient," Mr. Moore said Saturday. "I feel that the responsibility which will fall on the mayor is a heavy and serious one. To those who have so loyally pledged their support to me I wish to express my thanks and to exhort them to withhold pledges to anyone for the time being. I shall be ready to make an announcement within the next week."

Persons in all walks of life have urged Mr. Moore to become a candidate. Business and financial leaders are among them as are representatives from large civic organizations.

Mr. Moore has been a member of council for several years and is now serving as chairman of the finance committee, the most important post in the gift of any administration. He is president of the Wofford Oil Company and a widely known businessman.

Mr. Fling, who is seeking the recorder's post, has been engaged in the practice of law in Atlanta for five years. He is a member of the firm of Harwell, Fairman and Barrett. He is a native of LaGrange, and has lived in Atlanta since 1913. He served in France for two years during the World War, and after the armistice was confined for two and one-half years in a government hospital, but since his recovery has been engaged as an active practitioner at the Atlanta bar. He is past local commander of the Betty Harrison Jones chapter, Disabled American Veterans of the World War and was honored by being elected state commander of that organization and served with distinction during 1928 and 1929. He is also active in fraternal and civic orders. In making his announcement, Mr. Fling promises that if elected he will serve the citizenry fairly and impartially and will never give any one cause to regret the confidence placed in him.

Mr. Bowden, aldermanic candidate from the fifth ward, has been a resident of Atlanta for 42 years, and has resided in the fifth ward 30 years. He served as councilman from the fifth ward during 1927 and 1928 and secured many needed improvements.

He is an active church worker and active in various fraternal and social orders. He served during the Spanish American War and is an active worker in the Spanish American War Veterans' organization, being a member of Lee-Roosevelt Camp No. 6.

Mr. Foster's statement follows:

"Last fall I made an announcement that I would be a candidate in the general election for council in the ninth ward to succeed R. M. Cobb, whose seat would automatically become vacant, as he resided in the newly created thirteenth ward. However, Mr. Cobb decided that he would not resign, but would serve until the last meeting of council in December. By this action, the people of the ninth ward were prevented from electing their councilman by popular vote. This necessitated the members of general council to select a representative. Therefore, I withdrew my candidacy until the democratic primary as I preferred to be elected by popular vote rather than by council. I felt that this action would give the people of the ninth ward an opportunity to express their preference.

"I have been a resident of the ninth ward for the past 14 years and have always been interested in the business and civic affairs of my ward and city. I advocate a good clean business administration in the management of all affairs pertaining to the city government with special reference to the operation of our school system. I have been operating a successful business at Little Five Points for the past eight years, and at present I am president of the Inman Park Business Men's Association. I am also a member of a number of fraternal organizations.

"If elected I will serve the people of the ninth ward and the city at large faithfully."

Mr. Jones, of 87 Lakeview drive, N. E., who announced his entry as candidate in the coming primary elections to represent the twelfth ward in city council, is a well-known member of the Atlanta Bar Association, practicing here since 1924. He is known in political circles and to the voters of the twelfth ward, having run in the councilmanic elections two years ago against the incumbent repreesntative from that ward.

He is a member of the Twelfth Ward Improvement Club and served as secretary of that organization last year.

Mr. Knight was elected to council to fill the unexpired term of Councilman Tom C. Morris, resigned.

"While I have been connected with the local government only a short time, I feel that my record of constructive service entitles me to a full term," Mr. Knight said Saturday. "I shall endeavor to continue to serve the best interests of the ward and the borough at large in the fair, impartial and honest manner which has characterized my tenure of office thus far."

"I have always considered council and the board of education as important members of the body politic and thought that each should live within its budget, doing the best possible for schools, taxpayers, sewers, firemen, policemen and all other municipal departments.

School Problems.

"I have given careful attention to all school problems, striving for a strong foundation in education and also for that culture which would make happy and wholesome the leisure hours of the students.

"I think the school commissioners should take their religion to the board of education, doing as they would be done by. That plan would enable us to have necessities in all wards, and not have luxuries in some, leaking roofs, rooms which cannot be heated and sanitation which endangers the health of pupils in others.

"On April 22, the board meeting, I voted to pay all salaries and then to cut out all unessentials so that the schools would not be forced to close in November."

Statement By Curtis.

Mr. Curtis issued the following statement:

"In announcing my candidacy for the office of councilman to fill the place now held by W. Garland Cooper, which will be vacated on January 1, 1931, due to the fact that he has announced that he would not seek re-election, I wish to assure my friends I have given very careful consideration before deciding to enter this race. If I am honored with this very important office, I assure my friends that I shall always stand for a good, clean, honest, businesslike administration. I will work for the interests of my ward and the city of Atlanta as a whole at all times, taking into consideration that your interests are first to be considered in all matters.

"I am owner and manager of the J. R. Curtis Company, manufacturers and distributors of Printer's Ink, also president and treasurer of the Curtis Roller Company, manufacturers of printer's rollers. I have lived in Atlanta all of my life, attended the public schools, or rather the Oakland city school before it was annexed to the city of Atlanta. I am a past president of the Adair Park Civic League and a member and worker in several fraternal orders. I have lived in the tenth ward for about 12 years and practically all of my real estate holdings are located in the tenth ward.

"I have nothing to sell to the city of Atlanta, and in entering this race and agreeing to serve if elected, will be a purely civic duty on my part the same as every citizen should do considering this service just the same as jury duty. I have made no promises to anyone, no rewards to give anyone if elected, and shall conduct my campaign on a high plane. If you feel that I am worthy of the office, I shall greatly appreciate your vote and influence.

"J. R. (RAYMOND) CURTIS."

CANDIDATES BUSY IN GOVERNOR'S RACE

both have been actively at work for some weeks and have indicated their intention of making vigorous speaking campaigns. All of the announced candidates are forceful stump speakers and the indications are that the candidates will this year take their appeals more directly to the people than has been the case for many years past.

Richard B. Russell, Jr., was the first gubernatorial candidate to qualify, paying his entrance fee of $250 to Mrs. Bessie Anderson, secretary of the state democratic executive committee, Friday.

Former Governor Slaton was silent Saturday concerning his decision as to whether or not he will offer against United States Senator W. J. Harris, but it is known that he is continuing his investigation as to his chances of success should he announce. It was reported during the week that he had been in conference with leaders from different sections of the state, but he had no comment to make other than that "the matter has not been decided."

State Senator George Lankford, of Toombs county, announced his candidacy during the week against Calvin Parker, of the state public service commission. One other member of the commission, Perry T. Knight, of Berrien, is also up for re-election this year but there has been no opposition to him as yet.

TRUE BILL NAMES CLAUDE BUCHANAN

sub-division be cancelled in lieu of improvements made by the corporation at their own expense, according to the true bill.

The other resolution, adopted by council December 15, 1924, upon recommendation of the sewers and drains committee, provided that sewer connection bill No. 462 to and inclusive 470 against the Realty Sales Corporation for sewer constructed in Sylvan Hills be reduced in the amount of 50 per cent of the original bills, this being done in lieu of sanitary sewer outfall and storm water sewers constructed by the Realty Sales Corporation in the Sylvan Hills sub-division, the indictment alleges.

Paving Bids.

The second count of the indictment charges that Buchanan, on August 27, 1924, did unlawfully receive from Case and Cothran, a partnership consisting of C. C. Case and J. R. Cothran, $250, as a present and reward given to the accused by the firm to influence the official behavior of Buchanan in voting as an alderman on acceptance of bids made by Case and Cothran to pave Todd road from Virginia avenue to Highland View, McLynn avenue from Highland avenue to Lanier boulevard, and Clifton street from West Boulevard drive to Hardee street, all in the city of Atlanta and all to be paved with vibrolithic concrete, according to bids and acceptance. The indictment alleges that delivery to and acceptance of the money by the acused was in pursuance of an agreement whereby Case and Cothran agreed to give to the accused the money to influence his behavior in the subject matter prior to the voting upon the acceptance of the bids by general council, and that the question of acceptance of the bids of Case and Cothran for the stated paving jobs were matters depending before council subsequent to the agreement and prior to payment of the money in pursuance of the agreement.

The true bill alleges that the acts of the accused and the offenses were unknown until after December 1, 1929.

Witnesses listed on the indictment included J. R. Smith, 901 Fourth National Bank building; Sam P. Cronheim, Candler building; E. L. Barnes, deputy city clerk; Riley Elder, street improvement collector; C. C. Case and J. R. Cothran.

Charges Denied.

Vigorous denial of the charges against him was voiced Saturday afternoon by Alderman Buchanan, who has been in the hospital for the past five weeks as the result of an appendicitis operation. Alderman Buchanan said that the charges are "absolutely false," and that "my friends need not have any fear but what I can establish to any fair-minded tribunal that I have done nothing that is either legally or morally wrong."

Alderman Buchanan's statement follows:

"I have been informed that I have been indicted on two counts, one of which charges me of having received $250 from Case & Cothran and the other of having received $500 from Realty Sales Corporation as a bribe or reward to influence my vote on measures they were interested in. Both are alleged to have happened some time in 1924.

"My answer to the charges is that they are entirely false.

"I have been in council for 10 years and have given the city of Atlanta my best efforts. I have never received one cent to influence my official conduct.

"For the past five weeks I have been in the hospital with an appendicitis operation and am just now convalescing. As soon as I am physically able I will investigate the records upon which these charges are made and my friends need not have any fear but what I can establish to any fair-minded tribunal that I have done nothing that is either legally or morally wrong."

Leading Lawyers Form New Firm

Announcement of formation of a law firm under the style name of Colquitt, Parker, Troutman and Arkwright, with offices in suite 717, Atlanta Trust Company building, was made Saturday.

Members of the firm will be Walter T. Colquitt, formerly of Conyers & Colquitt; Robert S. Parker, Henry B. and Robert B. Troutman, and Preston S. Arkwright, Jr. Associated with the firm will be L. O. Simmons, Ray Williams, T. M. Smith and Robert S. Sams.

Half of Population Engaged in Looting in Some Sections, Survey Reveals.

SHANGHAI, May 3.— (AP) — Church, press and consular reports indicate a considerable increase in banditry throughout China during the first months of this year. In some districts it is estimated that more than half the total population is engaged in looting and plundering their neighbors as the last means of obtaining a living.

Civil war, famine and the coldest winter in years are the chief causes of the wars. In the south China provinces excessive taxation is the principal force that has led the people to take up banditry, while in central China and in the north the war, starvation and cold has served to drive hordes of men, women and children across the country, robbing and destroying as they go.

Hupeh province, in normal years one of the richest districts along the Yantze river, has been especially hard hit. It was in this province that the last rebellion occurred and consular reports indicate that former soldiers have grouped into well-organized robber gangs who loot towns and kidnap persons of even moderate means. Several army commanders have not paid off their troops and the soldiers have quit the service to take their living where they can find it.

"In northern Hupeh a night seldom passes but what a village or farmstead goes up in flames," reads the report of a mission in that section. "The price the bandits have levied in human lives may never be known, but the deserted and barren countryside gives mute evidence of the high toll exacted.

In the provinces of Honan, Shantung and Kwangsi similar conditions exist. Here, the reports indicate, country people have joined forces with the soldier gangs and are engaged in robbing and plundering the homes of their neighbors.

In the famine areas of Kansu and Shenshi provinces banditry has attained alarming proportions. An otherwise rich agricultural region, this part of China is now one of the most desolate and barren places in all Asia.

North Manchuria has also suffered heavily from the recent spread of banditry. During the past few years this section of China has prospered and the Mukden government had succeeded in suppressing the moving gangs of bandits who infested the area. But the recent Sino-Russian dispute turned the attention of the government troops to warfare, leaving the country an easy prey to robber bands. Now that the dispute with the soviet has subsided the Manchurian army is again directing its attention toward bandit suppression.

It is considered amazing that, despite widespread disorder in the interior, foreign missionaries who live amid such conditions have been comparatively safe. It is true that bandits killed at least a dozen Christian workers during 1929, but this number is considered small in comparison with the many missionaries in the land.

GRAFT PRESENTMENTS RETURNED BY JURY

wrong conditions and bring about coordinated administrative control," the presentments declared.

"We do not believe the people of Atlanta will be content to have their purchases made by one self-confessed as incompetent," the grand jury declared in recommending removal of Price. "We urge that action be immediately taken to replace the incumbent with one in whom public confidence can be placed as to his diligence and fairness in the discharge" of his office.

In the presentments the grand jury pointed out that the mayor had called Price's attention to the possibility of the situation in which "much money was lost to the taxpayers through his (Price's) purchase of supplies at prices loaded with graft for Harry York and Jack White, operating as the Southeastern Brokerage Company." The mayor testified before the grand jury that "nothing further was done about it," the presentments stated. "Many had quoted him (Price) lower prices, and, failing of criminality, nothing less can be said than that a degree of culpable stupidity was displayed."

Inefficiency at Grady.

Evidence of inefficiency and political influence in the management of Grady hospital were found by the grand jury, it pointed out in recommending appointment of a board of trustees to be composed of prominent citizens to whom the authority now vested in the hospital and charities committee of council should be transferred and to whom the superintendent of the hospital should be accountable.

"Such a board, with members appointed for a term of at least four years, would, in the opinion of this body, remove a great deal of the now existing dissatisfaction over the operation of the hospital and help greatly in bringing about conditions of which the citizens of Atlanta could be justly proud," the grand jury said.

Classing the police station on Decatur street as "a veritable fire trap," and charging that "the sanitary conditions are horrible beyond description," the grand jury recommended that immediate steps be taken toward building of a police station suitable for the present and future needs of the city. The body also directed attention to "lack of discipline in the police department, a lack of fixed responsibility, and a lack of co-operation between the police committee, chief of police and chief of detectives." "Such a condition is unwholesome, militating seriously against the effectiveness of this very important part of the city government," the presentments declared.

The grand jury found that "the method used to purge the registration list is cumbersome, expensive, and to have demonstrated its ineffectiveness," and recommended as an economical and effective method of securing and maintaining a properly purged list that the tax digest be used as the nucleus for the permanent registration list, so that those who have paid taxes on these digests will be automatically registered. The jury also recommended use of the address given on the digest in making up registration lists for each ward and county precinct, as well as the closing of registration lists not earlier than 30 days before a primary, and that the procedure be of yearly occurrence, to enable the purging of the names of deceased persons and to properly change those moving from ward to ward.

The grand jury recommended that the city chief of construction have paving on all future projects cored and tested before acceptance. The body reported that it found from an investigation of certain street paving jobs that in some instances cores crumbled during the cutting, indicating, though not necessarily proving, an inferior quality of paving.

Full text of the presentments follows:

"We, the grand jurors, selected, chosen, and sworn for the county of Fulton for the March-April term, 1930, submit the following report:

"To properly interpret our presentments it is necessary that the underlying policy of the grand jury shall be understood. We have endeavored to temper our conclusions with malice toward none. The facts brought to light are not borne of carping criticism.

"A fearless expose of conditions should excite no fear of damage done our community. On the contrary, a great opportunity lies ahead for a civic consciousness to be aroused that will lead us to heights that may shine as an example of clean and efficient government.

"Full consideration was given to the most able and thorough investigation conducted by the two preceding grand juries. They are to be heartily commended for their labors. Their task was left unfinished only because of lack of time and the difficulties that confront an investigating body in securing facts from those whose frank and full statements are necessary to reach a fair and just conclusion. While we share the universal regret that Atlanta's fair name should have been darkened and the desire that the investigation be concluded with dispatch, it was determined at the outset that nothing should deter this body from taking the time necessary to gather all the facts and arrive at our conclusions in a calm and judicial manner. Our hope has been to not only seek out those guilty of corruption, but to go thoroughly into matters of administration which have made corruption possible. All will not have been gained by an indictment and conviction of the guilty. Unless and until a spirit of determination is aroused to make future guilt and inefficiency improbable, this grand jury would feel that relatively little has been accomplished.

Public Suspicion.

"We should like to emphasize our regret that the many splendid and capable men serving our municipal government have had to labor under the discouraging conditions of public suspicion. Lack of confidence in government can only lead to chaos, and while our confidence has been shaken by past disclosures, it is well that we realize that when all of the guilt has been brought to light only a comparatively few will have been found corrupt.

"This grand jury had hoped to conclude this investigation, but due to trials of those previously indicted and the necessity of hearing testimony on a number of re-indictments, it has been impossible to follow to a conclusion all transactions that have, by testimony given, been clouded with suspicion. It is therefore the recommendation of this grand jury that further investigation of these transactions be actively carried on by the incoming grand jury in order that all guilt be brought to light and all trace of suspicion against those who are innocent be removed as quickly as possible.

"Before detailing facts concerning certain departments, we respectfully submit the following conclusions:

"1—That the primary cause has been the lack of energetic and competent co-ordination of the various phases of administration. His honor, Mayor Ragsdale, has appeared before our body at our request in order that we might determine why certain conditions had not received correction at his hand. In fairness to him, it should be stated that we believe he has been actuated by an honesty of purpose, but hampered by administrative authority and lack of willingness to force a correction of those conditions of which he admits he possessed knowledge. His testimony is to the effect that the attention of the committee chairman would be called to deficiencies or irregularities and his authority did not extend further. This grand jury is not content in the belief that the mayor of a city elected by the people as their administrative head should be or is powerless, either through restriction of law or personal unwillingness, to demand and secure a correction of wrong condition and bring about co-ordinated administrative control.

Strong Leader Urged.

"At this time, when we are on the eve of an election, it is hoped that a strong administrative head will be selected to bring about a correction of existing conditions.

"2—We believe that every person having in charge the expenditure of public funds should make a searching analysis of means and methods of reduction in cost of governmental functions. The burden of taxation weighs heavily on the home owner, wage earner and large property owner alike. Municipal cost is constantly mounting and economic laws and justice demand that wasted funds be diverted to channels of proper expenditure. Our investigation has satisfied us that those charged with authority can render a great and lasting public service by dedicating themselves to the task of reducing expenditures, rather than devising means of raising additional revenues.

"3—An investigation of the method of handling revenue, other than taxes, reveals sources of great loss to the city in some instances and possible losses in others. This may be illustrated in the case of the city auditorium (specifically referred to in these presentments). Grady hospital in the "outpatient department," police station and recorder's court where fines and bail bonds are paid, and other departments. No method of checking these funds at the source is in effect, and it is our urgent recommendation that the city of Atlanta immediately install through the city comptroller's department, a unified system of check and control in all departments collecting revenue; that funds so collected be paid into the city treasury and expenditures be only upon legal authorization. All persons handling funds of any character should, in the opinion of this grand jury, be placed under bond.

"4—After a fair and impartial trial, a jury has acquitted the city purchasing agent of the charge of bribery on which an indictment was found by the preceding grand jury. While Mr. Price is declared not guilty of criminal action, his own and other testimony cannot fail to convince one of his unfitness to serve in the capacity of purchasing agent. Much money was lost to the tax payers through his purchase of supplies at prices loaded with graft for Harry York and Jack White, operating as the Southeastern Brokerage Company.

Action by Mayor.

"The mayor had called his attention to the possibility of that situation (and testified before this body that nothing further was done about it); many had quoted him lower prices, and, failing of criminality, nothing less can be said than that a degree of culpable stupidity was displayed. The mayor has been interrogated as to steps taken by the city to remove Mr. Price from office for incompetence. The mayor states: "A letter was received from someone about it, and I sent it to council." We do not believe the people of Atlanta will be content to have their purchases made by one self-confessed as incompetent. We urge that action be immediately taken to replace the incumbent with one in whom public confidence can be placed as to his diligence and fairness in the discharge of his office.

"We further recommend that the purchasing department prepare and have available for public inspection a complete list of all purchases, showing date of purchase, from whom bought, nature of purchase and unit price paid. Such a list will remove the suspicion of secret purchases and "juggled" prices.

"5—The mayor's testimony reveals a system of government conducive to conditions which make possible the existing situations. An enumeration of the 'system' as revealed by the mayor's testimony or others points conclusively in our minds to the necessity for basic correction. This grand jury is not concerned with any one form of government. It is, however, much concerned with the basic character of government.

"A proper study of our system of city government with recommendations as to changes which should be made is a much larger task than can be undertaken by any grand jury because of the many duties falling upon it and because of its short tenure of office.

"We urge that a representative group of citizenry composed of both labor and capital be formed. It should represent all sections and all classes of the city. It should undertake a searching analysis of the existing form of city government, a thorough study of the forms of government found to be successful in other cities similar to Atlanta. It should, from this study, formulate a character of government most completely suitable to our needs and, having done so, should take all necessary steps toward its adoption.

Specific Phases.

"This body desires to incorporate in these presentments some findings and recommendations resulting from its investigation of specific phases of the city's activities. These follow:

"Atlanta City Schools—The ever-recurrent publicity of threats to close the Atlanta schools or curtail teachers' salaries has, in our opinion, done great injury to the city, and is altogether unnecessary. The education of the child is, and should be, close to the parents' heart. A fear that our educational facilities will be lacking is a deterrent to those that would otherwise avail themselves of the great opportunities of our community.

"The threat of curtailing teachers' salaries as a means of propaganda to force through excessive budgets is a grave injustice to those whose minds should be left free to teach our children. We recognize the responsibility upon the school heads to point out the necessity of expenditures for placing our educational system upon the highest possible plane. However, it is equally important that the situation of the taxpayer be given consideration, and upon its being determined that revenue is not sufficient for as complete a program as the educator desires, then this situation should be accepted in good grace, and the school authorities should set themselves to the task of providing the fundamentals of education within the budget prescribed. When this is done, the taxpayer will be the first to see that the school system is provided with proper funds and threats of closing will be unnecessary.

"This grand jury believes that Superintendent Sutton has all the quillifications necessary for building an educational system second to none, but urges that conservation in expenditures be applied and that his talents be exercised in operating the system within the limiit of available revenue. Within a very short span of years, buildings second to none in the country have been erected, large bond issues have been voted by the people, and the necessary funds will always be forthcoming when a spirit of confidence in conservation of expenditures is created. The shortest step to that end is living within the appropriated revenue.

Criticism of Ritchie.

"Much criticisim has been leveled at Mr. Ritchie, the assistant superintendent of schools. In a great school building program, it is expected that mistakes will be made as long as the human element is a factor. This grand jury has found no suggestion of criminal wrong on the part of Mr. Ritchie. We have found what appears to us as a lack of proper regard for conservative expenditiures. Whether this may be due to over-zealousness for perfection, or an attempt to personally create and devise individual methods of accomplishing an end, or disregard for cost, the result is the same.

"We believe it will be necessary for the incumbent to gracefully adjust himself to the school budget and apply his admitted managerial talents to economy rather than extravagance, to essentials rather than aggrandizement, to co-operation rather than domination, before the best results can be attained in that department.

"The diversion of bond funds exacted by refunds from contractors on work deleted from their contracts into current operating revenue has been covered by this grand jury by a special resolution addressed to the mayor and council which is attached hereto, and made a part of these presentments. This practice is unqualifiedly condemned, and this condemnation extends to those members of the board of education who were cognizant of it, as well as Mr. Ritchie, who initiated and followed the practice.

"County Schools—This grand jury finds that the county schools are well kept, that the majority of the buildings are excellent, both in design and condition, and that a building program is being followed which in a few years should result in a completely modern plant, eliminating the few remaining dilapidated and hazardous buildings, such as are now in use at Ben Hill, Sandy Springs and Bolton. We earnestly recommend replacement of these buildings with modern structures as early as possible. We further find that the county schools operate on a budget, determined by the amount of available revenue, and have consistently been kept within their budget. It is felt that the superintendent, Jere A. Wells, is deserving of special commendation for his able administration of the county school system in that the plant and equipment have been consistently improved and the standards kept on a high level without incurring a deficit or threatening a cut in teachers' salaries.

"We further feel that the board of county commissioners should be commended for the generous financial support given to the county schools, and recommend that their appropriations in the future be increased to the limit of their legal ability in order to complete the building program at the earliest possible date. We further recommend that as soon as funds are available, a separate county school be established to care for mentally and physically deficient children.

"City Parks—A special resolution has already been addressed by this body to the mayor and city council of Atlanta regarding the purchase of Chosewood and John A. White parks, in which recommendation was made that the purchase or lease of Chosewood park be abandoned and an attempt made to recover the amount paid on the purchase price. We desire at this time to emphasize this former recommendation and direct the attention of the citizens of Atlanta to the fact that this body has not been advised of any action taken on this recommendation other than that it was transmitted by the mayor to the general council.

"City Auditorium — Investigation made by this body reveals a woeful lack of system and business administration in the operation of the city auditorium. Under the system now in use only the most haphazard records have been kept of the use of the auditorium, and these have been destroyed at the end of each year. There is no possible way for an auditor to check these accounts, and this condition has existed for years despite the fact that the attention of the council has been called to this condition by the city comptroller and city auditors annually for several years. This body developed evidence through outside parties that led to the detection of two cases in recent months where the city failed to receive revenue collected for the use of the auditorium, and is of the opinion that the shortage found is only a fractional part of the city's total loss through slipshod methods employed. An indictment has been returned by this body against the custodian of the auditorium for embezzlement, and this body feels impelled to express the conviction that the auditorium-armory committee or council through lack of adequate supervision is indirectly to blame, in that it has allowed the existence of conditions conducive to dishonesty.

"Grady Hospital—This body has heard a large amount of testimony regarding conditions at Grady hospital and a committee from this body has made a personal inspection of the hospital. We find the entire hospital, including Steiner clinic, to be overcrowded and in urgent need of additional space. We find further that the main white unit, especially the original portion, presents a serious fire hazard. We, therefore, recommend that necessary steps be taken to provide additional bed space and correct the fire hazard now existing. In this connection we recommend that the city council give serious consideration to ways and means of matching the offer of a prominent citizen to give $100,000 for the establishment of a pay ward. This would to some extent relieve the overcrowding.

"We further find evidences of inefficiency and political influence in the management of the hospital, and to the end that this may be eliminated we urgently recommend the appointment of a board of trustees to be composed of prominent citizens, to whom the authority now vested in the hospital and charities committee of council shall be transferred, and to whom the superintendent of the hospital shall be accountable. Such a board, with members appointed for a term of at least four years, would in the opinion of this body, remove a great deal of the now existing dissatisfaction over the operation of the hospital, and help greatly in bringing about conditions of which the citizens of Atlanta could be justly proud. We further recommend that the private rooms on the fourth floor of the main unit, now reserved for nurses who live outside the hospital, be immediately utilized for surgical cases. We also recommend the immediate improvement of sanitary conditions throughout the main unit, with especial reference to bath tubs and toilets, both for patients and in the quarters of the internes.

"We further recommend the installation of a solarium at each end of the present children's ward, utilizing therefor space not now in use.

"Police Department — From the facts procured through a mass of testimony and through inspection of the police station, this grand jury feels that it should direct public and official attention to certain features of the police department.

"Indictments have been drawn against certain professional bondsmen and attorneys who have violated the law in loitering and loafing about the police station. That the prisoner in the police station is entitled to protection against unlawful approach by attorneys and professional bondsmen cannot be denied, but the situation at the police station has been such that this protection to prisoners has not been offered. A strict enforcement of existing laws by the police department in preventing professional bondsmen and lawyers loafing and loitering around the police station and soliciting prisoners can in itself prevent this unwholesome condition. There is adequate law to give the police department all of the authority that is required.

"This grand jury directs attention to the complete inadequacy and unsuitableness of the police station. The property on which the station is located is valuable and well located, but the building itself, almost 40 years old, is thoroughly inadequate both as to size and arrangement. It is a veritable fire trap, especially in the female wards, and the sanitary conditions are horrible beyond description.

"It is, therefore, the definite and urgent recommendation of this grand jury that immediate steps be taken toward the building of a police station suitable for the present and future needs of the city.

"This grand jury directs attention to lack of discipline in the police department, a lack of fixed responsibility, and a lack of co-operation between the police committee, chief of police and chief of detectives. Such a condition is unwholesome, militating seriously against the effectiveness of this very important part of the city government.

"The system by which the policemen on their respective beats report to the police station also is completely antiquated, not affording the protection which the citizens of Atlanta have every right to expect. With the reporting system as it exists, it is possible for a policeman to report from one of several stations on his beat without headquarters knowing definitely from what station such report is being made. This is due to lack of proper and modern equipment and this grand jury recommends that in the interest of proper police protection this condition be promptly corrected.

City Garage.

"Evidence on indictments brought reveal a system of corruption and mismanagement of the city garage which should have the immediate attention of council. An analysis of the audit over a three-year period reveals an increase in operating expenditures $247,863 in 1927 to $310,251 in 1929. During this same period gasoline purchases increased from $84,767 in 1927 to $121,501 in 1929. We believe that marked economies can be effected in this department.

"Provision for Juveniles—Judge Pomeroy, in his charge, directed our attention to the fact that youths enmeshed in the toils of the law for first or minor offenses are thrown into contact with and into the same environment as the most hardened criminal. The opportunity of reclaiming a boy is not only lost, but this association more frequently drags him to the lower level. We most earnestly urge that the judges of Fulton county undertake a correction of this condition by their own recommendation, or through proper representation of a citizen's committee cognizant of existing conditions.

"Methods of Handling Election Returns, Fulton County—Alleged irregularities in the recent elections for county commissioners and clerk of superior court, respectively, were of sufficient import to warrant an investigation by this body. The law requires that registration lists be purged every two years and for special elections. We find that the Fulton county list has not been properly purged in over ten years. In May, 1928, Fulton county authorized the employment of a secretary to the board of registrars with one assistant. We find that notwithstanding this employment and the additional allowances to the members of the board, the total approximating $8,000 per annum, that in the March and April, 1930, elections registration lists were used containing approximately 20,000 to 25,000 names of persons, either dead, moved away, or disqualified by non-payment of taxes. We find the same names listed in two or more districts and this situation is conducive to fraud and breeds a lack of confidence in the integrity of election returns. We further find that, in a recent election, both registration and voters' lists were missing from the ballot box for the Buckhead district and that the voters' list was missing from the ballot box for the Adamsville district. It is recommended that the ballot boxes, after the close of voting, be sealed with a metal seal, and that these seals remain unbroken unless otherwise ordered by the court.

"We believe the method used to purge the registration list is cumbersome, expensive, and to have demonstrated its ineffectiveness, and respectfully recommend as an economical and effective method of securing and maintaining a properly purged list the following:

"First: That the tax digest be used as the nucleus for the permanent registration list, so that those who have paid taxes on these digests will be automatically registered.

"Second: The use of the address given on the digest (which is the last permanent address) in making up registration lists for each ward and country precinct.

"Third: The closing of registration lists not earlier than 30 days before a primary, allowing those citizens who wish to pay taxes and register every opportunity to do so.

"Fourth: That this procedure be of yearly occurrence, to enable the purging of the names of persons deceased, and to properly change those moving from ward to ward.

"This plan will remove the necessity for expense now incurred for secretarial assistance to the board of registrars, as the clerical work can be consolidated, at a minimum of expense, in the office of the tax collector.

"Paving of City Streets—An investigation, somewhat preliminary in character, has been conducted to determine the quality of certain street paving jobs. This included the cutting and testing of cores from several projects.

"In some instances cores crumbled during the cutting, indicating, though not necessarily proving, an inferior quality of paving. It is recommended that further tests be made in order that more accurate conclusions can be reached.

"Paving ran uniformly somewhat thin as compared to specifications while some samples ran 15 per cent thin. Thickness of this pavement had not previously been determined.

"It is recommended that the chief of construction have paving on all future projects cored and tested before acceptance.

"Due to the large number of witnesses that this body has had to examine in connection with city hall matters, it has met almost daily during its two months term, many of the sessions lasting all day and frequently running well into the night. For this reason this grand jury has been unable to make the customary semi-annual inspection of county institutions and respectfully recommends that this be done by the incoming grand jury.

"This grand jury cannot close its presentments without an expression of its appreciation of the wholehearted support and encouragement it has received from the good citizens of Atlanta and the Atlanta newspapers. This body desires also to express its appreciation to Solicitor-General Boykin and his staff for their full support and co-operation, and their faithful and diligent efforts in behalf of a clean city government; to City Comptroller West for his assistance in furnishing records and information; to Chief of Construction Donaldson and his staff for their co-operation in furnishing information and assistance in matters of construction; to the state highway department for assistance in the loan of equipment for making tests, and to the board of county commissioners for the financial assistance given.

"Resolved, by this grand jury, that copies of this presentment be furnished to the three Atlanta daily papers and to the Fulton County Daily Report.

"Respectfully sugmitted, this the 3d day of May, 1930.

"HOWARD SEE, "Secretary."

FARM DEBENTURE BEATEN BY HOUSE

criticisms from the democrats who regarded it as a "threat."

Representative Cooper, 80-year-old republican member from Wisconsin, said there was a British law against such action.

"It's a serious thing to be confronted with a threat of this kind," the veteran Cooper asserted. "There ought not be the slightest coercion. We are independents. We are equals. The constitution provides a way for the president to consult with congress—by special message."

The president, who last April found ten objections to the original debenture provision in the farm bill, said the Norris modified debenture contained an "additional objection" in that the "export subsidies proposed vary with different agricultural products" and that tobacco growers under it "could apparently afford to raise their product and export it for the subsidy alone." The text of the letter follows:

Mr. Hoover, in his letter to Representative Tilson, found an additional objection to the Norris modified debenture placed in the tariff bill by the senate coalition of democrats and republican independents.

"The plan in the present bill," the president stated, "presents an additional objection in that the export subsidies proposed vary with different agricultural products and thus are widely different to different farmers.

"They vary from about 9 per cent upon the cost of production of rye to apparently near 100 per cent on tobacco. In the latter case, growers could apparently afford to raise their product and export it for the subsidy alone."

Minor Alterations.

The president added that since his previous statement the tariff commission had estimated the cost of the plan to the treasury, if placed into operation on the basis of present exports, at about $280,000,000.

"Some minor alterations have been made in the plan," the president's letter said, "which do not go to the essential fact that the practical working of it will depress and not elevate prices to the farmer."

Forty-eight republicans and the one farmer-labor member, Kvale, of Minnesota, voted with 112 democrats for the debenture, while 37 democrats and 194 republicans opposed it.

The constitutionality of both the senate and house flexible provisions was questioned in the debate.

Representative Beck, republican, Pennsylvania, a former United States solicitor general, in a letter read for him by Representative LaGuardia, urged acceptance of the senate provision and termed the house amendment "a momentous and indefensible change in our form of government."

Beck reiterated the delegation of rate-changing power to the executive was unconstitutional and predicted resultant harm to industries if "in the coming upheaval in politics, a free trade president should be elected in 1932."

While recognizing that President Hoover was a protectionist, Beck said "no one can say with any certainty who the next president of the United States will be and the man is blind who cannot see that, with the disruption of both political parties on the prohibition issue, any result is possible."

Representative Chindblom, republican, Illinois, described the safeguard clause in the senate flexible provision limiting congress' act on the items dealt with in tariff commission reports as unconstitutional because it would mean one congress legislating to restrict the powers of a subsequent one.

The fact that the tariff bill has been before congress almost a year and a half was stressed by Representative Treadway, republican, Massachusetts, as an argument in favor of letting the president change duties within the 50 per cent limits in existing law.

"Think of the potentialities of destroying the popular form of government by permitting the president to make tariffs," asserted Representative Crisp, democrat, Georgia. "I wouldn't vote to delegate this power to either a republican or a democratic president."

Representative Selvig, republican, Minnesota, in a statement issued off the floor, said the bill likely to be passed "will be an industrial tariff, with certain limited groups of farmers getting the best deal they ever had, but with agriculture as a whole being left out in the cold for the most part."

"The house action in rejecting the debenture provision," he added, "denies tariff benefits to producers of 44 per cent of our annual farm production."

Army Tells McNab To Lay Off Morrow

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The New York Times says Colonel Alexander J. McNab, U. S. A., senior military instructor on duty here with the New York national guard, has been instructed by his superiors in the army to refrain from making public speeches on the achievements of Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow in Mexico.

Colonel McNab was formerly military attache in Mexico City. The Times says complaint was made recently to General Charles P. Summerall, army chief of staff, that Colonel McNab, speaking here and in New Jersey on Mexico, praised Mr. Morrow for his successful diplomatic work.

Mr. Morrow is now candidate for the republican nomination for United States senator from New Jersey, and friends of former Senator Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, candidate in opposition to Mr. Morrow, were understood to feel that Colonel McNab was violating army regulations forbiding officers to participate actively in politics.

TARIFF COMMISSIONER SAYS METHOD WRONG

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—(AP)—Alfred Pearce Dennis, vice chairman of the United States tariff commission, told the American Academy of Political and Social Science tonight that the American economic policy was a "patch-work of compromises the result of jarring, conflicting sectional interests."

William C. Redfield, of New York, former secretary of commerce, spoke today on the dependence of the United States on foreign trade for part of its economic success.

Tariff makers, Mr. Dennis declared, have been compelled to subordinate the national interest to the demand of localities.

"We pay out," the speaker said, "about $7,000,000 a year in duties on imported olive oil to protect a circumscribed district in California that produces less than 150,000 gallons a year or about one and one-fourth per cent of our consumption. At one-hundredth of the cost to the consumer we could give the California industry the same amount of benefit through a straight out subsidy of $70,000 a year and at the same time promote better trade relations with the Mediterranean countries.

"From the standpoint of sheep herders and cotton planters we did well to raise the duty on raw wool and long staple cotton, but we thereby subject all farmers to increased rates on the clothing they buy. We have the choice between the sectional and national interest.

"We are in a new era of American investment abroad. American capital in foreign enterprises is the ward of foreign governments under which they are established. If we breed antagonisms we may expect American business to be hopelessly harrassed in the four corners of the globe and we shall have no recourse.

"I am not arguing for a renunciation of self-interest, nor for a lowering of tariff walls, but I am pleading for the application of telescopic rather than microscopic methods to our tariff making. The new tariff bill marks a big advance toward the substitution of scientific, fact-finding methods for haphazard, grab-bag methods."

A defense of the United States tariff commission as a body free from partisan politics and responsible for administering the tariff policy of the country was voiced tonight by Dr. Edgar E. Brossard, chairman of the commission, in an address before the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the academy. The commission also was described by Dr. Brossard as an institution for fostering better international relations.

County Will Decide on Funds For Army Hangar Wednesday

Action Will Be Taken on $10,000 Appropriation for Reserve Officers' Airdrome.

Action by the Fulton county commission on a $10,000 appropriation to place a government hangar at Candler field for training of army air reserve officers is slated for the meeting of the commission Wednesday afternoon. With favorable action by the county board seen as a vital factor in establishing Atlanta as reserve aviation headquarters for the entire fourth corps army area and as a center for subsequent military air developments, wide civic and aviation interest has been focused on the Wednesday session.

The appropriation is to defray expenses of dismantling the building now located at Fort McPherson, removing and erecting it on the Candler field site that has been leased to the United States government without charge for 10 years by the city.

Request for the appropriation was formally made at the last session of the county commissioners by a group of Fulton citizens, including W. L. Plummer, captain in the air corps reserve; E. K. Davis, lieutenant in the reserve; Jesse Draper, president of the Aero Club of Atlanta, National Aeronautic Association chapter here; Horace Russell, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, and other leaders of civic and aviation organizations. At that time it was referred to the finance committee, where it was believed to have met with approval.

With a view to making Atlanta the center of training activities for the air corps reserve of the seven states in the fourth corps area, the war department several months ago designated Candler field as an army air corps reserve headquarters. Subsequently it was announced that plans were under way to transfer the corps area reserve airdrome from Maxwell field, at Montgomery, Ala., to Atlanta.

This step is contingent upon the proper hangar facilities being provided by local civil authorities, inasmuch as the army has no appropriation for assuming this expense. However, the army will provide all equipment, including the hangar structure that would be moved from Fort McPherson, planes, permanent personnel and maintenance expenses, it was pointed out in presentations to the county commissioners. Plans call for an appropriation of between $75,000 and $90,000 for these purposes to be made by the government at the outset of the undertaking.

Transfer of the reserve airdrome from Maxwell field to Candler field means establishment here of the permanent facilities for training of air corps reserve officers for the entire military area. A minimum of five government planes and a full staff of officers and enlisted men with a weekly pay roll in excess of $1,200 would be located in Atlanta. Three or four flight training camps would be held each year for active duty of the reserve, which numbers about 500 in this corps area.

It is planned to undertake all of this as soon as civil authorities have arranged for erection of the hangar at Candler field. Recently Lieutenant R. R. Brown, U. S. A., was transferred from Hawaii to fourth corps area headquarters at Fort McPherson to take charge of the air corps activity here.

It is indicated that transferring of the reserve airdrome to Atlanta would serve merely as an "entering wedge" for further extensions of army aviation developments in view of the fact that Atlanta is headquarters for the fourth corps area.

MRS. ELIZABETH HORTON.

health, with a twenty-six pound gain in weight," said Mrs. Elizabeth Horton, 435 Luckie St., N. W., Atlanta.

"It seemed like all the strength and energy I ever had were leaving me and I was so weak I could hardly stay on my feet. I was losing weight fast and my whole system was badly rundown. Just the sight of food would sicken me, and nearly every meal I ate caused misery. I suffered with heart palpitation, shortness of breath and nervousness. Constipation, biliousness, dizzy spells and violent sick headaches, added to my wretched condition.

"I began to feel the marvelous, invigorating effects of Sargon right from the first few doses and four bottles have made me feel like a new woman. My appetite and digestion are fine; I have worlds of strength and energy, and my nerves are under perfect control. I also took Sargon Soft Mass Pills and they stimulated my liver, overcame my constipation and now I'm not bothered with biliousness, dizzy spells or headaches.

"I've told a number of my friends about Sargon, and I'll be glad to tell anybody else who is interested about this wonderful new medicine."

The Sargon Man at Jacobs' Main Store, 48 North Broad St., Grant Bldg., is meeting the public daily and telling just what this revolutionary new medicine means to weak, sick, debilitated men and women. He cites actual facts, for Sargon's great reputation is based on actual results accomplished; not empty promises. Sargon may be obtained at all Jacobs' Drug Stores throughout Atlanta.—(adv.)

CORNS REMOVED FOR 10 CENTS

Corn, Callous, Roots and All Come Out—Pain Gone Instantly.

SHOES DON'T HURT RESULTS GUARANTEED

Many a man ond woman has exclaimed O-Joy when they found their corns and callouses gone—pain gone—and shoes hurting no more. Pay a dime for an envelope of six O-Joy Corn Wafers. Press a wafer, thin as paper, on the corn, slip on shoes, pain is gone. Later peel off wafer and out comes corn, callous, roots and all. Absolutely guaranteed. No bulky doughnut pads or burning acids. Just a wafer, thin as paper. Avoid higher priced substitutes. O-Joys are newest, best remedy yet. Six for dime at druggists.—(adv.)

CHEST AGENCY PLANS TO STUDY CHILD NEEDS

Neglected and Dependent Children Will Be Assured Definite Plan in Life.

Every neglected and dependent child in Atlanta will be assured a definite plan in life, rather than haphazard charity and mass shelter, according to announcement Saturday of an enlarged program of the Child's United Social Service.

This organization, which is the central association of all child welfare societies operating through the Community Chest, announced plans for sympathetic and expert study of the individual needs, problems, and mental equipment of every dependent child, as the first step toward a program of real reconstruction.

The new program was explained as involving closer contacts with the legal aspects of child welfare work, so necessary in effective placement, adoption and remedying the tragic results of broken families, abandonment, and neglect by overburdened or unworthy parents.

The program was announced by a new organization including H. H. Hamrick, associate counsel of the Legal Aid Society, as supervisor, and W. W. Woolfolk and Mrs. D. R. Paige as case workers.

Recognition by county authorities of the organization's importance in co-ordinating activities of child welfare societies, thus preventing waste in money and effort, has been reflected in permission for the service to establish quarters in the juvenile detention home, 161 Central avenue, southwest.

MONCRIEF RETURNS

Oakland City Pastor Will Be in Pulpit Today.

The Rev. Adiel Jarrett Moncrief, Jr., pastor of the Oakland City Baptist church, has returned to the city after a short absence and will fill his pulpit today.

Mr. Moncrief will preach this morning on the subject, "Jesus and St. Paul," the sermon to be a continuation of a series in Jesus' relationship with individuals.

The evening service will have as its theme, "Buried Treasure," and the church choir, under the direction of Mrs. Dora Brittain Hamilton, will offer a musical program.

H. L. Perryman Joins John A. Boykin's Staff

The investigating staff of Solicitor-General John A. Boykin Saturday was increased to five when H. L. Perryman, sworn in as a county policeman by Chief George Mathieson, began work under the solicitor-general.

Other members of the solicitor's staff of investigators are Marvin Baker, George Pounds, W. A. Riley and Joe Pelot. During the investigation of city graft conditions, three special investigators have been working on grand jury business, but services of these investigators were dispensed with Saturday when the March-April term jury was discharged. The county commission Wednesday ordered that no further extra expenditures be made by the county for the city investigation, the probe already having cost the county $7,500 for additional help when the commission had agreed to go only as far as $5,000.

Pioneer School Boys Will Assemble May 24

Annual gathering of the Pioneer School Boys of Atlanta has been set for May 24, it was announced Saturday by Piromis H. Bell, acting secretary.

A unique organization, the Pioneer School Boys of Atlanta was formed about 20 years ago. It is composed of men who as youths attended the various private schools in Atlanta before the public school system was inaugurated. Some of Atlanta's leading citizens are enrolled in the list of membership while many others who since have departed were members.

Dawes Delighted By Bagpipe Band

GLASGOW, Scotland, May 3.—(AP) Ambassador Charles G. Dawes revealed himself as an authority on bagpipe playing this afternoon when, in the presence of 20,000 spectators, he reviewed the Glasgow battalion of the boys' brigade in Queen's park.

The boys, who numbered nearly 10,000, gave a gymnastic display and marched past the American ambassador. Addressing them later, Mr. Dawes said there was a distinctive element in their movement which American boys did not have—a bagpipe band. "I was told," he said, "that I would hear hundreds of pipers and that perhaps they would not play the same tune at the same time. I have been watching for that but there wasn't a flaw in the playing. Yours is the best bagpipe band I ever heard."

RAILROAD MEN TO HEAR INTERNATIONAL LEADER

An address by International President D. B. Robertson and another by United States Senator Walter F.

D. B. ROBERTSON.

George, of Georgia, will feature the three-day program of the annual southeastern union meeting of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. Delegates from 11 states are expected to attend.

The convention officially will open at 7 o'clock Thursday night in the city auditorium when Mayor Ragsdale, for the city, and Governor Hardman, for the state, will deliver addresses of welcome. Registration of delegates, however, will begin at 9:30 o'clock Thursday morning at the Piedmont. At the close of President Robertson's address Thursday night there will be music and dancing until 1 o'clock.

Friday will begin with a business meeting at 9 o'clock and the day's activities will include a visit to Stone Mountain and other points of interest and addresses by the two international presidents and other grand lodge officers. Officers will be elected at the evening session and Charles W. Maier, grand lodge representative, will make an address. There will be another dance at the finish of this address.

Saturday's session will be devoted principally to business sessions, the ladies' society members holding their meetings in Taft Hall.

Burlesque Opera To Be Presented At Agnes Scott

"Ill Flows the Gore," burlesque opera, will be presented in the Agnes Scott gymnasium auditorium at 8:30 o'clock Saturday night.

For many years the senior class has presented a burlesque of some popular opera to capacity houses and this year the story follows, somewhat, "Il Trovatore," but the music consists of favorite tunes from many operas.

Among them are the Anvil Chorus, Overture from "William Tell," the Bridal Chorus, the Barcarole, Pilgrim's Chorus and many others less well known. Popular music will be included in the repertoire.

The cleverest dance is a tap dance by a chorus of horses. There also is a large chorus of handsome soldiers with a dashing captain. Other choruses are a group of gay gypsies, tambourines and all, some stately nuns and a headless group.

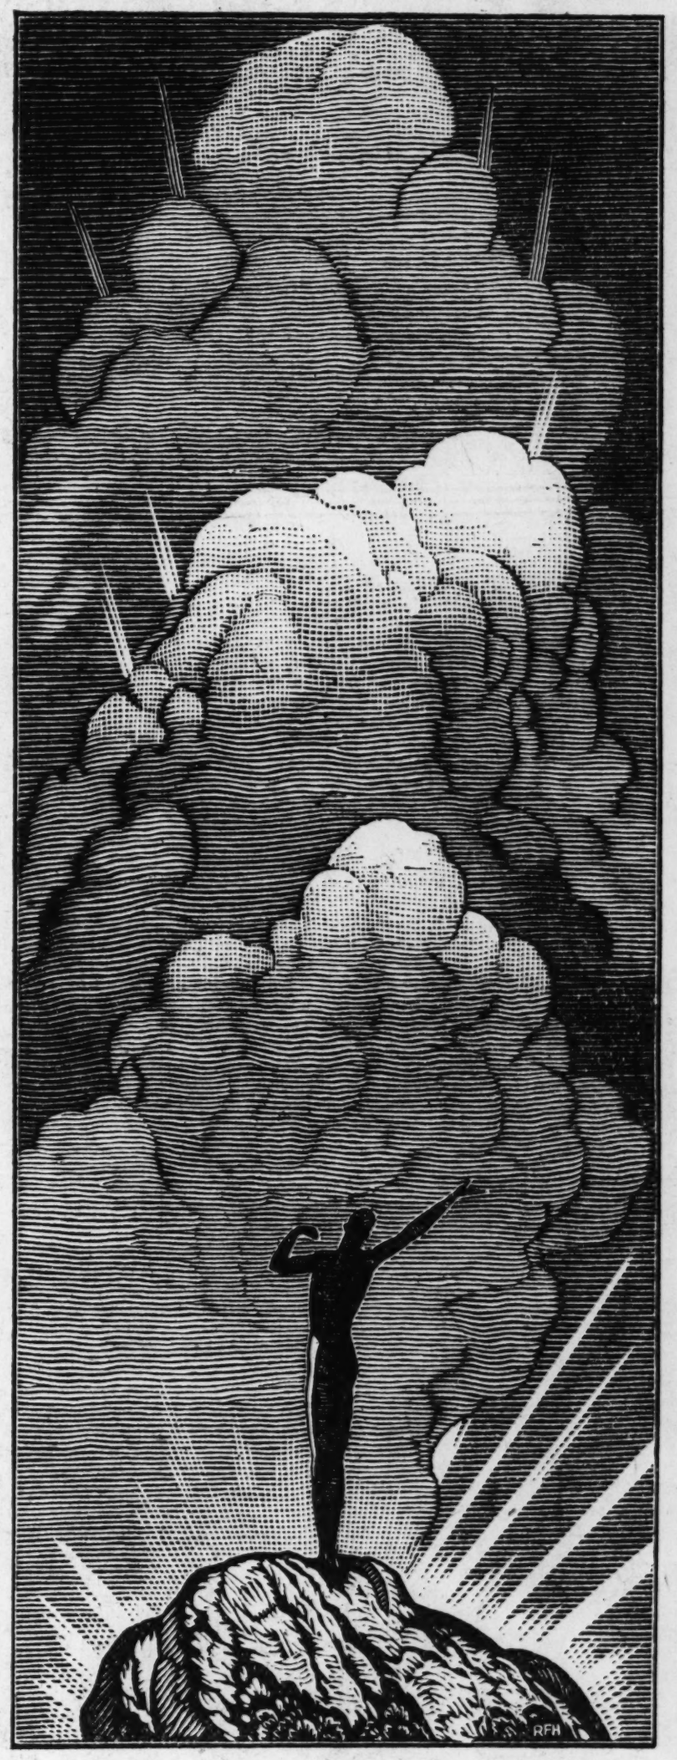

Perhaps as interesting as the performance are the brilliant, clever and charming ensembles that will be worn by those holding box seats. Those having leading roles in the production will be Miss Sara Townsend, president of the senior class; Miss Peggy Lou Armstrong, president of the Y. W. C. A.; Miss Pauline Willoughby, a member of the student government executive committee, and Miss Octavia Young, president of the Glee Club.

Wets and Drys Asked To Hear Broughton

"Wets" and "drys" alike are to be special guests at the night service at the Baptist Tabernacle today when Dr. Len G. Broughton, pastor, will speak on "This Prohibition Insanity." Dr. Broughton Saturday issued a general invitation to members of organizations working for repeal or modification of present liquor laws as well as to those of the Anti-Saloon League and W. C. T. U.

Dr. Broughton declined to go into the subject matter of his sermon other than to assert that he believed he "knew the secret of this all-at-once agitation of the liquor situation" and that he intended to let that out "and some more things, too."

HOLLAND HEATING MAKES WARM FRIENDS

AMERICA WAKES UP...

. . . Lazy days and drowsy nights are banished forever by the modern Vaporaire heating and air conditioning system . . .

AMERICA has awakened—banished the smothering blanket of dry heat that has made winter a season of discomfort and ill-health. Overwhelming acceptance of the modern Holland air-conditioning system for winter heating and summer cooling has brought a new standard of living to the modern home.

Gone are the dull days and listless evenings when stagnant, stifling, dry air made us a nation of drowsy families—worn and weary long before bedtime. No longer does anyone need to pay the penalty of old-fashioned heating methods—live in a dry kiln—breathe suffocating air—fight one cold after another.

Holland engineers have developed a simple, compact, electrically controlled heating, cooling and air-conditioning system that blends warmth, moisture and circulation into a refreshing, stimulating indoor atmosphere. In winter a balmy, moist current of warmth circulates through every room and keeps the temperature constant. The air changes completely every few minutes. Healthful comfort is everywhere all the time. In summer a power-drive circulator sends a zestful, cooling breeze through the whole house—making hot, sultry days and arid nights comfortable.

Holland Vaporaire brings year around comfort to any size home. It is modern in principle—durable in construction—incomparable in performance. Any fuel may be used including gas or oil.

Every Holland Vaporaire System is specially planned for the home it serves. Installation is made under factory supervision. You have the benefits of a great national engineering service that assumes all responsibility and positively guarantees satisfaction.

Here is the most vital investment you can make—one that completely energizes and stimulates family life. Why tolerate an obsolete inefficient heating system that wastes money, time and fuel—endangers health—destroys comfort? Prices are unusually reasonable—terms extremely liberal. Get the facts. Telephone our local branch. Have a Holland man call. No obligation.

About 700 leading hardware men of the southeast, including many manufacturers and jobbers from all parts of the country, will convene in Atlanta May 13 to 15 for the annual convention and exhibit of the Southeastern Retail Hardware and Implement Association.

The convention sessions will open Tuesday, May 13, in Taft hall, of the city auditorium. The stage and the entire main auditorium will be filled with an exhibition of all the newest items in hardware and implements, the third largest of its kind held anywhere in the United States.

This will be the fifteenth annual convention of the southeastern association former January 1, 1916, through consolidation of the state organizations of Alabama, Florida, Georgia and Tennessee, under the management of Walter Harlan as secretary-treasurer, who has served continuously in that capacity. Eight of these conventions have been held in Atlanta.

R. W. Hatcher, of Milledgeville, Ga., was the first president of the southeastern association, in 1916, and was president of the National Retail Hardware Association in 1925-1926; J. R. Gamble, of Wetumpka, Ala., who succeeded Mr. Hatcher as southeastern president, likewise was president of the national organization in 1918-1919.

Mercer Lee, branch manager for the International Harvester Company, will have charge of the registration desk this year. Mr. Lee has had charge of registrations at every convention held by the association for the past 15 years and is known by almost every hardware man in the southern states.

Several entertainment features have been planned for the convention, including a theater party at the Fox theater Tuesday night, May 13; a jubilee carnival and dance at the Henry Grady hotel on Wednesday night. For the ladies, there will be a luncheon at the Piedmont hotel Tuesday noon and a sightseeing trip around the city Wednesday.

The Atlanta Retail Hardware Club will be hosts to the convention. Walter Simmons heads the entertainment committee.

Special railroad rates have been granted from all points in the four states. Headquarters of the Georgia association will be at the Piedmont hotel; Florida, the Winecoff; Alabama and Tennessee, the Ansley.

Lakewood Park Launches Active Summer Season

A program that presages a season of great activity at Lakewood park has been announced by General Manager Oscar Mills, with exceptional activities noted for the present month and during the first week of July.

Starting with the Fulton county health pageant Friday, May 9, there will be six other events scheduled, in addition to the regular weekly program of dancing, which includes Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday night dances by Rudy Mincey and his Lakewood orchestra and the weekly Wednesday night "square dances" by the Dixie String band.

The first of a series of picnics and field days will get under way Friday, May 16, when the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer Sunday school will have its third annual affair at Lakewood in form of a field day for three departments of the Sunday school. May 21 the annual police barbecue will take place and on June 7 the lawyers will have their annual barbecue. More than 20 big barbecues were held at Lakewood last year.

The automotive phase will be particularly featured with a "Ford congress" on May 17, a stock car endurance driven on May 31 and the eight annual Lakewood auto races on July 4.

In addition, plans are under way for the holding of amateur boxing contests, amateur swims, bicycle races, several big field days and possibly a major heavyweight boxing contest at the park during the summer season. The outboard motorboats already have started practice at the lake in preparation for the second annual races to be held on July 5.

Hog, Poultry Sales Scheduled for Week

Two co-operative hog sales, at Kite Tuesday and at Ashburn Thursday, and approximately 30 co-operative poultry sales are scheduled for the present week by the bureau of markets of the state department of agriculture.

Monday—Commerce, Nashville, Perry, Fort Valley, Roberta.

Tuesday—Maysville, Franklin, N. C., Hawkinsville, Adel, Reynolds, Butler, Culloden.

Wednesday—Gainesville, Otto, Dillard, Cochran, Macon, Ashburn, Chipley, Davisboro, Zebulon.

Thursday—Monroe, Clayton, Jackson, Pinehurst, Greenville, Tennille.

Friday—Wellston, Clarkesville.

Poultry tonnage purchased the past week was very light, according to incomplete reports to the bureau of markets. Four carloads of hogs were sold at community sales, the price ranging from $8.75 per hundredweight to $9, which was from one cent to a cent and a half lower than during the same week a year ago.

Shriners Will Hold Ceremonial May 22

Noble William A. Fuller, illustrious potentate of Yaarab temple, announces that a ceremonial session will be held in the Shrine mosque on Thursday, May 22. As this will be the first ceremonial held in the new mosque since every appointment of the structure has been completed, plans are being made for an elaborate event.

The first section of the ceremonial will start in the main auditorium at 5 p. m. and will be immediately followed by the third section, at the close of which Yaarab's band will give a concert. A buffet supper will be served in the banquet hall at 7 o'clock and at 8 o'clock the chanters will give a concert in the auditorium, to be immediately followed by the second section of the ceremonial. Dancing will begin in the ball room at 10 p. m. and continue until 1 a. m.

Application for membership at this ceremonial must be in the possession of Recorder Argard on May 12, accompanied by a check for $117. The business meeting for election of candidates will be held at the mosque on May 20 at 5 p. m.

State Peach Growers Meet Here Thursday

More than 200 Georgia peach growers, as well as buyers and distributors of the famed Georgia product in New York, Chicago and other points, are expected to attend a conference called by Eugene Talmadge, state commissioner of agriculture, at the state capitol Thursday morning at 11 o'clock.

A resolution requesting the federal government to investigate and seek to find the cause of "winter kill" of peach trees will be offered and adopted, it is expected. Rules governing the grading and marketing of peaches will be recommended to the commissioner of agriculture by the growers and distributors. A report regarding the progress made in control of phoney peach disease will be made by Manuel Yeomans, state entomologist.

An effort will be made to secure peach containers, so constructed that the fruit will not be damaged, as it has been in the past.

State T. P. A Members Will Meet in Augusta

Members of the Travelers' Protective Association in Georgia will hold their annual state convention in Augusta Thursday and Friday, it was announced Saturday by Ab L. Smith, president of the Atlanta chapter of the organization.

Fifty official delegates have been allotted the local chapter, which has a membership of 2,000, Mr. Smith stated. Arrangements are being made for a large group to attend the two-day session from Atlanta. C. C. Harrison is secretary of the local group.

R.E. Johnson Assumes B.Y.P.U. Duties Here

R. Elton Johnson, of Louisville, Ky., former state B. Y. P. U. secretary of Alabama, arrived in Georgia Sunday to assume his duties as field worker in the state Baptist Young Peoples' Union work for the summer months.

Johnson will speak at several B. Y. P. U. gatherings here today and will be present at various associational meetings, rallies and conventions in Georgia throughout the summer.

Mrs. Johnson, the former Elizabeth Jackson, of Brazil, is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Jackson, missionaries to Brazil, who lost their lives in the sinking of the steamer Vestris.

"WHERE GOOD FURNITURE IS NOT EXPENSIVE"

Ozone Parade Opens New York Air Show

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Wings over Manhattan beat a paean of praise to American aviation today, opening the New York Air Salon in Madison Square Garden.

Flying in long columns which crossed and recrossed each other over the island of Manhattan, 80 planes, ranging from a giant four-motored, 32-passenger ship to little two-seated training planes, maneuvered over the city at noon.

It wasn't the army, it wasn't the navy. It was commercial aviation. The planes in which the future air transport pilots are trained—the sport ships, the big transport elephants of the air that put on the show.

Down below them in the Garden were $2,000,000 worth of the newest things in flying, many of them identical ships with those maneuvered through the clear sky above the city.

Right along with the air argosy flew a flying broadcasting station, the experimental radio telephone plane of the Bell laboratories transformed for the nonce into an aerial studio.

Broadcast Hook-Up.

The broadcast was carried over the chains of both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia system, probably the first time on record that McNamee's voice was ever heard on the Columbia chain. For Husing, star of the Columbia announcing staff, it was nothing new to be on NBC again as that was where he got his start.

In a special booth in Madison Square Garden, carrying on a two-way telephone conversation over the Western Electric apparatus were Captain Frank Hawks, who held the transcontinental speed record until Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh made his Easter flight; Casey Jones, commander-in-chief of the Curtiss Flying Service air fleet which put on the show up above; Ruth Elder, and officials of the air show and aviation companies.

Roaring along at a 100-mile-an-hour clip, 5,000 feet over the city, the occupants of the radio plane talked, perhaps not as casually, for it was a day and a show to stir the blood, but as easily as they would from a corner telephone booth to their friends and colleagues in the Garden.

Mrs. McNamee, in their Broadway penthouse apartment, heard her husband in the plane saying that he was now circling his own home and could see someone on the promenade outside his front door waving.

Rickenbacker Saddened.

Captain Rickenbacker, who saw many of his command fall before the blazing guns of Fokkers, marked with black and white crosses, during the war, was saddened as he thought of what might have been.

"How many of those chaps I might have saved," he said, "if I'd only had something like that telephone to say to them, 'Look out,' 'He's diving on you' or 'Zoom, he's on your tail,' or 'Get under the convoy, it's getting hot.'"

But that was 13 years ago. They didn't even wear parachutes during the war. Aviation has come a long way since then.

In his talk over the air Captain Rickenbacker said he believed that the development to its present place of two-way telephone communication had increased the safety of flying 100 per cent.

"We need no longer depend on the pilot's best judgment," he said. "We can help him from the land."

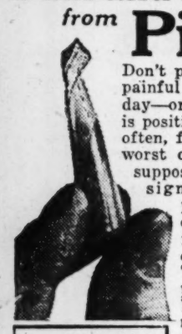

The New York air show, which will continue through next Saturday, was formally opened at 6 o'clock tonight.

PRIVATE SHOALS LEASE TO GET VOTE MONDAY

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—The house military committee will meet Monday to take a final vote on the Reece plan to lease Muscle Shoals to private interests.

Having concluded the reading of the measure for amendment today, the committee indicated the vote Monday would be a mere formality. Although there is some opposition to the plan which has been substituted for the Norris resolution for government operation, which was adopted by the senate, advocates of the Reece proposal were confident they had sufficient strength to place it before the house intact.

Representative Reece, republican, Tennessee, head of the subcommittee which drafted the plan, said the house republican leaders had promised it legislative right-of-way. He said the measure probably would come up for action within a fortnight. A special rule for its consideration is to be provided, he added.

More than two weeks ago the committee discarded the Norris resolution, along with other proposals for the disposal of the $160,000,000 project, and instructed the subcommittee to draft a bill along the lines suggested by President Hoover in his annual message to congress.

The Reece proposal would authorize the president to appoint a board of three eminent citizens to negotiate a lease for the project which would require the lessee to construct Cove creek dam in Tennessee at a cost of about $37,000,000. It also outlines a policy on fertilizer production and distribution of power to nearby states and contains a recapture clause to permit the taking over of the project during war time or in event the lessee fails to fulfill the obligations of the contract.

200 Japanese Feared Drowned by Typhoon

TOKYO, May 3.—(AP)—Nearly 200 Japanese fishermen were believed today to have perished in a sudden typhoon which blasted their big fleet last night between the islands of Saghalien and Hokkaido.

Dispatches to the Rengo News Agency stated that 94 bodies were recovered, but more than 100 men were missing. Five hundred fishing boats were wrecked, and damage was estimated at $2,500,000.

Lured by herring schools within the bay, 10,000 fishermen aboard 2,000 boats put to sea from Odomari, a fishing town of southern Saghalien. A majority of the male population of the town was aboard the boats.

Without warning, the typhoon struck with terrific violence. Some boats went down quickly, others were swamped as they ran for the harbor, while still others were smashed upon the rocky shores of Odomari bay. One-fourth of the boats were lost.

The typhoon came at the peak of a prosperous fishing season. Along the beaches, a rich catch was drying. This was swept away.

At the height of the storm, landslides fell from the bluffs upon the city, destroying numerous homes of those who had lost fathers or sons.

Alabama Banker Held for Failure

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3.—(AP) L. H. Boykin, former president of the Eufaula Bank and Trust Company of Eufaula, Ala., was under arrest here today on 15 charges growing out of the recent failure of the Eufaula bank.

Capiases on 15 indictments returned recently by a Barbour county grand jury were served on the banker at a local hospital late yesterday by Jefferson county deputies.

Boykin was allowed to make bond of $7,500 pending arraignment on the charges May 6 in Eufaula.

Indictments returned against Boykin included seven charges of forgery, five of embezzlement, one of false entry, one of wrongfully appropriating bank funds and one of assault with intent to murder.

JOHN WILSON IN RACE FOR STATE SECRETARY

Private Secretary to Governor Stresses Efficiency in His Announcement.

John Wilson, private secretary to both Governor Walker and Governor Hardman, and prior to that a member of the legislature, Saturday released the platform on which he will make the race for secretary of state. He let it be known definitely about a week ago that he would be a candidate.

Mr. Wilson is a native of Gwinnett county, having been born on a farm near Loganville. He attended the schools of that county and graduated from the University of Georgia in the class of 1922. He practiced law at

JOHN WILSON.

Monroe for three and a half years and was a member of the house of representatives for the term of 1922-24.

His announcement follows:

"I am a candidate for secretary of state subject to the rules of the democratic primary to be held September 10, 1930.

"Since my service in the legislature, for four consecutive terms I have been continuously engaged as private secretary to the governor of Georgia. During this service in the executive department, which is the center of activities in the state government, I have become thoroughly acquainted with the conduct of the state's business. This service has given me a splendid working knowledge and insight of the office of secretary of state, making it possible, in the event of my election, to assume charge without having to learn the routine from the ground up.

"The secretary of state is purely an administrative and ministerial officer. There are no issues upon which to make a campaign for this office by reason of the fact that his duties are defined by the constitution and statutory laws of the state, and it becomes his function to execute those laws as laid down by the general assembly. The measure of fitness, therefore, rests upon honesty and integrity, training and experience that will enable him to perform the duties of this office as prescribed by law. I believe that I possess those qualifications, and with them sufficient experience in the executive and administrative affairs of the state to enable me to fill the office to the satisfaction of the people.

"Fundamentally, I believe the state's business should be conducted in the most efficient and economic manner possible. If elected, I will so conduct the office of secretary of state and at all times will reduce the expense of operation to the lowest figure possible.

"Our government should be simplified and co-ordinated wherever possible, to avoid overlapping and duplication and bring about the reduction of expenses. I pledge my full co-operation to the general assembly in whatever methods it deems advisable along this line.

"Under modern complex conditions in private life and governmental activities the spirit of co-operation should exist to the maximum point between the governor and all state departments for the welfare of the state. I have always performed my official duties in this spirit and worked harmoniously with heads of departments. I will continue to observe this rule if elected secretary of state.

"Based upon the principles outlined, my public service, and a conscientious conviction that I possess the qualifications and ability to perform the duties of the office of secretary of state, I solicit the support and votes of the electorate of Georgia and pledge to them an economic, straightforward and satisfactory service in keeping with that honor and faithfulness with which the secretary of state should surround himself and in accord with which he should direct his every official act."

LINDBERGH RETURNS TO NEW YORK FIELD

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., May 3.—(AP)—In sunny mood Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh came home today after flying the blue waters of the Caribbean on the inaugural flight of the new seven-day air mail linking North and South America.

Today's hop was a non-stop jump from Miami, Fla., at an average of about 135 miles an hour. "Just leisurely flying," he said. "I'd turned over the mail in Miami to another plane so there was nothing to hurry about." His plane was the specially built racer in which he recently set a new transcontinental record.

Landing some distance from a crowd gathered to see him come in, the colonel taxied directly into a hangar, the doors of which were then closed. He chatted with reporters for a few minutes before going to New York, joking about a report that he had been killed while in Panama and asking if any stories had been printed that he was about to make another trans-Atlantic flight.

He said he had no immediate plans to announce and did not say where he was going after reaching New York, but it was taken for granted that he would go directly to Englewood, N. J., to rejoin his wife at the home of her parents, Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow. Mrs. Lindbergh did not accompany her husband on this flight, one of the first of any extent since their marriage in which she has not participated.

Colonel Lindbergh made the hop from Miami, approximately 1,200 miles, in eight hours and 57 minutes.

Gold Star Mothers Begin Pilgrimage to France Today

:: 232 WILL MAKE UP FIRST CONTINGENT ::

BY SUE McNAMARA,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Two hundred and thirty-two women, many of whose horizons have been limited to rows of corn or cactus and sage brush glimpsed from their kitchen windows, are tomorrow starting on a 5,000-mile journey by rail and steamer.

They are the first contingent of the 6,000 gold star widows and mothers who will be taken this spring and summer as one of the most unique journeys of sentiment ever undertaken by any government. They are to visit the graves of their sons and husbands in the war cemeteries in France.

The first woman to start on the pilgrimage was Mrs. Helen Simkin, of Salem, Iowa. Mrs. Simkin is 65. Because no Sunday trains run out of Salem she was scheduled to leave her home this morning. Mrs. Simkin has been supplied by the war department with a complete itinerary showing where she will take a bus, where a train and what time she will leave each place. Every step of her trip has been carefully mapped out for her by Captain R. E. Shannon, who, acting for the quartermaster general of the army, has charge of all transportation for the gold star pilgrimage.

Ten women who will sail with the first contingent on Wednesday will arrive in Washington Monday morning on their way to New York. They constitute the first group from the west and south. They are Mrs. Susie Shelton, Fayetteville, Ark.; Mrs. Emma Taylor, Hunter, Ark.; Mrs. Minnie Throckmorton, Red Cloud, Neb.; Mrs. Nola Durham, Chester, Neb.; Mrs. Minnie Canon, Peru, Neb.; Mrs. Lillian Garrison, Union, Ky.; Mrs. Minnie Baker, Williamstown, Ky.; Mrs. Theresa Phillips, Chretien, Okla.; Mrs. Adelia Werner, Perry, Okla., and Mrs. Simkin, of Salem, Iowa.

A delegation of 15 Ohio women will pass through here Tuesday. The war department has made no plans for a stopover here, but General Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the army, will go to New York to see the entire delegation of 232 women sail down the bay Wednesday. They will leave at 11 a. m. on the United States Lines steamship America. A reception at the city hall and an evening entertainment has been arranged for Tuesday.

The pilgrimages, which will sail from New York each week throughout the summer, have been arranged with military precision and thoroughness. The women are relieved of all responsibility and expense. No matter how remote from civilization she may live, each woman has her ticket delivered to her door by agents employed by the government.

Word of Mrs. Simkin's journey from Salem, Iowa, to that far-away grave of her son, Frank L. Simkin, in Suresnes cemetery in France, has been sent to every division point agent, every conductor and brakeman along her route of travel. Thus it is with every woman making the trip.

The little black and gold identification folder carried by each mother and widow, the blue and gold badge pinned to her dress, will obtain for her such courtesy and service as probably no group of women traveling together has ever had.

Knoxville Census Shows Over 100,000

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 3.—(AP) Final census figures released here today show that Knoxville has a population of 104,898, an increase of 27,080 or 25.8 per cent over the 1920 population of 77,818.

Youngstown Steel Punishes Anti-Merger Group

TO STOP DIVIDEND AND VOTE RIGHTS OF EATON SHARES

Iron-Handed Action Seen As Attempt To Force Opponents To Withdraw Court Actions.

MEASURES SAID UNPRECEDENTED

Bethlehem Offers $110 for Stock Listed at $125; Eaton Believed Ready for Battle.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 3.—(AP) The fight over the pending billion-dollar merger of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Company with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation tonight was in one of the worst legal tangles in the history of American big business.

The latest development was the announcement today by Sheet & Tube officials that stockholders who demanded cash refunds for their stock in preference to accepting shares in Bethlehem will receive no more dividends and will be prohibited from further voting.

If this decision can be enforced about 330,000 shares of Sheet & Tube stock will be affected, including the large holdings of Cyrus S. Eaton and his affiliates who are leading the attack to block the merger.

Today's announcement followed closely a decision of the company's directors to suspend the same group of stock from transfer on books of the company and a request that the New York Stock Exchange suspend the "dissenting" stock from trading. The stock exchange has not acted upon the request, however.

Offer $110 for $125.

Another meeting of Sheet & Tube directors will be at Youngstown Monday. At the time the pro-merger directors, constituting a majority, plan to execute today's announcements and to issue certificates in exchange for dissenting stock. They previously decided to offer $110 a share to stockholders who have demanded cash.

The prevailing stock market quotation on Sheet & Tube is approximately $125. Prices were as high as $160 a share for large blocks bought several weeks ago to be voted on the the merger.

Some financial observers in Youngstown today predicted an additional move for Monday's meeting of directors, an attempt to oust Eaton and his associates from the board, by eliminating them as voters.

Whether the pro-merger forces can succeed in suspending the dissenting stock from voting, from receiving dividends, from transfer rights and from trading, is a question that probably will evolve into new litigation. And even if the directors succeeded in such suspension of rights, the possibility of a plan to remove Eaton and his associates from the board, would be an additional doubtful point, for they were elected recently under the Ohio cumulative voting law, designed to insure minority representation on boards of directors of all corporations.

Eaton in Finish Fight.

Another important question pointed out by the observers today was the possibility that owners of dissenting stock might not wish to continue a long legal battle against the merger if their millions of dollars of Sheet & Tube investment are tied up without dividends or other usual stock privileges, and with their stock's collateral value hampered by the situation.

Eaton was not in his office today and could not be reached for a statement but thus far has given no indication of desire to withdraw. His last quoted attitude was that he would fight the merger "to the finish."

Although a stockholders' election recently approved the merger, it has not been consummated, and the proponents have only until September 1 to accomplish the merger before it would be outlawed by the time limitations of the contract. In the event of delay until after that date, presumably any possible merger would be a new deal, requiring a new vote of stockholders.

Ask U. S. Investigation.

Several court fights already are in progress, delaying the program, and one stockholder has applied for investigation by the federal trade commission and by the United States district attorney.

Depositions taken today in an injunction suit filed by Myron A. Wick, Jr., and International Shares Corporation, showed that Pickands, Mather & Company of Cleveland, who bought 89,000,000 worth of Sheet & Tube stock and voted it for the merger, did more than $17,000,000 worth of ore and freight business last year with Bethlehem, with a compensation of $210,884.

The appeal to the federal trade commission and to the United States district attorney alleged that directors of the United States Steel Corporation interlocked with several directors of Bethlehem in two New York banking companies which are prominent in the merger negotiations, and that the combine of Sheet & Tube with Bethlehem would be a violation of the Clayton anti-trust laws.

The two next moves foreseen in the battle are the directors' meeting Monday and the resumption at the same time of the taking of depositions in the injunction suit.

Anti-Rose Faction Scorns Peace Move

Waycross Attorney's Brief in Support of Arnold Says Collector Double-Crossed Davis.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Declining to compromise their claims for recognition at the hands of the administration, leaders of the anti-Rose faction of the republican organization of Georgia were revealed today to have rejected a proposal by Postmaster-General Walter F. Brown for calling another state convention to iron out differences which developed between the two conflicting groups at the riotous conclave held in Atlanta two weeks ago.

The postmaster-general, who, with Secretary Walter Newton, constitutes the president's unofficial committee on southern patronage affairs, had suggested that the recent state convention be reassembled for the purpose of putting through the program which previously had been outlined by the administration. Under this program, Collector of Internal Revenue Josiah T. Rose, of Atlanta, heretofore recognized as the final patronage authority in the state, was to be elected chairman of the new state committee and as such head of the Georgia republican organization.

Rejection of the proposal was decided upon after a conference held in Atlanta this week by leaders identified with the faction which claims to have overthrown Mr. Rose at the April 19 convention and elected in his place J. W. Arnold, attorney of Athens. The action of the group, including Collector of Customs M. O. Dunning, of Savannah; J. W. Hendricks, of Edison; Mr. Arnold, Ben Davis, of Atlanta, former negro national committeeman, and a few others, is taken to mean that no compromise will be accepted on the issue raised as to which side controlled the convention, but that demands will be made upon the administration for the full recognition of Mr. Arnold.

More Exhibits Coming.

Representations to this effect have, in fact, already been made to the president's committee here and others are scheduled to be presented next week.

Whether Collector Rose agreed to the proposal for calling another state convention is not known, but it is assumed that he did. He was in Washington for several days the week after the convention and conferred frequently with Postmaster General Brown, Collector of Customs Dunning, regarded as the leader of the anti-Rose group, preceded him to Washington and also laid his side of the controversy before administration officials.

In the meantime Harry M. Wilson, attorney of Waycross, has arrived in Washington as the legal representative of the new state committee set up during the convention by the Dunning-Arnold group and is preparing to lay before Messrs. Brown and Newton next week briefs, affidavits and documents supporting their claims that a substantial majority of the convention delegates supported the election of Mr. Arnold as state chairman. The documents, containing a record of the convention proceedings, contend that Mr. Rose was elected by a rump convention, composed of only a smattering of delegates, constituting less than one-third of the convention.

Collector Dunning himself is expected to return to the capital by the first of the week. It would not be surprising also to see Collector Rose back on the scene.

According to the briefs prepared by Mr. Wilson, 80 per cent of the delegates to the convention were opposed to the election of Collector Rose as chairman, "but," the document reads, "through the influence of the white leaders we succeeded in getting the delegates to agree to vote for him as permanent chairman."

Continuing, the brief says:

Wilson Brief.

"It has been reported that Ben Davis, negro republican leader of Georgia, did not keep his promise to support Mr. Rose. This is an injustice to him. He did everything possible and was carrying out the slate 100 per cent when Mr. Rose tried to double-cross him and his other republican friends, and then it was that J. W. Arnold was elected permanent chairman."

Pointing out that Mr. Rose was later placed on the Arnold group's state committee, the brief adds:

"We have no objection to Mr. Rose serving on that committee, but we do not intend, after the actions of Mr. Rose, to leave the administration of the republican party in Georgia to him alone."

Mr. Wilson explained that he referred to the preliminary move by United States District Attorney Clint W. Hager, of Atlanta, substituting the name of Gilmer Dozier, a Rose adherent, for that of J. W. Arnold, who had been the organization candidate for temporary chairman. It was this motion, placing Mr. Dozier in the chair without a roll call, that precipitated riotous scenes resulting in the convention splitting up between Rose and anti-Rose delegate.

At another point in his brief, the Waycross lawyer, who is also a member of the new Arnold state committee, charged that the convention hall was packed with persons having no credentials by Roscoe Pickett, of Jasper, presiding officer, who declared Dozier elected without a roll call.

"The regular delegates on the morning of April 19," reads the brief, "were admitted to the convention hall

TRIAL OF WOMAN TO OPEN TUESDAY

Mrs. Peggy French Charged With Murder in Slaying of John Garmon

The rotund but always accommodating J. Gordon Hardy, chief of the sheriff's deputies, faces a busy week of accommodating — accommodating that vast throng of curious who always want first-row seats in a murder trial that promises to be sensational.

Hardy's domain this week will be the courtroom of Superior Judge Virlyn B. Moore, where on Tuesday Peggy French, 35-year-old titian-haired wife of a traveling salesman, goes on trial for the early morning, February 11, killing of married John S. Garmon, a railway dispatcher who worked nights.

Murder in the first degree is the charge Assistant Solicitor-General John H. Hudson is prepared to prosecute, announcing that he is prepared to prove that Mrs. French lured Garmon to her Ninth street home with the express purpose of sounding his doom with a recently acquired pistol and having informed mutual friends that they "had seen the last of John."

The defense, to be conducted by James A. Branch and William Schley Howard, plans a plea of self-defense and will depend on Mrs. French's story, already told, that she shot and killed Garmon when he came to her home at 4 o'clock in the morning and threatened her.

Letters Involved.

In the police investigation of the case and at an inquest conducted by Coroner Paul Donohoo it was brought out that letters between the two were involved in the early morning meeting. These letters, salacious to say the least, are in the hands of Prosecutor Hudson and are to be submitted to the jury along with the other evidence.

The possibility that a postponement might be made necessary appeared Saturday when it was learned that J. M. Colley, lieutenant of the Southern railway system's police, wanted by both state and defense as a witness in the case, is out of the city and not due to return for several days. Colley accompanied Garmon to Ninth street on the morning he was killed, but remained a short distance from the French home while Garmon entered it.

"No children or boys and girls of high school age will be admitted," Deputy Sheriff Hardy said Saturday, discussing his plans for handling the crowds expected at the trial. "From what I can learn the testimony won't be fit for young folks' ears."

Both Sides Confident.

Both Hudson and Branch Saturday were confident of a speedy victory.

"The state is prepared to prove that Mrs. French plotted Garmon's death because she was jealous of his attentions to another woman," Mr. Hudson said. "We have enough evidence, personal and documentary, to prove it was nothing but cold-blooded murder."

"Self-defense will be our plea," Mr. Branch said. "And we will have the testimony to support it."

Garmon was married, but separated from his wife and their 17-year-old daughter at the time he met his death.

Camera Records Objects Distant Over 270 Miles

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—The successful photographing of an object 270 miles distant from the camera's eye, and far beyond the range of human vision, was announced today by the war department.

The picture was one of Mount Ranier, and constitutes a new record in long distance aerial photography. It was taken by Captain A. W. Stevens, of the army air corps, while in flight 20,000 feet above Crater Lake, Ore.

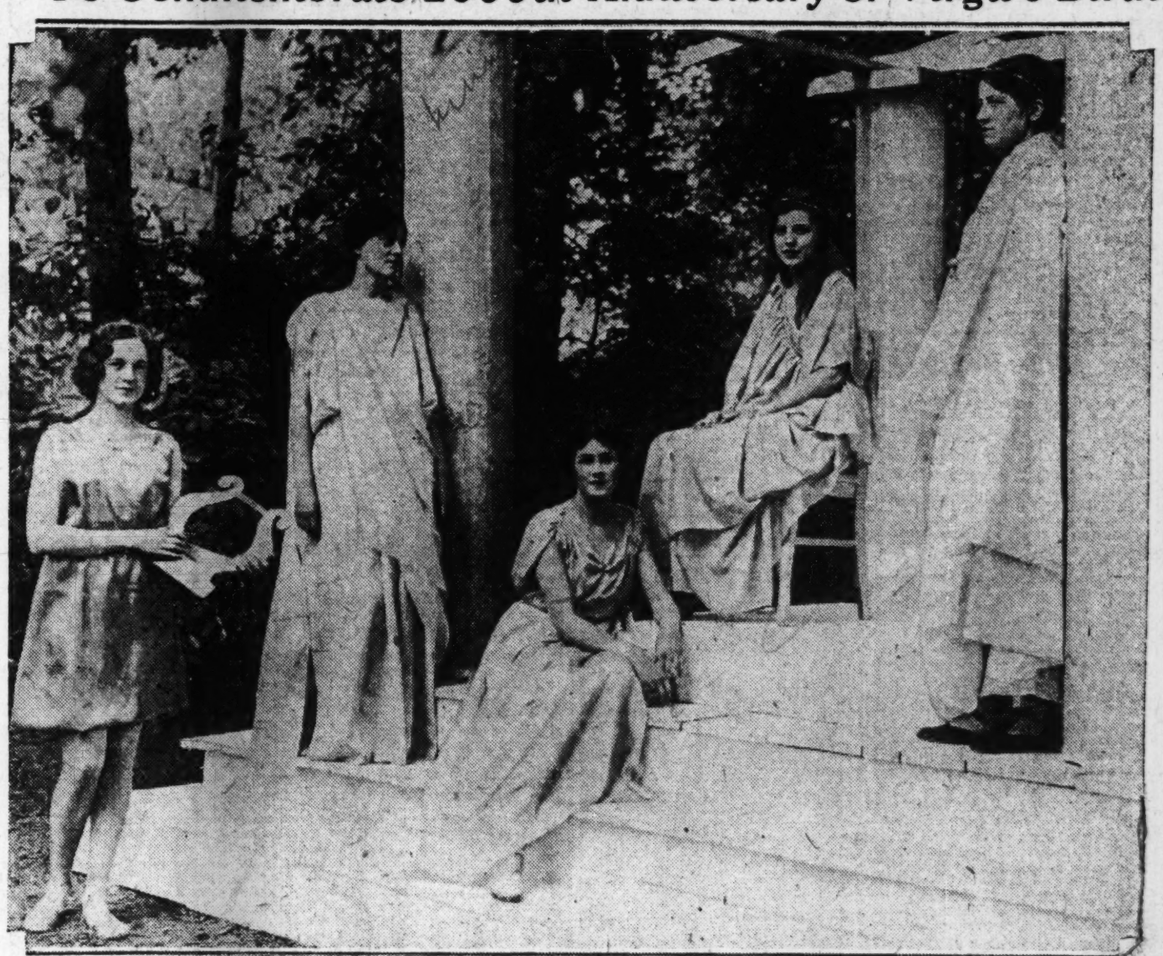

"Shooting at Mt. Ranier from a distance greater than that between New York city and Washington," Captain Stevens said, in describing the taking of the picture, "is much like shooting at the moon, with the difference that you can see the moon.

"The principal task is to aim the camera in the general direction you believe your objective to be, snap the trigger and hope for luck."

Stevens said he believed a camera would soon be developed that would record even greater distances. Before it can be used, however, he added, a photographic plane capable of going higher than 20,000 feet will have to be developed, because even at that height an object as tall as Mt. Ranier's 14,000 feet sinks below the horizon at 300 miles. The previous long-distance photographic record was 227 miles.

The picture was described as markably clear. It shows Crater lake and Diamond peak in the foreground; the Three Sisters, 125 miles away; Mt. Jefferson, 175 miles away; Mt. Dod, 200 miles away, and finally Mt. Ranier.

Agnes Scott College Will Present Elaborate Pageant To Commemorate 2000th Anniversary of Virgil's Birth

Annual May Day exercises will be held at Agnes Scott College beginning at 4 o'clock on the afternoon of May 10 when the pageant, "Virgil, the Immortal Bard," written by Miss Lillian Thomas, Atlanta member of the senior class, will be presented. The college pageant is a part of the celebration of the 2,000th anniversary of Virgil's birth and it will be featured with Greek choruses, classic costumes and graceful dances.

Woven into the pageant Miss Thomas has written is the story of Apollo's gift of the lyre, symbol of poetic fame, and the laurel branch, symbol of immortal fame, to Rome through the works of her poet, Virgil. Before the shrine of Venus Virgil presents his works: the Tenth Eclogue in which the soldier poet Gallus pines for his lost love; the second (Georgic) which deals with the farmer's happy life in Italy and the Aeneid with its conflict and grief and the heralding of peace through forgiveness under the reign of Augustus.

The character of Venus, which will be portrayed by Miss Helen Hendricks, of Athens, Ala., will take the place of the usual May Queen and the court will be composed of the nine Muses represented by Misses Cecile Mayer, Mary Boyd, Nell Starr, Sara Lane Smith, Julia Rowan, Mildred Duncan, Marguerite Gerard, Shannon Preston and Virginia Sears. Miss Lynn Moore, of Morristown, Tenn., will take the part of Virgil. Others taking outstanding parts will be Misses Raemond Wilson, as Eros; Miss Dorothy Dudley, Apollo; Alice Garretson, Greece; Martha Stigall, Rome; Chapin Hudson, Pan; Kathleen Bowen, Gallus, and Mary Cope, Peaces.

Miss Llewellyn Wilburn, head of the department of physical education, is directing the pageant. Miss Catherine Torrance, professor of Latin and Greek, is chairman of the faculty committee and Miss Virginia Sears heads the student May Day committee composed of Misses Harriett Williams, Helen Hendricks, Mary Jane Goodrich, Ione Gueth, Carolyn Heyman, Anne Turner, Sallie Peake and Dorothy Dudley.

The public is cordially invited

BY UNITED NEWS.

Colonel George M. Napier, attorney general of Georgia, told the United News Saturday night that he had not definitely accepted the post of treasurer of the National Prohibition Survey; that he had the matter under advisement, and that a final decision was "contingent upon the decision of several other parties."

The attorney general added, however, that the withdrawal of Governor L. G. Hardman from the advisory committee of the survey, which was announced Saturday, would have no necessary influence upon his decision.

Nevertheless, Edward Kennedy, in charge of headquarters here, insisted the organization next week proposed to begin collection of public contributions toward a $7,000,000 fund to prosecute a 32,000,000-vote poll of America on prohibition.

Several prominent Georgians mentioned tentatively as possible members of the state committee have objected to the use of their names even in that manner, the United News learned. Kennedy insisted there was nothing unethical in his use of any name thus far throughout his negotiations.

Expert Glider Pilot Injured in Crash

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 3.—(AP)—Jack Barstow, glider pilot, crashed on Point Loma at about 7 o'clock tonight, after having been up 8 hours and one minute in an effort to officially break the world's glider record. He was found among the ruins of his machine in a canyon, bleeding from the head and mouth and injured in the back, but able to talk.

Mine Blast Kills Four in Kentucky

UPTON, Ky., May 3.—(AP)—At least four workmen were killed and nearly a score injured in an explosion in a rock quarry near here late today. It was believed that a premature explosion in blasting caused the accident which occurred in the quarry of the Consolidated Stone Company.

:: CONSTITUTION PUBLISHER MEMBER OF GROUP ::

LONDON, May 3.—(Special Cable.)—The British committee on newspaper fellowships in memory of Walter Hines Page in association with the English Speaking Union began today a program of meetings and entertainments which will overspread three weeks. The American journalists participating as delegates are Clark Howell, editor Atlanta Constitution; Stuart Hoffman Perry, Adrian Daily Telegram, Michigan, and Robert Paine Scripps, president Scripps-Howard newspapers. Mr. Howell and Mr. Perry are directors of the Associated Press, and Mr. Scripps of the United News.

Today the party went to Beaconsfield where they are week-end guests of Viscount Burnham, and tomorrow they will visit Disraelis' home at Hughenden. Monday they return to London for luncheon at the English Speaking Union and in the evening dine with J. J. Astor and Lady Astor. Tuesday forenoon the Fellows will meet Ex-Premier Baldwin and be guests at a luncheon given by Sir Donald and Lady MacLean in behalf of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Spender. That evening they dine with Ralph De Blumenfield, of the Daily Express, while the wives of the three American members will be entertained by Lady Cynthia Mosley, Viscountess Elibank and Colonel and Mrs. Norman G. Thwaits.

Arrangements are pending for the party to meet Premier MacDonald Wednesday forenoon after which they will leave London by motor cars for sightseeing to Windsor castle and Eton. They will dine that night with Sir Edward Iliffe.

Sir Godfrey Collins, member of parliament, will be their luncheon host Thursday at the house of commons restaurant after which they will listen to debate. That evening the Fellows dine with Sir Roderick Jones while the American ladies are entertained by Lady Colfax, Mr. and Mrs. W. Deburgh Whyte and Dowager Lady Swaytheling. That evening the party will visit the Daily Mail plant.

Friday Sir Campbell Stuart will introduce the Fellows to Lloyd George and they will lunch with John Evelyn Wrench, editor of the Spectator, while Mrs. Howell, Mrs. Perry and Mrs. Scripps are entertained at lunch by Viscountess Bryce. In the afternoon the party goes to Walton Heath to play golf as guests of Lord Riddell. On return from the golf course they will dine at the United States embassy as guests of Ambassador Dawes.

Saturday the Americans and various British hosts will leave for a provincial tour beginning at Oxford, where lunch will be served at Hertford college by Principal Sir Walter Buchanan-Riddel. From Oxford the party will go to Stratford-on-Avon in time for the Shakespeare festival performance, "Much Ado Abo it Nothing," as guests of Sir Archibald Flowers. Monday the party is to be entertained by Manchester branch, of the English Speaking Union and from there they go on to the lake district and Scottish border. By Tuesday they will be at Glasgow for a visit with the Trossachs and arrive at Edinburgh Thursday, May 15. There they will be taken in charge by Rev. G. W. Warr, dean of Thistle and chapel royal and entertained at a dinner to be given by Edinburgh branch of the English Speaking Union.

Saturday, May 18, is scheduled for York, where the hosts will be Alderman J. B. Morrell and Sir Charles Starmer. All of Sunday will be spent in York and the next day devoted to Cambridge.

Former Tech Student Badly Hurt in Crash

Bill Williams, a former Tech student, suffered serious injuries Saturday when he lost control of the automobile he was driving out Ponce de Leon avenue and the machine crashed into a tree.

Williams, with H. N. Merry, of 830 Spring street, and several Tech students, were en route to the Druid Hills Golf Club when the car suddenly swerved from the street. The other occupants were uninjured. Williams was taken to Grady hospital.

Small Still Found In Fire-Swept Prison

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 3.—(AP)—A still, containing two gallons of liquor, was found today in the White City idle house cell block of Ohio penitentiary, where revolting convicts held sway for several days following the disastrous fire.

The still was secreted in a radio cabinet in a cell. Ohio national guardsmen, inspecting the cell block which had been damaged by the unruly prisoners, discovered it.

STOCK SALES SET SHORT-DAY MARK

Frenzied Trading Pushes Prices of Lists Still Further Downward.

BY CLAUDE A. JAGGER,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Stock prices again shrank with nerve-wracking swiftness on the New York Stock Exchange today, as weakened marginal accounts were jettisoned in wholesale, and bears made what brokers described as one of the most powerful drives ever witnessed.

The extent of the decline closely approximated that of yesterday, a long list of prominent shares losing from $4 to $18, but the crowding of an enormous volume of trading into the short space of a two-hour Saturday trading period gave the market its wildest week-end session in history. Total sales reached 4,867,550 shares, a new Saturday record. This, however, was at the rate of only about 12,000,000 shares for a full day, compared to the record of 16,400,000 last October 29.

Professional speculation for the decline was facilitated by a completely overpowered quotation system. The ticker fell nearly an hour behind transactions on the floor during the morning, and did not record the final transaction until nearly two hours after the close. A feeble rally set in after a flood of distress selling had been disposed of in the first hour, but under cover of the late ticker, bears launched a new attack in the final hour, and when private brokers' wires brought word to their customers' rooms that prices on the floor were several points below ticker quotations, a wave of panicky selling swept into the market.

While trading conditions resembled those of the troublesome days of last October and November, brokerage circles were inclined to the belief that conditions were radically different than at that time, that there was no huge amount of weakly held stock hanging over the market as there was last fall, and that with the enormous volume of short selling, bears would shortly be faced with the necessity of buying the stocks that they have sold, which might cause a sharp rebound. Short selling, it was pointed out, was but a small factor

MUSIC FESTIVAL LEADERS PLEASED WITH ATTENDANCE

C. Howard Candler, Lacking Final Figures, Says Crowds for Season Were Satisfactory.

TIBBETT SCORES GREAT TRIUMPH

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Mounting throughout the three days in a steady crescendo of enthusiasm, Atlanta's twentieth season of Metropolitan Grand Opera ended Saturday night as the glorious tenor voice of Martinelli rang out in "The Comedy Is Finished" and the final curtain fell on one of the best performances of "Pagliacci" ever given in the auditorium.

Officials of the Music Festival Association pronounced themselves, last night, as more than pleased with the result of the abbreviated season of opera in Atlanta this year. Whether it was because the entire season was compressed into three days, instead of the customary week, whether the splendid casts provided by the Metropolitan, the popular choice of operas sung, or for some more intangible reason, the entire season's program this year seemed to go over with greater eclat than any of recent years.

C. Howard Candler, vice president of the association, said that Atlanta seems to have reawakened to the glories of opera this year. "The audiences seemed to me," he said, "to have again achieved that opera consciousness that marked the record seasons of ten years ago. With enthusiasm such as the audiences of Friday and Saturday displayed, it is inevitable that the singers will catch the contagion and respond with unparalleled performances. This was the case this year and the result was tremendously pleasing to all who have worked for the season's success."

Crowds Satisfactory.

While no definite figures on the financial success of the season were available last night, Mr. Candler said that the crowds, while they fell off somewhat for the Saturday performances, were nevertheless satisfactory in numbers as well as enthusiasm and it is probable that the guarantee, if not quite filled, was almost reached.

All three operas presented Saturday were given with a technical perfection and artistic finish that based the great reception accorded by the audiences on sound musical appreciation. In each of the three, including, "La Boheme" in the afternoon and "Cavalleria Rustica..a" and "I Pagliacci" at night, several of the principals won ovations that testified both to the glory of their voices and performances of the day and to the ability of Atlanta audiences to enjoy the finest presentations of the most popular works ever composed for the opera stage.

In the afternoon Lucrezia Bori and Beniamino Gigli were, of course, the outstanding figures in "Boheme." Both have appeared together in the same opera in the past and they duplicated Saturday the glories of those former occasions. The "Boheme" performance also was distinguished for the fast tempo at which the scenes between the four artist-friends moved. Never have opera performers frolicked through scenes with the abandon displayed in these.

Corona Achieves Triumph.

Leonora Corona, the new American soprano from Dallas, Texas, achieved one of the greatest personal triumphs in the season when she made her Atlanta debut Saturday night as Santuzza. Miss Corona has a gorgeous voice notable for its power. In both lower and upper range she sings with a glorious full-throated tone that filled the auditorium to the rearmost rafters. With added training she undoubtedly is destined to be one of the great world figures in the realm of song of a few years hence. She was compelled to take seven curtain calls last night at the end of her principal aria, testifying to the tremendous place she has won in the esteem of Atlanta and Georgia.

Armand Tokatyan gave another of the perfect performances for which he is noted and Mario Basiola again demonstrated that he is one of the greatest of living baritones.

Gladys Swarthout, another American singer, from the midwest, also making her Atlanta debut in the small role of Lola in "Cavalleria," possesses an exceptionally sweet voice and is an unusually alluring figure upon the stage.

"Pagliacci" a Double Triumph.

The final opera of the season, "Pagliacci," developed into a double triumph for Lawrence Tibbett, the baritone, and Martinelli, the tenor. Tibbett, with new laurels recently acquired on the screen, sang the glorious "Prologue" with inspired voice and presence and had to do something not done before in many years. He was forced to repeat the closing phrases of the "Prologue" as an encore.

Martinelli, of course, received his biggest ovation after "Vesta i Gubbia." He has given Atlanta many magnificent performances, but it is doubtful

Atlanta's Importance Cited In Plea for Navigation Fund

Ramspeck Urges Congress To Support Proposal Which Would Permit Barge Traffic on Chattahoochee.

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(Special.)—The important position Atlanta occupies as the commercial distribution point of the southeast was cited in the lower house today by Representative Robert Ramspeck, of the fifth Georgia district, in support of the proposal for navigation improvements on the Chattahoochee river to permit barge traffic.

Provision is made in the pending rivers and harbors bill, already passed by the house, for a survey by the army engineers of the Chattahoochee. Pointing to this, Representative Ramspeck urged that congress at the proper time approach the project with a sympathetic attitude as an aid to much needed water commerce in the section.

"By 1870, Atlanta had become a hustling community of 21,789 inhabitants," he said, "but when the present census is completed, it will show that in the 179 square miles now comprising Atlanta, are approximately 350,000 of the best people ever gathered together.

"Within a night's ride today reside 18,000,000 people and within twenty-four hours ride of Atlanta are 70,000,000 citizens of the United States.

"In the summer of 1925 Atlanta decided that a city could be sold by advertising. The Forward Atlanta commission was organized and in 1926, 1927, 1928 and 1929, this group of forward looking citizens has collected and spent more than a half-million dollars in advertising the advantages of Atlanta in newspapers and periodicals throughout the United States.

Campaign Great Success.

"This advertising campaign has been a great success. In the four-year period 679 new concerns have located in Atlanta, giving employment to more than 17,000 persons. The annual payroll of these new concerns totals more than $30,000,000.

"Of these 679 new concerns, 31 sell throughout the entire country; 78 in the southern states; 401 in the southeastern states; 82 in Georgia and 87 in Atlanta and vicinity only.

"Almost the entire United States today is interested in Atlanta and its progress and development. This is true because most every state in the union has some business or manufacturing concern which has a branch in Atlanta.

"At the close of 1929, Atlanta had more than thirteen hundred branches of concerns whose home offices were elsewhere. The reasons for this are many, but transportation and communications facilities are very important.

"Atlanta is the third largest telegraph center in the world. It is the center of the long distance telephone service in the south.

Fine Railroad Facilities.

"Its railroad and express facilities are not surpassed anywhere. It is the air travel center of the southeast, having been established as the cross-roads in this new method of transportation, just as the rail transportation caused the beginning of this great city.

"The only method of transportation lacking is water travel. It is with a view of providing this that I have, since becoming a member of this body, worked for the inclusion in the pending bill of the provision for this survey. I am indeed happy that a start toward this goal has been made.

"Today, Atlanta and the south are growing. They need the sympathetic understanding of other sections. We are one nation. We should endeavor to promote the general welfare of every section of this great country of ours.

"The great district I have the honor to represent, containing as it does the many business connections with so many other states, would desire, I am sure, that it be so represented in the congress. It is with these thoughts in mind that I have presented the facts as to Atlanta—distribution center of the new south."

by tickets. The reason the Hoovercrats were enabled to gain admission to the auditorium after the regular republican convention was in session was on account of the fact that Roscoe Pickett slipped out of the auditorium, taking with him the tickets that had admitted the regular republican delegates. These tickets were placed in the hands of outsiders, consisting of unseated delegates, friends and speakers who had no business whatsoever in the convention, and all were admitted by door keepers."

He charged that these "outsiders" constituted the bulk of delegates which later participated in the Rose "rump convention."

Administration officials are yet to indicate which of the two competing groups will be recognized, although the proposal by Postmaster-General Brown for a new convention is taken to mean that he would like to continue Mr. Rose in power.

during the wholesale liquidation by the general public last fall. Commission houses state that the public has been but a minor factor in the market this year.

Conditions on the floor of the stock exchange were orderly, bearing no semblance to the wild times last fall, when it appeared for minutes at a time that no bids of any sort would be forthcoming for good investment stocks. Brokers said that selling was readily absorbed today, that investment sources were taking large blocks of stock on scale down.

Impaired marginal accounts that had to be disposed of were said to represent holdings of several pools that had been instrumental in bidding up stocks during the sharp rise ended in the first half of April, but that had been unable to distribute their holdings owing to the small public participation in the market.

Rumors Fly.

Brokerage circles were buzzing with sensational but unconfirmable rumors during the height of the day's excitement. The names of prominent operators were mentioned in connection with distress liquidation of pool holdings. Some brokers expressed the opinion that the bearish operations had a political tinge, coming as they have directly upon the heels of President Hoover's optimistic survey of business conditions.

It is now widely believed in Wall street that the more rash speculators for the rise, in their zeal to employ the extraordinarily cheap credit which followed reduction of the federal reserve rediscount rate in March, lost sight of the reasonable limitations of business recovery, and have been disagreeably surprised by the lack of vigor shown in the seasonal spring upturn of commercial activity. It is pointed out that this week's further reduction in the federal reserve rediscount rate was made at an ideal time to avoid stirring up a new speculative orgy.

The monthly brokers' loan figures published last night by the New York Stock Exchange, showing an increase for April of more than $400,000,000, was rather disturbing to speculative quarters, as it revealed that absorption of credit in loans against securities had for two months been progressing at a rate comparable to that of July, August and September of last year. This increase was rather surprising, as the weekly federal reserve figures over a roughly corresponding period, showed a gain of only about $300,000,000. It is urged in defense of the large increase in loans, however, that it undoubtedly represents in a measure the floating of several new bond offerings, and that the total of loans has not yet reached unwieldy levels.

The Standard Statistics Co.-Associated Press price index of 90 leading shares lost 5.8 points today, equalling yesterday's loss. The index gained approximately 65 points between November 13, the bottom of the autumn crash, and April 8, the peak of the rally, a gain of approximately 47 per cent, but since April 8, it has lost about 24 points of its gain and now stands approximately 30 per cent above the November low.

Among the stocks which normally move over a wide range, Auburn Auto lost $18, Vanadium $17, and Ingersoll Rand $12. United Aircraft, a feature of the rise of a few weeks ago, lost $14, and Radio, a recent pool favorite, $9.

Charlie C. McCall, attorney general of Alabama and candidate for governor, and a graduate of the Georgia Military Academy, has been chosen as the commencement speaker on May 28.

American Alumni Body Will Meet in Atlanta

AMHERST, Mass., May 3.—(AP)—Atlanta, Ga., was selected as the place for the 1931 meeting of the American Alumni Council, the board of council directors announced.

PAGLIACCI BRINGS OPERA TO CLOSE

if any exceeded in artistic interpretation and rendition that of the clown last night.

Briefly scanning the season as a whole:

Thursday night witnessed a performance of "Louise," with Bori, Trantoul, Rothier and Bourskaya in the principal roles, which, for technical, artistic and musical perfection was probably the best of all. It did not have the audience appeal of the older and better known operas that followed, however.

"Il Trovatore," on Friday night, was played to the largest audience of the season, with Ponselle, Martinelli, Claussen, Danise and others pouring forth the finest of their divine tones in the dear old, splendid old melodies and harmonies of the Verdi masterpiece.

Saturday, as stated, was a day of ever-mounting appreciation for performance that thrilled and charmed every individual present.

It has been a good season—unfortunately too short for an opera fanatic—but perhaps more impressive in its scintillating brilliance by reason of that brevity.

Big Pageant Will Feature Health Week Program Here

Their majesties, the king and queen of health, will preside over the health pageant to be held Friday at Lakewood by the Fulton county school system. The king is Harold Walker, senior in Russell High school. The queen is Miss Martha Burson, senior in Fulton High school.

Health through education will be stressed this week in Fulton county and Greater Atlanta by a variety of activities culminating Friday in a health pageant to be staged at Lakewood park by the county school system, and two mass meetings Friday night devoted to disseminating information on diseases and their prevention.

Observance of health week will begin today, with special addresses at morning and night church services. Features of the week will include free physical and dental examinations by prominent physicians at the Y. M. C. A. for adult males over 18 years of age, radio talks on health, physical inspection of school children, addresses by staff members of leading hospitals to the nurses in training, participation by the civic clubs, schools and colleges, and special motion pictures at the theaters and other places.

10 Schools Participate.

The health pageant will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning in Lakewood park, starting with music by the Fulton and Russell High school bands. There will be a Maypole dance by 10 schools competing for a loving cup.

Seventeen groups of students from as many schools will present drills demonstrating useful health habits before the king and queen of health, represented by Harold Walker, of Russell High, and Martha Burson, of Fulton High, who were chosen by a committee of physicians on the basis of physical fitness and general good health. The Southeastern Fair Association has offered a loving cup for the group presenting the best health drill.

The words "Fulton county" will be spelled out in human letters by students from 12 of the county schools.

The closing number on the program will be the grand health parade. This will form in three groups. First will come the blue ribbon group, Anne Belle Dennard and Charles Reddick, of Russell High school, who have not missed a day nor been tardy since entering school in the first grade of grammar school. Then will come the red ribbon group, 90 students from various schools who have not been absent or tardy either from the second grade in grammar school or the second year in high school. The white ribbon group, 1,000 students from all schools in the county who have not missed a day or been tardy during 1929-30, will come third. The parade will be led by the king and queen of health.

Doctors to Speak.

Addresses by Dr. W. S. Rankin, of Charlotte, N. C., and Dr. Arthur J. Cramp, of Chicago, will feature mass meetings following the pageant. One meeting will be held at the First Methodist church and the other will be arranged for colored people assembling at Big Bethel church.

Dr. James N. Brawner, president of Fulton County Medical Society, which, with the Dental Society and the Council of Parents and Teachers, inaugurated this intensive health effort, Saturday said that "this education program should have a far-reaching and abiding effect in promoting the well-being, happiness and prosperity of the people of the state. Generally a healthy individual is a happy person. A healthy community is usually a happy and prosperous one. Where we find a locality free from malaria, hookworm and typhoid, whose people follow an ample and balanced diet, there also will be found a population possessing good clothes, comfortable homes and enjoying the luxuries of modern life."

When Lights Go Out, Autos Come To Aid of Dancers

:: ATLANTA SWEPT BY ELECTRICAL STORM ::

The trusty automobile, enacting a new role, Saturday night came to the rescue of several hundred dancers who were facing the prospect of a gloomy evening when a lightning bolt put the electrical system at Lakewood park out of commission for more than two hours. The "dousing" of the resort's lights was the feature of a severe rain and electrical storm which raged throughout the city for several hours during the afternoon and early night.

The dancers, moping about in abysmal darkness, had about decided to give it up as a bad job and go on home when someone conceived the idea of rolling up parked automobiles to the doors of the dance hall and turning on the headlights. This solved the problem and the dance was on, the couples apparently enjoying themselves hugely in the eerie semi-darkness. At 9:15 o'clock the trouble had been located by Georgia Power Company linemen somewhere between Lakewood and East Point and the more conventional lighting arrangements were put back into effect.

It was said that only once before in its history has Lakewood been bereft of its lights.

Fire started by a bolt of lightning late Saturday afternoon damaged the third floor of the Fox Manufacturing Company, 874 Marietta street. Patterns and samples of furniture were ruined.

A continuation of Saturday's rains, although nothing quite so violent, is on the cards for today, the official forecast of Weatherman C. F. von Herrmann stating that thundershowers very probably would fall during the day, but that the outbursts would not be protracted. Saturday afternoon's high of 86 degrees is expected to be equalled today, the prognosticator added.

Chosewood Park Purchase Upheld in Council Probe

A clean bill of health to all municipal officials involved in the purchase of Chosewood park property was given Saturday by the parks' committee of council after a hearing from those from whom the purchase was made.

"If there are any irregularities in the purchase of this property, your committee has been unable to find same, and we shall be glad to lend our full co-operation to the solicitor-general and the Fulton county grand jury in any way that they so desire to ascertain any further facts concerning this property," the report said in part.

Members of the Fulton county grand jury condemned the purchase, alleging several lots were to have gone to members of council for assisting in putting the deal through.

Denying that they ever paid any money or other valuables or agreed to do so for the sale of the tract, Rufus C. Bass, owner of the site; George M. Brown, Jr., Mr. Bass' business partner, swore before the committee that no city official was to receive any of the profits from the sale.

Text of the committee's report which will be filed Monday in council follows:

Hon. Mayor and General Council,
City of Atlanta, Georgia.

"Your committee on parks in accordance with the report of the Fulton county grand jury has investigated the purchase of the land known as the Chosewood park, and beg to submit the following:

"Mr. Rufus C. Bass, the owner of this property, and his partner in business, Mr. George M. Brown, Jr., were subpoenaed to appear before the regular meeting of the park committee in the city hall, on May 3, 1930. Both Mr. Bass and Mr. Brown were sworn, and testified under oath that they did not enter into any agreement with anyone connected with the city government, whereby they would receive any of the profits, if there were any, or any of the lots comprising the tract they originally purchased.

"Mr. Bass, who purchased this property, and sold it to the city of Atlanta, testified under oath that the reason 15 lots were reserved in the south end of this property was that he wanted $27,500 for the entire tract, and the mayor of the city of Atlanta stated that he would not be willing to pay over $25,000 for park to replace the one that had just been sold to the General Motors company.

"After this matter was thoroughly discussed with the mayor and other officials, they agreed, as testified under oath, to reserve the 15 lots on the south end of the tract of land, thereby reducing the price to $25,000, in keeping with what the city desired to pay for a new tract in replacing the Chosewood park.

"Further, it may be said in this report that when the city of Atlanta purchased this property it was from a civic standpoint, meaning by this that Hugh C. Couch, vice president of the Southern railroad, along with J. Sherrod Kennedy, stated that if the city would not sell to the General Motors Company the property known as the Chosewood park, in order that the General Motors Company could come to Atlanta, they would lose that big enterprise, and they would locate their factory in Birmingham, Ala., or Jacksonville, Fla. Mr. Couch stated further that the property known as the Chosewood park was the key to the entire tract, and that the Southern railroad had no other site available on their spur line whereby they could furnish sufficient acreage for them to locate.

"After hearing from Mr. Couch and Mr. Kennedy the mayor and general council of the city of Atlanta agreed to sell them the Chosewood park, and that the resolution selling said property should provide that the proceeds from the sale should be held in trust for the purchase of another suitable site for a park for the people of that vicinity.

"The Milton Avenue Improvement Club selected the site that the city purchased, which is now under discussion, and in turn the city of Atlanta concurred in their wishes and purchased this property which is now known as Chosewood park.

"If there are any irregularities in the purchase of this property, your committee has been unable to find same, and we shall be glad to lend our full co-operation to the solicitor-general and the Fulton county grand jury in any way that they so desire to ascertain any further facts concerning the purchase of this property."

SLIGHT TORNADO HITS OKLAHOMA SECTION

OKLAHOMA CITY, May 3.—(UN)—Tornadoes swept over western and central Oklahoma tonight, injuring at least seven persons and causing property damage in several communities.

Six members of the family of T. Campbell at Tuttle, southwest of here, were injured when their home collapsed during a cyclonic storm. At least six other homes were destroyed and barns and outbuildings were leveled.

Timbers were blown for hundreds of yards, and communication wires were destroyed. The tornado followed a small creek.

A cloudburst struck Cherokee, more than three inches of rain falling in less than an hour. High winds accompanied the rain.

P. E. Patterson, Oklahoma City, was near death in a hospital from injuries sustained when he was struck by an automobile as he groped his way across a street during the blinding rain here.

The tornado ripped its way across the state from south to north, striking first at Delhi, where a new brick school building, unoccupied, was destroyed.

Continuing northward, the storm struck Norman, causing some property damage and destroying communication lines.

Power and light were suspended for almost an hour in Oklahoma City during the height of the storm. The weather bureau reported .71 inches rain fell in less than 15 minutes.

Cook Makes Report On 'One-Eyed' Cars

In response to a letter from Charlie Cook, secretary of the Atlanta Motor Club, concerning the alleged flagrant violation of the law requiring automobile owners to have two front headlights while driving at night, Chief of Police James L. Beavers Saturday issued an order that if any person would testify against such violators, that his department will make cases.

In the letter to Chief Beavers, Mr. Cook stated that he and J. W. Strouss, member of the Atlanta Motor Club, stood at the intersection of North avenue and Peachtree street Thursday night for two hours counting cars without proper lights. In that space of time Mr. Cook stated in his letter, 89 cars passed the corner with only one light showing, and 34 others passed without lights either front or rear.

Grade Crossings Increase in Number

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Grade crossings at highway and railroad intersections over the country, in spite of the fact that $60,000,000 a year is being spent on their elimination, are increasing in number.

This is the finding of a special committee, which will be reported to the national conference on street and highway safety which convenes in Washington May 27.

This increase in the number of grade crossings at a time when a campaign against them because of the great number of deaths from train-motor collisions is taking place, the committee report says, is a result of the continuous increase in highway mileage. Many grade crossings are being eliminated, but new roads create others constantly. The great cost of separating the road levels from the railroad grades, the report adds, is likely to prevent complete success in the effort to eliminate such crossings.

U. S. Leading Britain In Brazilian Trading

SAO PAULO, Brazil, May 3.—(AP) British businessmen here are alarmed that imports of American goods through the port of Santos in the past calendar year were twice those of British goods.

British imports are steadily losing ground to American articles, while Germany is making a strong bid to wrest even second place from the English and the monthly journal of the British Chamber of Commerce has taken a pessimistic view of the situation.

"The phenomenal increase in the number of motor cars and accessories entering the port during the first nine months of the year will have helped to increase the value of imported American goods," says this journal. "On the other hand, as we have had occasion to point out in the past, it is wrong to suppose that the predominant position now held by America is due to the exceptionally large imports of half a dozen articles. The unpalatable fact is that the American manufacturer is catering for modern demands more than the British manufacturer."

Meyer's Patron to Ride In Auto as Mechanic

INDIANAPOLIS, May 3.—(AP)—Louis Meyer's financial patron will ride with him as a mechanic in the 500-mile international race classic May 30.

Alden Sampson, whose sole activity has been with pen and check book for two years, will seek experience and next year promises to compete as a driver.

He has entered a 16-cylinder car in which Meyer will attempt to race for the third successive year to America's premier speedway crown.

Sampson backed Meyer in 1928 when the racer was an unknown mechanic and saw him win the Indianapolis race and follow it up with victories that gave him the American championship.

Last year the Sampson-Meyer entry placed second, but the racer followed with further winnings and again was crowned Yankee champion.

Footlight Innovation Finds Favor With Pre-Viewers

:: MOTION PICTURES ASSIST OPERATIC BIOGRAPHY ::

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER,
Associated Press Correspondent.

BERLIN, May 3.—(AP)—Something new behind the footlights, an operatic biography assisted by motion pictures, was given a pre-showing to the press at the Prussian State Opera House today.

It is "Christoph Kolumbus," based on the life of the great discoverer, with music by Darius Milhaud, the French composer, and book by Paul Claudel, French ambassador to the United States. The world premiere will be Monday night in the presence of both composer and librettist.

"Christoph Kolumbus" demonstrates that some of the old masters were almost amateurs when it came to thinking up technical, orchestral and vocal difficulties. It requires certain of the soloists to appear in person on the stage and in film scenes projected on the back of the stage at the same time. The singing, the playing of the orchestra and the acting must synchronize exactly with the motions of the same person on the screen.

The opera presents the life of Columbus in a symbolical manner. The great discoverer's first name, Christopher, indicates that he is a bearer of a new idea. His family name, Columbus, is derived from columba, dove, and represents the spirit behind this idea. Just as, in holy writ, the spirit appears in the form of a dove, so in this opera a dove with which Queen Isabella in her childhood played, and which she released from its cage so that it flew to Columbus at Genoa, is symbolical of Columbus' mission.

In order that the audience may know what, at various times, passed through the mind of Columbus, the screen is often invoked to illustrate his thoughts. More than that, there are times when Columbus' past, present and future, together with the opinion held of him by his contemporaries, are presented simultaneously.

Thus it happens in one scene that one sees Columbus as the central figure on the stage, then his double as member of the chorus to which, on the analogy of the ancient Greek chorus, is assigned the task of elucidating the action, while on the screen, in rapid succession, one sees Columbus as a young man, as a man of middle age, and as a white-haired old man.

Just as novel as the film idea is also is the manner of presenting Columbus' story. A reader opens an immense book in which is recorded the story of the discoverer of America. He reads out the various episodes, to which copious comment is furnished by the chorus, while the illustrations are supplied on the screen or on another part of the stage.

Hospitals Body Will Consider Jury Proposals

Alderman G. Everett Millican, for the past two years chairman of the hospitals and charities committee of council, Saturday night indicated that he would recommend acceptance of the recommendations of Fulton county grand jury that Grady hospital be placed under direction of a board of trustees.

His recommendation will not be made Monday, it was said, but he will confer with other members of the committee with a view of bringing such a recommendation to council within the near future.

"I feel that the recommendations of the grand jury should be given careful consideration and will recommend that course," Mr. Millican said. "If Grady hospital can be more efficiently and effectively operated in the interests of the citizens and taxpayers of Atlanta, I shall recommend that the committee file such a measure with council.

"Feeling that some change should be made and believing that additional finances are necessary for efficient service, I personally favor such a board as recommended by the grand jury."

1 Killed, Many Hurt In Florida Wreck

BUNNELL, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—Mrs. W. C. McRoberts, of Palatka, was killed and several other persons were injured today when a southbound Florida East Coast railway freight train ran into the rear of a passenger train in the railroad yards here.

The injured were taken to the East Coast hospital in St. Augustine, where attaches said none was seriously hurt.

Among the injured were J. O. White, flagman, and D. I. Disbennett, trainman, both of New Smyrna, and W. E. Clemmons, national guardsman, who was on Mediterranean fruit fly inspection duty, in the rear passenger coach. Baggagemaster Cannon, who was in the baggage car, received slight injuries.

Several freight cars were derailed and the rear passenger coach was demolished. Only a few persons were in the passenger coach.

The accident occurred as the passenger train was backing out of Bunnell to proceed to East Palatka. It was struck by the southbound freight train from East Palatka.

GRAY HAIR AND SCALP TROUBLES EASY TO GET RID OF SHE SAYS

New York User of Amazing New Tonic for Scalp And Hair Praises It To the Sky.

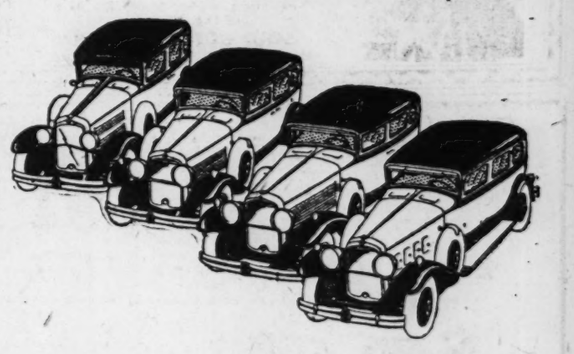

TREATMENT AT HOME RESULTS WONDERFUL

"A few years ago I began to suffer with eczema of the sclap, then dandruff and finally my hair began losing its natural color and turning gray. In October of 1928 I heard about this wonderful Lea's Hair Tonic made down South and sent for it. It is really wonderful what it does. My scalp stopped itching, the dandruff disappeared and my hair became glossy and full of life and really results were so perfectly satisfactory I enclose a photo to prove how even colored and beautiful my hair has become," enthusiastically writes Mrs. Gisella Repassy, Housewife, 576 Second Ave., New York City.

Lea's Hair Tonic originated in Florida. Wealthy tourists there went wild about it. Thousands found it superior to even the most expert treatments and not at all like the horrid old-time prepaartions. A big plant makes it now and is introducing it in this city and vicinity. Lea's Hair Tonic is a clear, pleasant liquid, rubbed into the scalp with finger tips. Even experts cannot detect its use, the daily change back to youthful color is so gradual, and of course it has no unpleasant odor and doesn't stain. Fastidious men and women are delighted with it. If the reader desires to try Lea's on positive guarantee of delightful results or money back, get a bottle of druggist. If he hasn't it yet ask him to order of his jobber, or you may send dollar bill to Lea Tonic Co., Brentwood, Md., and bottle will be sent return mail to your home or office. —(adv.)

MAYOR URGES GUARD OF VACANT HOUSES.

Mayor I. N. Ragsdale Saturday instructed Chief of Police James L. Beavers to use every effort to apprehend persons invading vacant houses and carrying off valuable equipment, following an appeal by Forrest Greene, president of the Georgia Car & Locomotive Company.

Mr. Ragsdale had the assurance of Chief Beavers that everything possible would be done to protect property rights of citizens and that those apprehended will be dealt with summarily in so far as the department is concerned.

The mayor stated that a hot water tank had been removed from one of his own houses several days ago.

Mr. Greene called attention to several houses he owns which have been ransacked by vandals who have stripped them of all equipment which could be moved.

Fishing Advice Given in Booklet Issued by Twitty

The fishing situation in Georgia is covered in a booklet gotten out by the state department of game and fish, with a thoroughness that not only give the location of the best fishing grounds and the addresses of the persons controlling them, but supplemental and incidental information with a minute detail that even includes first aid treatment for snakebite.

"Fishin' in Georgia" is the informal title given the booklet, which will be distributed gratis to those interested. Because only a limited supply of the booklets is available, only those to whom they will prove of real value will be given them, it was stated.

The booklet, some 50 pages in length, is said to be one of the most beautiful which has been published by a state department. It is profusely illustrated with photographs of Georgia fishing scenes. Its cover is a photograph in full color of a north Georgia trout stream.

The location of the best fishing grounds with the party controlling them, is given in a tabulated, county-by-county form. Suggestions are made as to the best bait and tackle to be used for the various Georgia fish, and several pages are devoted to sound advice on fishing.

The book is designed as an aid to fishermen, Mr. Twitty said, and contains a summary of laws and regulations governing fishing in Georgia, a guide to the best fishing places, and a plea for the upbuilding of co-operative conservation.

Georgia's fish laws are reasonable, Mr. Twitty said, and no license is required. Drastic laws are discouraged, although there are some punishable offenses.

W. S. Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor Company, is in Atlanta on an inspection tour of the company's field organization, accompanied by H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager.

Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Klingler arrived Saturday from Columbia, S. C., and were in conference throughout the day with those in charge of this territory. They will leave Monday for Birmingham.

Both of the visiting executives were highly enthusiastic over the condition they had found on their tour, particularly in reference to the south. Mr. Knudsen said that a ew years ago industrial leaders of the north regarded the south as a good place to be developed, but that now these same people realized that the south was making great strides in its own development.

Nearing the end of their tour, Messrs. Knudsen and Klingler reported that they had found a steady demand and that the busines volume was satisfactory. They said that the company's business had shown a gain every year since 1924 and that the annual volume now amounted to $700,000,000.

In the local plant, which went on full operation a few weeks ago, 1,200 men are employed, it was said, and the annual pay roll amounts to nearly a million dollars.

Britons View King George

:: SOON CELEBRATES 20TH YEAR ON THRONE ::

As Legendary Character

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—In his 20 years on the British throne, the anniversary of which will be celebrated Tuesday, King George has become almost a lengendary character to his millions of subjects.

Glimpses of the little man—he weighs only 150 pounds—who is head of the British commonwealth of nations have been many and varied.

Favorite among the many authenticated anecdotes which have sprung up about his ajesty is the story of his inspection of White City, London's Madison Square Garden, on a wet day. King George stepped into a puddle of water and splashed his uniform.

"Damn!" he ejaculated.

"Hush, George," said Queen Mary, who was with him. "Wait until we get home."

His majesty is an out and out royalist. A proposal by Winston Churchill to call a new battleship H. M. S. Oliver Cromwell after the man who beheaded Charles I was promptly turned down by the king.

Then there is the story of his gramaphone, which he likes to play on a winter's evening at Buckingham palace. One evening, in the royal family circle, he put on a record of a military band selection. At the end of the record the band began to play the national anthem, "God Save the King." The queen and others present sprang to their feet at "attention." His majesty stopped the gramaphone.

It is a fact that King George reads a chapter of the Bible every day in deference to his long ago promise to his mother, the late Queen Alexandra.

Once when a sculptor submitted designs to his majesty for a new coinage, the king said:

"Make a big V behind my name. I should hate to be taken for any of the other Georges."

The British monarch is very fond of horseracing and his purple and gold silk colors are seen on many an English racetrack, although as a matter of principle he never bets more than $25 on a race.

Tour a Failure, Beauties Prepare To Return Home

MIAMI, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—With their mental picture of royal entertainment in the United States destroyed by the failure of a "good-will tour" by Latin-American beauties that was to end at the movie lots of Hollywood and didn't, Senorita Melida Boyd, of Panama, and Senorita Sara Chacon, of Ecuador, were here tonight preparing to return to their homes.

Senorita Boyd, vivacious brunette school teacher of Panama, was selected "Miss Latin America" here two months ago at the first annual international Miami beauty pageant. Senorita Chacon was another of the 11 Latin-American girls who participated in the pageant.

With the latter's father accompanying them, the two girls prepared tonight to leave for their homes before expiration of the passports on which they entered the United States.

Senor Chacon told of the failure of the "good-will" expedition. At conclusion of the beauty pageant here, he said through an interpreter today, the girls and their chaperons, under the management of Gaston Andrade and Ray Anderson, left Miami for Hollywood, where Andrade said they were to participate in filming a South American picture.

The group of beauties went from here to Tampa, thence through Florida to Atlanta, where, Chacon asserted, Andrade's plan to finance the western journey with proceeds of theater appearances failed from lack of funds. Chacon said he had enough funds to bring his daughter and Senorita Boyd to Miami, where they secured passage home. The other girls, he said, were without funds, but were trying to leave the country to return to their homes.

The Latin-American beauties were here for about 10 days and, for a time, were "stranded," without funds to continue their tour or to return to their homes.

A plea was made by the party to Mayor Ragsdale, who informed them that while they had his sympathy he could offer them little of a more tangible nature. Financial arrangements, however, finally were made by the managers of the group and railroad fare provided for the girls.

...ning Is Asked ...y Salvation Army

...hovel "Health Week" activity was announced Saturday by Ensign Hugo Bloomberg, officer in charge of the Salvation Army social service center here, in a special collection of warm clothing, looking forward to the time when winter weather, six months away, will begin taking its annual toll among the thinly clad hundreds of Atlanta's poor.

"The Salvation Army has to obtain supplies whenever it can to take care of the desperate need that always develops among those whom bad fortune and circumstances force to seek its help," Ensign Bloomberg said. "Every fall, after the first cold weather appeals have been met, we have scores of barefooted children, mothers in thin summer dresses and men in shirt sleeves who come to us for help that sometimes is many days delayed before collections finally produce garments they can wear."

Salvation Army trucks will be sent to collect clothing, rags, old paper, books and other rummage, on phone call to Jackson 2224, Ensign Bloomberg said.

3 Southern Cities Double Population

Four California cities have turned in returns showing 100 per cent or more increase, while the south has reported three cities with increases of more than 100 per cent.

The east has reported one such city and the middle west one, the latter the city of 10,000 or more population which shows the biggest increase thus far reported in the 1930 census. That city is Garfield Heights, Ohio, which returned a growth of 510.7 per cent.

Increases in population of from 50 to 99 per cent have been shown in twelve Pacific coast and western cities, thirteen southern cities, five middle western cities and two eastern cities.

There have been decreases in population in ten eastern cities in the last decade among those thus far reporting, three in the south and two in the middle west.

Concert at Trinity Church To Open Music Week Here

Many Churches Have Arranged Special Programs To Usher in Seven-Day Observance.

With an opening concert at Trinity Methodist church, at the corner of Washington street and Trinity avenue, at 4 o'clock this afternoon and with programs and concerts arranged throughout the week in churches and schools over the entire city, National Music Week observance in Atlanta will be ushered in under the auspices of the Woman's Division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

A proclamation designating the seven-day period as "Music Week" here, has been issued by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale. Radio stations WSB and WGST will present special broadcasts during the week.

The official concert which will open the week here at Trinity Methodist church will have a number of well-known local artists on the program, including Miss Helen Coyne Riley and Mrs. Ne[illegible] Nix Edwards, sopranos; Mrs. Morgan Stephens and Miss Aileen Stephens, violinists; Raemonde Aubrey, baritone; George Jenkins, flutist, and Dr. Ben J. Potter, organist and director. During the concert Miss Regina Corrigan, president of the Woman's Division of the Chamber of Commerce will introduce Mrs. Lillian A. Dove, who is chairman of National Music Week in Atlanta.

During this afternoon and tonight there will be a number of other features of the opening day. These include a band concert by the G. M. A. band on the campus at College Park at 2 o'clock; a concert at the Old Ladies Home in West End at 3 P. M., directed by Miss Lenus Daniell; a second concert at the same hour to be given at the Home for the Friendless, directed by Miss Dorothy Waldman; at 3:30 o'clock "A Song of Thanksgiving" will be given at Clark University; at 5 P. M., there will be a special musical service given at the First Presbyterian church which will be directed by Dr. Charles A. Sheldon, and from 3 to 4 o'clock the chimes at Oglethorpe University will play.

From 4 to 5 o'clock this afternoon a second chime concert will be given and will be heard from the Peachtree Christian church, with Mrs. Victor Clark playing.

A special program will be given at Wesley Memorial church at 7:45 o'clock tonight. The program will be varied and will be interspersed with hymns by American composers, given by chorus, orchestra and organ, under the direction of Carl Millard, church organist. One of the features will be the singing of Granier's "Hosanna" by the chorus, accompanied by the organ and the orchestra.

Miss Zeta Collins, of the Wesleyan conservatory, will be the guest soloist, and the "Little Symphony orchestra," directed by C. S. Jarrell.

Many churches in the city today will assist in the observance of the week, either by special services, special sermons or mention from the pulpit of the "Music Week." Churches in College Park and Decatur will do likewise, and all Jewish churches in the city have pledged their assistance.

A full list of the churches that will have part in the day's observance includes Jefferson Street Methodist church, Capitol View Baptist, Church of the Incarnation, North Avenue Presbyterian, Second Baptist church, Westminister Presbyterian, Wesley Memorial, Sacret Heart, Immaculate Conception, St. Anthony's, First Presbyterian, Peachtree Christian, St. John's Episcopal, Sunday school of Druid Hills Methodist, and the Sunday school of Trinity Methodist.

Council Will Act Monday On Police Radio Proposal

$10,000 for Purchase of Cars and Sets and Many Other Matters To Come Up.

Many matters of importance, including an appropriation of $10,000 for purchase of new police cars to be equipped with radio receiving sets, to aid Atlanta's fight against the spread of crime, will be considered by council at 2 o'clock Monday afternoon.

A councilmanic battle on a proposed ordinance to prohibit deliveries in the fronts of apartment houses after signs have been posted warning against such practice was seen Saturday following a request by representatives of retail merchants, express and delivery companies for information about the measure.

The paper was proposed at the last meeting of council and was recommended favorably by the ordinance committee.

Councilman John A. White, of the fourth ward, Saturday had not decided whether he would offer the proposal to place Atlanta in the list of cities using daylight saving time.

The Atlanta Hotel Men's Association, however, Saturday was on record as favoring the plan and it has the backing of other influential organizations.

Princinct Borough Lists.

Councilman William E. Saunders, of the twelfth ward, is expected to offer an ordinance repealing one passed several meetings ago providing that registration lists in borough elections and primaries be prepared according to precincts. Mr. Saunders contends that preparation of such lists is not feasible and would be too expensive.

A report of the bridge committee of council adversing an offer of the Georgia Power Company to pay $7,500 for traction franchise across the new Forsyth street viaduct will be filed with council. The committee holds that the amount is not sufficient.

Another important paper providing that all dogs in Atlanta be inoculated before dog licenses are issued to owners will be presented by the sanitary committee of council. It has the backing of Dr. John P. Kennedy, city health officer, and others interested in combating the spread of rabies in Atlanta and Fulton county.

Council will be requested by the parks committee of council to empower Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Councilman James T. Ogburn, chairman of the purchasing committee of council, and L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks and playgrounds, to purchase ponies for park track.

The parks committee voted unanimously to have the ponies bought so that Atlanta youngsters again may have the pleasure of rides at a nominal cost.

Mr. Wallis Saturday reported to the parks committee that fees from the municipally operated golf courses for the first quarter of this year nearly doubled the income from that source last year. The 1929 receipts were $4,919.75 as against $9,285.25 for the first quarter of 1930.

All persons who were employed as playground instructors or in other divisions of the summer recreation system last year and who wish to remain in the employ of the department were ordered to file written requests by May 10. Failure to do so will be regarded as an expression that they do not wish to serve again and the places will be given to others.

Walter N. Gallaher, chairman of the playgrounds committee of the Atlanta Safety Council, told the committee that the council wishes to cooperate in any way possible to reduce accidents in the parks and was granted permission to place placards of warning in the various play centers.

Request of the N., C. & St. L. railway to recondition the historic locomotive "Texas," now in the cyclorama at Grant park, was granted by the committee on condition that the engine is again placed on exhibit at the park after it has visited the shops.

Councilman White reported that an investigaton of the Chosewood park deal had been made by the committee, and that owners of the property under oath had declared to the committee that no inducement of any kind ever had been offered to any member of council for his vote in favoring purchase of the tract.

Taxi Driver Talks Bandit Into Trouble

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—A taxicab driver with a little quick thinking and a ready tongue today talked a holdup man out of the idea of robbing him and into a trap that led to his arrest.

David Steerer, the driver, told the police that the holdup man tried to rob him while a passenger in his cab in Central park. Steerer said he reasoned with him something like this:

"Why are you sticking me up? I've got less than $20 with me and, besides, I need it worse than you do. I've got a wife to support and my kid is sick in the hospital. If you want to pull a stickup, why don't you go down to the Village Nut Club. You can pick up a couple of grand down there."

So the stranger permitted Steerer to drive him to the Greenwich Village resort. Immediately after the man entered the taxi driver informed a policeman, who entered the club with drawn gun and arrested the would-be holdup man as he stood at the entrance surveying the crowd. The man gave his name as Edward Donahue, 23 years old, and, after being forced to pay Steerer $1.40 taxi fare, was arrested on a charge of attempted robbery.

Man Killed as Bullet Tears Through Wall

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3.—(AP) With one man under arrest and five others released after questioning, police today were continuing their investigation into the fatal shooting of George Smith, 46, who was struck in the back by a bullet as he ascended the stairs to a downtown "social and literary" club.

Smith staggered to a cafe near-by and asked that an ambulance be called. He died a short time after reaching the hospital.

At the hospital he told detectives the bullet which hit him came through a wall.

Police learned from questioning occupants of the clubrooms that a man said to have been drinking had been trying to sell a .38 caliber pistol. When told by one person "I wouldn't buy it, even if it was a good gun," the owner is said to have fired two shots, one striking a table and the other passing through the wall.

Police immediately began a search for Loyd Gilbert, alias "Kid Loyd," and placed him under arrest early this morning, holding him for investigation by Coroner J. D. Russum.

Officers reported finding 31 decks of cards in the club's safe and a sum of money locked in a table drawer together with "I. O. U.'s" and other memoranda.

The shooting took place during the after-theater traffic rush and attracted a throng of theatergoers. The scene was near the place where A. M. Searcy, real estate man, was slain several months ago in what was claimed to have been a holdup of a dice game.

Red Men's School Will Meet Monday

The monthly meeting of the degree staff of the Atlanta District School of Instructions of the Improved Order of Red Men, will be held Monday night with Cherokee Tribe, No. 1, at the wigwam, 160 Central avenue, S. W., according to an announcement by D. E. Remund, district sachem.

FLORIDA BOMB SUIT OFFERS LEGAL PUZZLE

TAMPA, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—The Tampa Times says that unusual angles may be developed if a proposed damage suit is filed against the estate of John Hodaz, 40, Hungarian, lynched near here last Sunday. It was learned today, the newspaper continues, that Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Waller, the latter a victim of a bomb alleged to have been placed by Hodaz at their home, had retained a local attorney to initiate the proceedings.

Hodaz left $11,000 in foreign bonds and some other assets, now in custody of the sheriff. No relatives have been found and proceedings are under way to have the estate forfeited to the state. Contents of a safe deposit box, to be examined by the administrator, may include a will, however, it is pointed out.

If the Wallers are successful, lawyers say, according to the newspaper, the dead man first must be convicted of placing the bomb at the Waller house, for the purpose of establishing his responsibility for injuries to the woman which resulted in amputation of an arm and a leg.

Probably the most important testimony, in this connection, would be that of a Bertillon expert who said fingerprints found on bombs left at a neighboring house and those from Hodaz's fingers were identical. On the other hand it might be contended that no fingerprints were found at the Waller home and that according to a deputy sheriff who arrested Hodaz, the prisoner denied leaving a pail of dynamite on Waller's back porch, the newspaper concludes.

BRAND URGES HIKE IN RESERVE DIVIDEND

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(Special.)—Member banks of the federal reserve system would be allowed to receive an equivalent of 2 per cent additional on their paid in capital stock holdings in federal reserve banks, under an important amendment to the federal reserve act laid before the house Friday by Representative Charles H. Brand, of Georgia.

The present dividend which member banks may receive on paid in capital stock holdings is limited to 6 per cent. Thus the dividend receipts would be increased to 8 per cent.

The amendment, offered as an additional to Section 7 of the act, provides that the proposed 2 per cent increase in dividend payments shall be paid out of any net earnings which may remain to be paid to the United States treasury by federal reserve banks as franchise tax.

In offering the amendment, Representative Brand, one of the ranking minority members of the house banking and currency committee, explained that it had a two-fold purpose, firstly, it will act a greater inducement for financial institutions to take advantage of the federal reserve system by becoming members. And, secondly, it will result in more funds going into the federal treasury from federal reserve banks as franchise tax.

During recent hearings before the banking and currency committee, the Georgia congressman charged that federal reserve banks in late years have failed to pay the federal treasury amounts which had been expected in franchise taxes. Several of the banks he pointed out, have, in fact paid nothing, although the act requires that the treasury receive as such taxes all net earnings over and above certain specified funds for increasing capitalization and dividend requirements.

It is the contention of Representative Brand that the franchise tax is being evaded, not necessarily in violation of the letter of the act, but perhaps the spirit. The banks, he asserted returned the government very substantial sums in taxes during the first few years after the system was created, but thereafter paid comparatively nothing. He is now conducting an inquiry into the situation with a view of proposing further legislation on the subject.

By giving member banks an additional 2 per cent on their federal reserve paid-in holdings, subject to the condition that it come out of surplus earnings which otherwise would go in franchise taxes, it is his belief that there will not only be an added inducement for banks to join the system, but also greater demands for the federal reserve institutions to make provision for payment of the taxes in order to provide for the 2 per cent dividend increase.

The Georgia congressman announced his intention to press for action this session, if possible, on the amendment, which would insert the following paragraph in Section 7:

"From the amount of the net earnings which remains to be paid to the United States as franchise tax, as above provided, and before the same is so paid, there shall be paid annually to the member banks of the federal reserve system a sum equivalent to 2 per centum of their paid-in capital stock."

Spelman College Presents Festival

"Virgil, a Festival Play," was given at Spelman College, in Howe Memorial hall, at 8 o'clock Saturday night. It was written by Albert C. Tolbert for the 2000th anniversary of the Roman poet. Six episodes presented a panorama of Virgil's life and writings.

LIFEBOAT HARDSHIPS PROVE TO BE USELESS

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, May 3.—(AP)—Tossed four days in a 14-foot lifeboat in the Gulf of Mexico, Captain E. E. Bailey and Navigation Officer Benjamin Jones, of the motor vessel M. P. reached Matamoros today to learn that six shipmates they had sought to save already had been rescued.

The M. P., which sprang a leak 200 miles out in the gulf last Sunday, was picked up by a passing steamer and towed back to Alvaro, Obregon, Mexico, after Captain Bailey and Jones had set out in the life boat for shore to summon aid.

The pair reached a point below Washington Beach, Mexico, yesterday, and proceeded to Matamoros. Coast guardsmen had been searching for the lifeboat for two days.

Fighting a storm for four days in the small boat rigged with an improvised sail, Bailey and Jones found it necessary to bail continually, and at times despaired of their lives.

Anzac Ace Plans Attempt To Fly Atlantic in June

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—A lone non-stop attempt to follow the death-strewn air trail westward over the Atlantic remains on the 1930 calendar for heavier-than-air craft.

Captain Charles Kingsford-Smith proposes to fly his famous Southern Cross from Ireland in June on the last leg of a round-the-world air journey that began May 31, 1928, at Oakland, Cal.

Waiting and hoping for his success will be his fiancee, Miss Mary Powell, attractive daughter of a Melbourne merchant. The wedding is scheduled for September.

Though the westerly non-stop crossing of the north Atlantic has been achieved but once in 15 attempts that cost 10 lives, the Australian takes heart for the venture from the past successes of his ship.

The tri-motored monoplane carried him and three companions on a trans-Pacific journey from Oakland, Cal., to Brisbane, Australia, with stops at Honolulu and the Fiji islands.

Opposition of the French government is credited for abandonment by Dieudonner Costes of a projected non-stop venture across the ocean, leaving as the only scheduled flights a number of proposed attempts by way of the Azores and the northern island route.

The giant German flying boat, the DO-X, in charge of Dr. Claude Dornier, the designer, and probably piloted by Lieutenant C. H. Schildhauer, former navy flier, is scheduled to be brought to New York by way of the Azores.

Two Portuguese flights are proposed, one by way of the Azores and Halifax, and the other by way of the Azores and Bermudas.

L. P. J. Aupick, with a French and Canadian crew, is scheduled to start August 1 from Paris for Montreal via the northern tip of Scotland, west over the Faroe islands to Iceland, Greenland, whers a base will be established at Scoresby sound, and Montreal.

:: "HIGH CARNIVAL" ABOARD SHIP, LOWMAN TOLD ::

NEW YORK, May 3.—(UN)—The question that filled the air with controversy here tonight was whether customs agents slapped hips and seized liquor when the North German Lloyd liner, Bremen, sailed early today or used all their resources to capture toy trains and stuffed dogs from persons who had gone aboard the vessel to bid friends bon voyage.

You could take any one of a number of versions of what happened in Brooklyn at what New York calls a formal "sailing." Dispatches from Washington indicated Assistant Secretary of Treasury Seymour Lowman had accepted the one about the customs agents grouping themselves on the pier to search everybody who left the vessel just before she sailed for the 12-mile limit and Europe.

Lowman said the agents had acted on receiving reports that there was "high carnival" aboard the Bremen. Now "high carnival" at ship sailings has become part of the social routine of New York in the last three years. People flock across the gangplank just before the big liners sail to talk to friends in the ship salon before the vessel leaves, sailings are almost invariably from a half hour to an hour late because of the difficulty of clearing out the people who come to talk and remain to sip soda pop and ice water.

So the Bremen sailed and this morning the newspapers carried accounts of how "hip slappings," a quaint method of search inaugurated by customs men, started as the guests were departing. These stories related in detail how the customs agents patted the guests on the hip to see if there was any glassware; told how women's coats were opened and parcels searched; and it was told how many irate husbands almost came to blows with the federal employes when wives who were carrying candy were searched on the chance that there was something else in the packages.

Three men read these stories at the breakfast table and leaped for the telephone so eagerly that they almost sprayed themselves with hot coffee. They were Thomas Whittle, surveyor of the port; Henry C. Stewart, deputy collector of the port, and H. Scheungel, general manager in America for the North German Lloyd Line. They were agreed that some one had blundered. Hip slapping? Not a single blow was struck, they chorused, as they began what has come to be called a "joint investigation."

Meanwhile several guests on the Bremen stuck to their stories. They had been slapped, they said, and it was idle for anybody to deny it for once slapped, one never forgets—particularly the blue bloods who attended "sailings." Then rose Mr. John Cronin, a roundsman of customs guards, and told how he had made some seizures at the pier.

"Some liquor and some merchandise," said Mr. Cronin, "and a few toys that people were trying to smuggle into the country. I got one bottle of champagne. Still cold."

Meanwhile, as New Yorkers were chortling at the vision of Mr. Cronin with a bottle of champagne in one hand and a stuffed dog in the other, there came news of a cruise where there can be no hip slapping.

The Cunard Line announced that three of its vessels were to sail around outside the 12-mile limit this summer. The chief attractions, Cunard officials said, will be Rudy Vallee and his orchestra plus the invigorating sea air. Pleasing and healthful trips, they'll be, according to the officers. Drinking? Perish the thought. Of course, there will be liquor on the British-owned Cunard boats, but a person will have to ask for a drink of it to get it. And if a lot of passengers insist on drinking, well, live and let live, is the way the Cunard folk feel about it.

Canada May Use Reciprocity Against U. S. Tariff Rates

OTTAWA, May 3.—(AP)—A new budget was before the house of commons today embodying a system of countervailing tariff schedules which will make the Canadian duty on commodities in reciprocal trade between this country and the United States equal to the United States tariff.

The products subjected to the countervailing rates are wheat, wheat flour, rye, oats, live stock, eggs, butter, meats, potatoes, soups, cut flowers and cast iron pipe.

The budget does not specifically name the United States, but that is the only country with which Canada carries on any considerable trade in which the commodities listed are both imported and exported.

C. A. Dunning, minister of finance, in his speech presenting his first budget yesterday, denied that the countervailing rates were placed in the budget as a means of retaliation for tariffs imposed on Canadian exports.

"Those who raise prohibitive barriers against our products entering their markets," he said, "must expect that we will extend favor to our own good customers rather than to them. I speak in no spirit of retaliation. I would rather extend lower tariff favors to those who extend them to us than to impose prohibitive tariffs in return for like treatment.

Countervailing Duties.

"It has been decided to embody within the wording of a limited number of items provision for countervailing duties whereby Ca[illegible] while not generally raising schedule rates, imposes upon such products from another country rates equivalent to those imposed by that country upon the identical Canadian products where these are higher than the rates enumerated in the Canadian tariff schedule.

"This means that other countries who both buy from and sell to us these commodities, have it in their power, by reciprocal action on their part, to enable us to reduce duties to the level of the rates stated in our tariff."

Under the operation of the countervailing duties, wheat, on which a duty of 12 cents a bushel is levied under the general schedule, would be subject to a duty of 42 cents per bushel from the United States. Wheat flour on which the general levy is fixed at 50 cents a barrel, would be per hundredweight if imported from the United States. These figures are based on the present United States tariff schedules.

The countervailing rates would automatically adjust themselves to any changes on the commodities listed in the new United States tariff bill now before congress.

British Preferred.

The new budget provides a broad extension of British preference in the Canadian market with 589 of the 1,118 items listed in the tariff schedules on the free list when imported from within the empire. On hundreds of other items duties under British preference have been reduced, in many cases on commodities on which the general tariff has been increased.

In his budget speech Mr. Dunning said Canada's visible exports showed a decline of $44,000,000 for the fiscal year, the total being $1,444,900,000 as against imports of $1,248,200,000.

He said the country's largest trade continues to be with the United States. Exports to that country during the past year increased $15,300,000 and imports decreased $20,500,000.

The budget showed a surplus of $44,507,000 for the fiscal year. During the year the most important expenditures were $10,000,000 for the new Welland canal and $6,500,000 for the Hudson Bay railway and terminals.

CAPITAL OPINIONS ON ACT VARY.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Divergent opinions on the Ottawa announcement that Canada will place in effect immediately countervailing duties on all goods exchanged with the United States based on existing American tariffs and subsequently change them to the basis of the new law now being framed were expressed today by congressional tariff leaders.

Republicans in both houses refrained from public comment in view of the present status of the American legislation.

There were indications, however, that some of them construed the Canadian action as a possible threat to influence congress in its handling of the Hawley-Smoot measure.

Both Chairman Smoot of the senate finance committee and Chairman Hawley of the house ways and means committee declined to be quoted.

Democrats contended enactment of high American tariffs inevitably leads to retaliatory measures by foreign nations and affects this country's foreign trade.

"The policy of the United States in enacting such tremendously high tariff walls," said Representative Crisp of Georgia, a democratic member of the ways and means committee, "invites retaliation from other nations."

"This action of Canada is conclusive proof," he added, "and when the new American tariff becomes a law other nations will retaliate with rates based on the new United States duties.

"It's bound to destroy a large part of our foreign market. Exports in the first three months of this year have fallen off $285,000,000 compared with those of the same period in 1929, while imports have dropped $250,000,000, a decline of more than half a billion dollars in our foreign trade."

Crisp contended there would be "a still greater shrinkage" after the new American tariff goes into effect.

DELAWARE, HUDSON QUITS TRUNK PLAN

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—The last of the great independent plans for consolidation of railroads in eastern territory which has been submitted to the interstate commerce commission was withdrawn today when the Delaware and Hudson Company gave formal notice that it would no longer ask consideration of a petition it filed last year.

The Delaware and Hudson Company which is now a holding corporation not engaged in railroad operation asked authority to acquire among others the New Haven, Boston and Maine, Reading, and Western Maryland systems, proposing to operate them all as a collection of terminal transportation agencies reaching the north Atlantic coast and serving equally all east and west trunk lines.

In notifying the commission of the corporation's intent, H. T. Newcomb, its chief counsel, explained that the holding corporation in view of its recent relinquishment of railroad operation and the creation of an independent unit to run the Delaware and Hudson system was no longer under jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission.

At the time of filing its original proposal to acquire the eastern terminals, the Delaware and Hudson Company was a railroad operating enterprise, the letter continued, and as such was subject to the commission's control in the matter of acquiring any additional railroad property.

Since its character had changed and it had become solely an enterprise for holding securities of other corporations, the Delaware and Hudson Company would not object to the dismissal of its petition so it asked that no prejudice be set up against any future renewal of the proceeding.

Previous to the Delaware and Hudson proposal today, the Chesapeake & Ohio, the Baltimore & Ohio and the Wabash Railroads have all withdrawn from the commission petitions by which they sought authority to acquire ownership of various other railroads in the northeast portion of the United States.

'Progress, Prosperity Week' Is Proclaimed by Ragsdale

EMPRESS TO PRESIDE AT CRUISER LAUNCHING

BY GLENNA BABB,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

YOKOSUKA, Japan, May 3.—(AP) In the presence of the Empress Nagako, presiding for the first time at such a ceremony, the 10,000-ton cruiser Takao will be launched May 12 at the naval arsenal of Yokosuka, principal base of the Japanese navy.

This will be the most elaborate naval fete of its kind in Japan since the Washington conference ended the launching of capital ships, and Yokosuka will be aglitter with the gold braid and decorations of the highest dignitaries of the navy and other branches of the imperial government.

The Takao, laid down in April, 1927, is the fifth of her class. The sixth of this sisterhood, the Atago, is scheduled for launching at the Kure naval base June 15. She also was started in April, 1927. Both should be completed within a year after launching.

Although the London conference succeeded in placing relatively low limits for the American, British and Japanese cruiser fleets, the London treaty means for Japan, as for the United States, an actual increase of her present cruiser tonnage. Hence the construction program which the Japanese navy had in hand when the conference was called has gone forward without slackening. That program's provisions for cruisers carrying 8-inch guns will be completed in full, giving Japan the 108,400 tons to which the treaty limits her in this category.

Even before this building is finished Japanese shipyards, saved from five years of idleness by concessions obtained by Japan for that express purpose, will begin on 50,955 tons of light cruisers which the London agreement permits Japan to place on the ways before the end of 1936.

Japan's 108,400 tons of cruisers carrying 8-inch guns will be made up of eight ships already commissioned.

At London the Japanese tried unsuccessfully to obtain 70 per cent of the American tonnage in this cruiser category, but the best they could get was an American undertaking that although the treaty allots the United States 180,000 tons of big cruisers, only 150,000 tons will be completed before the end of 1936.

The remaining three cruisers to be at various stages of partial completion when the treaty expires. Great Britain accepted an allotment of 146,000 tons in this classification.

The launching of the Takao and Atago will emphasize the fact that Japan will retain a lead over the United States in big cruisers until 1934 at the earliest. America has completed only two ships of this category—the Salt Lake City and the Pensacola—has six others launched or ready for launching and has started two more.

From there he will take off as quickly as possible in an attempt to reach Natal, Brazil. His ship is a Postal hydro-airplane carrying four passengers and crew, M. Daurat, manager of the air post here as navigator; Wireless Operator Dabry, M. Gimie, mechanic, and M. Gubaut.

The plane is the same with which Mermoz recently created a record for duration and distance for such craft, covering 4,375 kilometers in 30 hours and 25 minutes. The distance from Senegal to Natal is 3,100 kilometers.

Dr. Pickard To Speak.

THOMASTON, Ga., May 3.—Commencement exercises of the R. E. Lee institute will begin the first of June. Dr. W. L. Pickard will preach the baccalaureate sermon. Dr. Pickard is pastor of the First Baptist church of Tifton.

Observance Will Mark Climax of Campaign Waged in Behalf of Local Business by Jaycees.

Atlanta will observe the week of May 19 as "Progress and Prosperity Week," climaxing the progress and prosperity campaign of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, according to a proclamation issues Saturday by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale.

The official proclamation praises the object of the campaign, which was launched at a time propitious for the city to reap the fullest benefit from a general quickening of business and industry here, it points out. The full co-operation of Atlantans generally is urged.

In his proclamation Mayor Ragsdale says that there is a general feeling "that business is coming back to normal and jobs for the unemployed are becoming available once more," and points out:

"The progress and prosperity campaign of the Junior Chamber of Commerce is destined to make general the knowledge that times are becoming better, and, indeed, are already much better."

The action of Mayor Ragsdale makes official plans for ending the movement by a spectacular parade and civic pageant on May 22. The campaign of reawakening, planned to better business conditions by pointing out the fact that industry in Atlanta is on a sound basis, has been under way for several weeks. It is meeting with unusual co-operation on the part of business and civic leaders, according to directors. Frank Shaw, director of the industrial bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, is chairman of the committee in charge of plans.

Leaders Saturday expressed appreciation for the support that has been given the movement since its inception.

The campaign, which has been pushed vigorously through various channels of publicity, will be brought to a climax on May 22 by the parade, participated in by a large number of business and civic organizations. On that same evening a pageant, illustrating Atlanta's recent progress and including a number of entertainment features, will be given at the auditorium.

Suspected Killer of 3 Captured by Posse

MODESTO, Cal., May 3.—(AP)—Object of a four-day hunt as the suspected slayer of three ranch hands, Charles Wiley, alias Charles Dodge, was captured at Crows Landing, near here, today.

State highway patrol officers and deputy sheriffs who arrested Wiley said he had confessed killing Jack Murphy, Deloice C. Fultz and Joseph Barton in a ranch cabin last Monday morning.

Wiley's alleged confession related that he and the three men had participated in a drinking party the day before the killing and that his companions attacked him. He said he armed himself and returned to their cabin the next day and shot them down.

How does this $7.00 Preferred Share issue differ from other investment offerings?

By doing business in widely diversified fields of industrial and community life, the $7.00 Preferred Shareholders of the Southern Natural Gas Corporation enjoy an additional safeguard of not being dependent upon one or several customers or industries for earnings. This will mean regular dividends. J. N. Holder Makes Formal Announcement for Governor

Reviews His Record and Outlines Platform on Which He Will Run.

John N. Holder, of Jefferson, for nearly eight years chairman of the state highway board, and candidate for governor in the last state primary, announced Saturday that he would again seek the office of chief executive.

In his announcement Mr. Holder recites his long service to the state as a member of the legislature and as chairman of the highway board, and states his position frankly as to the state's financial condition. He deals at length with the matter of good roads, declaring that they constitute the greatest need in Georgia at this time.

Mr. Holder's announcement is as follows:

"To the Democratic Voters of Georgia:

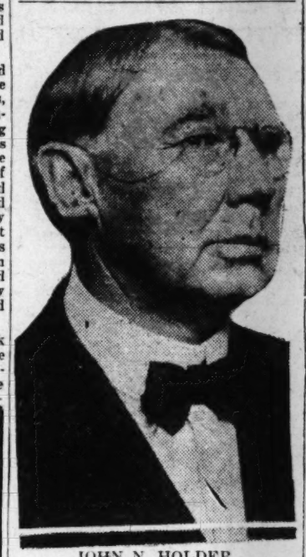

"I am a candidate for governor of Georgia subject to the action of the democratic primary on September 10.

"Eighteen sessions a member of the Georgia house of representatives, two sessions a member of the state senate, eight sessions the speaker of the house, and seven and one-half years chairman of the state highway board, I believe have given me an experience in state affairs which would be of inestimable value to me in serving as chief executive of the state.

"One outstanding need in Georgia today is the early completion of a system of paved roads. I favor a paved road system, and always have favored it. With the increase in gas tax and with increases from other sources money will be available which should assure an early completion of the road system.

"Georgia's quota of federal aid matched with an equal amount of state funds, would be, in round numbers, nearly seven million dollars per annum. This sum I would favor using to connect up paved thoroughfares reaching from state border to state border, including paving of streets of towns on state aid system. I would also favor the state highway board carrying on construction in every county where state-aid roads have not been paved, to insure that counties which are financially weak receive an equitable part of the state-aid road funds every year, and provide every county in Georgia with improved and paved roads.

"I would favor having all road work on the state-aid system done by the state highway board, which would direct what roads shall be built, the type of construction, how much shall be spent, and have them supervised by the state highway engineers, yet I would invest the board with specific authority to make contracts with the various counties to do grading with convict labor on state-aid projects at the usual prices fixed by the state highway board and paid on estimates made monthly. These contracts should be made only when the state highway board is convinced that such agreements are to the best interests of the state, the county and the construction of highways on the state-aid system.

"In the construction of the state-aid system, I would favor the use of home or Georgia products and material in so far as the same can be economically done, so as to aid Georgia industries and provide remunerative work for Georgia labor.

Would Reimburse Counties.

"Beginning at a period not later than two years after my administration begins, I would favor reimbursing the counties the money advanced by them in the building of roads on the state-aid system, repaying them at least 10 per cent each year on the amount due them until the entire amount advanced by counties has been paid by the state.

"During my entire life as a private citizen and a public official I have favored liberal appropriations for education. As governor of the state, education would have in me an earnest advocate and a staunch friend. No better friend to education could be governor than I would prove to be.

"Every effort would be made by me to arrange payment of teachers' salaries as promptly as any other appropriation.

"I would favor a pension of at least $50 per month for each Confederate veteran and widow, and will make all possible efforts to provide arrangements to pay same each month. The pension roll is diminishing so rapidly that this increase in pensions to these worthies can be met without additional appropriation.

"The census reports of the United States published from day to day reveal that many of the rural districts in Georgia, including towns and villages, have sustained considerable loss in population during the past 10 years. This is not only regrettable but deplorable. It is resulting in a depreciation of property values, and especially lands. In financial circles farm lands are considered to be one of the least desirable of all securities. This situation in the country, together with the thousands out of employment in the cities, makes it imperative to place no greater burden of taxes on the people who own farm lands and other tangible property.

Outlines Tax Position.

"I favor paying in full every obligation of the state and meeting in full every appropriation of the legislature. Funds must be provided for these things, but the time has come when the people cannot be loaded with additional burdens.

"With the enactment of the Boykin state income tax the tax load carried by real estate and farm lands should be lessened as speedily as possible.

"It is necessary for rigid economy to be practiced, not only in every department of the state, but by individual counties, cities and towns.

"If elected governor it will be my policy and pleasure to co-operate with and aid every department of the state in reducing expenses to a minimum, and I also will co-operate in every possible way with counties, cities and towns in their efforts to reduce their indebtedness and lessen their taxes.

Opposes Extra Session.

"I am opposed to extra sessions of the Georgia legislature except in extreme emergencies. Under my administration there would be no necessity for pro-rating appropriations as I would not approve an appropriation measure that was not backed by sufficient revenue.

"To be made governor of this great state is an honor I would prize. But it is not the honor alone that I seek. It is my heart's desire to render service to my state. If I did not believe that my services would be helpful to Georgia and promote her future progress and welfare, I would not seek the suffrage of my people.

"I have very limited amount of funds with which to conduct a campaign. Even if I had an abundance of funds I would oppose an extravagant use of same as men who seek positions should be measured by their qualifications and not the size of their purse.

"Under these conditions I shall have to rely upon the unselfish, patriotic services of my friends and those citizens who believe in the principles advocated by me. Their service and assistance will be appreciated far beyond the power of my language to express.

"If I am elected governor of Georgia I pledge a square deal to the state, to every citizen of the state, and to every county, every city, ever enterprise and every institution. I have no malice or ill-will toward anyone and in office would have only the single purpose of rounding out my public career by contributing substantial and intelligent service toward the improvement and progress of my state.

"JOHN N. HOLDER."

New Feature Used In Collarite Shirts

Introduction of a new feature in Collarite shirts is announced by Phillips-Jones. The new and improved product has a bandless, seamless collar, and by using a totally new principle of construction, the makers have eliminated buckling, binding seams.

The Collarite shirt uses exclusively an interlining of Van Heusen fabric. It is this feature that enables the collar of the shirt to maintain its smart, unwrinkling trimness under all conditions without the use of starch.

Collarite shirts were first offered one year ago, being readily accepted. With this improvement, the shirt will surpass its success of the past year, it is indicated by advance orders. An extensive advertising campaign is being conducted on the shirt throughout the country.

URBAN LEAGUE

BY JESSE O. THOMAS.

We are approaching the commencement season with more rapidity than the average student, graduate or undergraduate is in a position to welcome. In the case of many of those who are to receive their spiritual birth on commencement day and take their places in the cold, unsympathetic, hard boiled world, they do not know where they are going to land and how. They come out into a social order where there is widespread unemployment. In some respects it is more serious with those who are out for a few brief weeks to try to harvest a sufficient number of shekels to enable them to return to school and enable them to return to their studies. Letters are coming in from students in all parts of the south asking for information and assistance in finding employment for the brief summer months.

The leaders of every community should grasp the significance of this situation with sufficient comprehensiveness as to appreciate the wisdom and necessity for organizing committees that will look into the employment opportunities available and seek to find new openings for this army of young people that they might make possible some self help in their struggle for education and light.

It is interesting to note that Judge Parker and the negro think the same thing of each other. During a political campaign in North Carolina, the now famous or notorious Judge Parker expressed himself as being of the opinion that the negro was not competent to exercise his franchise. The honorable judge aspired for membership on the supreme court bench. Several days were consumed in unearthing his strong and weak points. The negro registers on the latter by expressing the opinion that the honorable gentleman is not competent to judge. In an effort to set himself straight with the negroes and thereby remove the mass opposition of the "tenth man," the aspirant for the supreme court position attempted to explain away his indictment of the race by saying his statement concerning their inability to exercise their franchise was made in the heat of a political campaign and under great stress. To this the negro replies, "He ain't seen no stress." The number of cases to be brought to the highest tribune affecting disfranchisement, injustice and exploitation of the negro promises to put the supreme court for the next decade or quarter of a century in an extreme tropical atmosphere so far as heat is concerned. They want a judge therefore on the bench who will have sufficient judicial poise and equilibrium to act and speak with statesmanlike deliberation rather than mob-like passion and selfish ambition.

FIFTH DISTRICT SETS PRIMARY FOR SEPT. 10

Successor to Robert C. W. Ramspeck, Now U. S. Congressman, Will Be Named.

The fifth district congressional democratic primary to nominate a successor to Robert C. W. Ramspeck, who is filling the unexpired term of the late Leslie Steele, will be held on September 10, the same day as the state primary, it was decided Saturday by the district congressional executive committee in a meeting at the Fulton county courthouse.

Rules of the primary, as adopted by the executive committee, call for the filing with the secretary of the committee on or before noon of June 3, written notice of intention to become a candidate.

The fees for the primary are to be fixed by the county executive committees in the district.

The pledge to be taken by each candidate expresses approval of the principles of the democratic party, national and state, and particularly as enunciated in the platform of the party in the last national convention.

The candidate receiving a plurality of votes at the primary in each county shall name delegates from that county to a convention of delegates to be held at the state capitol at 10 o'clock on the morning of September 20, the number of delegates from each county to be twice the number of representatives the county has in the legislature. If no candidate receives a majority of the county unit votes on the first ballot, all instructions shall then be cancelled, and the convention shall nominate a candidate from the two candidates receiving the highest popular vote in the primary, the rules provide.

John Wesley Weekes, of Decatur, was elected to the committee in the place of Congressman Ramspeck, who resigned when he was elected to the national house of representatives.

Press Association Heads Meet Friday

The board of managers of the Georgia Press Association will meet at luncheon at the Biltmore hotel at 12:30 o'clock Friday. Louis L. Morris, president, will preside at the meeting at which the program for the annual meeting will be discussed.

Plans for the National Editorial Association convention at Milwaukee in June also will be discussed. The national association has been invited to hold its 1931 convention in Georgia.

Judge W. F. Jenkins, of the second division of the Georgia court of appeals, will address the Georgia Press Association at its annual meeting to be held at Barnesville July 21-24. His subject will be "Free Speech and a Free Press."

Judge Hal Stanley, secretary of the organization, in making the announcement Saturday, stated that Judge Jenkins has made a careful study of the matters pertinent to be printed and what should be avoided. He will go into detail with reference to the subject of his address, it was said, furnishing information that editors should always have at their finger tips.

Press Haven, the summer home of the Georgia Press Association, will open for the 1930 season May 30, it was announced.

Wiley Moore Speaks Over Radio Monday

Wiley L. Moore, councilman and businessman, who recently was elected president of the Georgia State Chamber of Commerce, will broadcast plans and purposes of the state organization in a radio program over WGST Monday night.

Mr. Moore will discuss the organization "as a clearing house for advancing the economic, financial and civic interests of Georgia," it was stated in announcement of the proposed broadcast.

School Paper Contest Opened For Fifth Year

The fifth annual contest for Georgia high school newspapers was opened Saturday by the Georgia Tech chapter of Pi Delta Epsilon, honorary collegiate journalistic fraternity, sponsor of the contest in connection with The Constitution.

Entries should be in the hands of the committee in charge by May 26. The results will be announced on May 31, and the winner will be given a handsome silver loving cup as its trophy for having the best high school newspaper published in the state this year.

Letters now are being mailed to all schools, announcing the contest and giving the details. Approximately 35 schools responded last year with a notable group of papers. First place and the loving cup for 1929 went to Commercial High school, of Atlanta, for the Co-Ed Leader, a publication edited by Alice Mae Gordon and Lycille Printup.

The purpose of the contest is to encourage perfection in school journalism. Pi Delta Epsilon is a national fraternity founded in 1909. It has been on the Tech campus for eight years, and includes in its membership students from the staffs of the Yellow Jacket, Tech comic monthly, the Technique, Tech's weekly newspaper, and the Blue Print, Tech's annual.

The first contest was won by the Red and Black, of Athens High school. Albany High school won the contest in the second year, and the Blue and White, of Savannah High school, won the cup in the third year's contest.

Entries should be sent to the Pi Delta Epsilon, Georgia Tech chapter, in care of the Tech Y. M. C. A.

Emory Senior Named Instructor at Tech

Vann Woodward, senior in the Emory University college of arts and sciences, will be an instructor in English and public speaking at Georgia Tech, it was announced Saturday. Woodward, who has majored in English, has made an enviable record. He is the son of Dr. H. A. Woodward, dean of the Emory junior college, Oxford.

Glenn Rainey, master of arts graduate of Emory in the class of 1928, and who has been teaching at Tech this year, will leave at the end of the session to go to Princeton, where he will do work toward his doctor's degree, the same announcement stated.

Marion Patterson Enters Coal Business

Establishment of a new coal service in Atlanta is announced by Marion Patterson, well-known in local business circles. The new company will be known as the Marion Patterson Coal Company and will have its headquarters at 650 DeKalb avenue.

The company will feature Clinchfield, Moss red ash and other high grade coals, as well as coke, Mr. Patterson says. Associated in the coal business in Atlanta for a number of years, Mr. Patterson is thoroughly familiar with its every phase. Before establishing his own business, he held positions of responsibility with other concerns.

How would you like to lose 19 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose a load of unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent abdomen and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts which will last you for 4 weeks. Take one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—eat what you need—take the exercise which Kruschen will induce, persist in this method every morning of your life and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you can laugh at the people who pay hundreds of dollars to lose a few pounds of fat—now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 vitalizing salts of Kruschen (Salts that your blood, nerves and glands must have to function properly)—have presented you with glorious health.

WISCONSIN MAN DISCOVERS AN EASY WAY TO GET RID OF PILES

Got Disgusted with Nasty Salves. Suffered Terribly.

EVERYONE WITH PILES CAN DO SAME THING

"I hope nobody else in the world suffers six long years with piles and wastes all the time I did on salves and such stuff," declares Mr. John Linde, well known Wagon Maker, 213 South Center Street, Beaver Dam, Wisconsin.

"I had to keep trying something to keep from suffering. My case was bad, but nothing helped me until I read the testimonial of a man suffering with piles who claimed he was helped by Colac Pile Pills. I sent away for a couple bottles and began using them; you swallow a couple three times a day—and strange as it seems, they helped me from the start and today my piles are gone and I feel more like a human being. Life is worth living again. Thousands of men and women who suffer with piles are discovering that such troubles can be quickly, easily, banished in this simple, inexpensive, harmless, internal way. No bother or fuss, so why should anybody suffer another day? Doctors prescribe these pills, which you may now obtain, 45 pills in a bottle, sufficient for a full week's treatment, for 75c at drugstore, or send 75c in cash or stamps to Colac Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md. No risk. Money back without quibble or question if Colac Pile Pills fail to banish your trouble. You are sole judge.—(adv.)

J. N. Holder Makes Formal Announcement for Governor

Reviews His Record and Outlines Platform on Which He Will Run.

John N. Holder, of Jefferson, for nearly eight years chairman of the state highway board, and candidate for governor in the last state primary, announced Saturday that he would again seek the office of chief executive.

In his announcement Mr. Holder recites his long service to the state as a member of the legislature and as chairman of the highway board, and states his position frankly as to the state's financial condition. He deals at length with the matter of good roads, declaring that they constitute the greatest need in Georgia at this time.

Mr. Holder's announcement is as follows:

"To the Democratic Voters of Georgia:

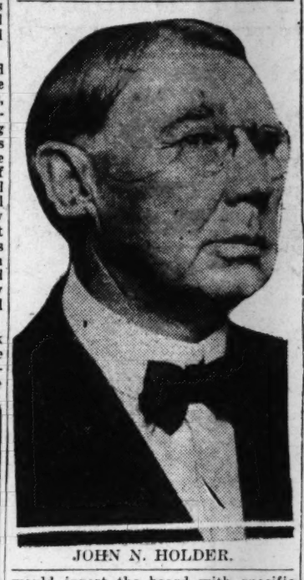

"I am a candidate for governor of Georgia subject to the action of the democratic primary on September 10.

"Eighteen sessions a member of the Georgia house of representatives, two sessions a member of the state senate, eight sessions the speaker of the house, and seven and one-half years chairman of the state highway board, I believe have given me an experience in state affairs which would be of inestimable value to me in serving as chief executive of the state.

"One outstanding need in Georgia today is the early completion of a system of paved roads. I favor a paved road system, and always have favored it. With the increase in gas tax and with increases from other sources money will be available which should assure an early completion of the road system.

"Georgia's quota of federal aid matched with an equal amount of state funds, would be, in round numbers, nearly seven million dollars per annum. This sum I would favor using to connect up paved thoroughfares reaching from state border to state border, including paving of streets of towns on state aid system. I would also favor the state highway board carrying on construction in every county where state-aid roads have not been paved, to insure that counties which are financially weak receive an equitable part of the state-aid road funds every year, and provide every county in Georgia with improved and paved roads.

"I would favor having all road work on the state-aid system done by the state highway board, which would direct what roads shall be built, the type of construction, how much shall be spent, and have them supervised by the state highway engineers, yet I would invest the board with specific authority to make contracts with the various counties to do grading with convict labor on state-aid projects at the usual prices fixed by the state highway board and paid on estimates made monthly. These contracts should be made only when the state highway board is convinced that such agreements are to the best interests of the state, the county and the construction of highways on the state-aid system.

JOHN N. HOLDER.

"In the construction of the state-aid system, I would favor the use of home or Georgia products and material in so far as the same can be economically done, so as to aid Georgia industries and provide remunerative work for Georgia labor.

Would Reimburse Counties.

"Beginning at a period not later than two years after my administration begins, I would favor reimbursing the counties the money advanced by them in the building of roads on the state-aid system, repaying them at least 10 per cent each year on the amount due them until the entire amount advanced by counties has been paid by the state.

"During my entire life as a private citizen and a public official I have favored liberal appropriations for education. As governor of the state, education would have in me an earnest advocate and a staunch friend. No better friend to education could be governor than I would prove to be.

"Every effort would be made by me to arrange payment of teachers' salaries as promptly as any other appropriation.

"I would favor a pension of at least $50 per month for each Confederate veteran and widow, and will make all possible efforts to provide arrangements to pay same each month. The pension roll is diminishing so rapidly that this increase in pensions to these worthies can be met without additional appropriation.

"The census reports of the United States published from day to day reveal that many of the rural districts in Georgia, including towns and villages, have sustained considerable loss in population during the past 10 years. This is not only regrettable but deplorable. It is resulting in a depreciation of property values, and especially lands. In financial circles farm lands are considered to be one of the least desirable of all securities. This situation in the country, together with the thousands out of employment in the cities, makes it imperative to place no greater burden of taxes on the people who own farm lands and other tangible property.

Outlines Tax Position.

"I favor paying in full every obligation of the state and meeting in full every appropriation of the legislature. Funds must be provided for these things, but the time has come when the people cannot be loaded with additional burdens.

"With the enactment of the Boykin state income tax the tax load carried by real estate and farm lands should be lessened as speedily as possible.

"It is necessary for rigid economy to be practiced, not only in every department of the state, but by individual counties, cities and towns.

"If elected governor it will be my policy and pleasure to co-operate with and aid every department of the state in reducing expenses to a minimum, and I also will co-operate in every possible way with counties, cities and towns in their efforts to reduce their indebtedness and lessen their taxes.

Opposes Extra Session.

"I am opposed to extra sessions of the Georgia legislature except in extreme emergencies. Under my administration there would be no necessity for pro-rating appropriations as I would not approve an appropriation measure that was not backed by sufficient revenue.

"To be made governor of this great state is an honor I would prize. But it is not the honor alone that I seek. It is my heart's desire to render service to my state. If I did not believe that my services would be helpful to Georgia and promote her future progress and welfare, I would not seek the suffrage of my people.

"I have very limited amount of funds with which to conduct a campaign. Even if I had an abundance of funds I would oppose an extravagant use of same as men who seek positions should be measured by their qualifications and not the size of their purse.

"Under these conditions I shall have to rely upon the unselfish, patriotic services of my friends and those citizens who believe in the principles advocated by me. Their service and assistance will be appreciated far beyond the power of my language to express.

"If I am elected governor of Georgia I pledge a square deal to the state, to every citizen of the state, and to every county, every city, ever enterprise and every institution. I have no malice or ill-will toward anyone and in office would have only the single purpose of rounding out my public career by contributing substantial and intelligent service toward the improvement and progress of my state.

"JOHN N. HOLDER."

BY JESSE O. THOMAS.

We are approaching the commencement season with more rapidity than the average student, graduate or undergraduate is in a position to welcome. In the case of many of those who are to receive their spiritual birth on commencement day and take their places in the cold, unsympathetic, hard boiled world, they do not know where they are going to land and how. They come out into a social order where there is widespread unemployment. In some respects it is more serious with those who are out for a few brief weeks to try to harvest a sufficient number of shekels to enable them to return to school and enable them to return to their studies. Letters are coming in from students in all parts of the south asking for information and assistance in finding employment for the brief summer months.

The leaders of every community should grasp the significance of this situation with sufficient comprehensiveness as to appreciate the wisdom and necessity for organizing committees that will look into the employment opportunities available and seek to find new openings for this army of young people that they might make possible some self help in their struggle for education and light.

New Feature Used In Collarite Shirts

Introduction of a new feature in Collarite shirts is announced by Phillips-Jones. The new and improved product has a bandless, seamless collar, and by using a totally new principle of construction, the makers have eliminated buckling, binding seams.

The Collarite shirt uses exclusively an interlining of Van Heusen fabric. It is this feature that enables the collar of the shirt to maintain its smart, unwrinkling trimness under all conditions without the use of starch.

Collarite shirts were first offered one year ago, being readily accepted. With the new improvement, the shirt will surpass its success of the past year, it is indicated by advance orders. An extensive advertising campaign is being conducted on the shirt throughout the country.

How would you like to lose 19 pounds of fat in a month and at the same time increase your energy and improve your health?

How would you like to lose a load of unhealthy fat that you don't need and don't want and at the same time feel better than you have for years?

How would you like to lose your double chin and your too prominent abdomen and at the same time make your skin so clean and clear that it will compel admiration?

How would you like to get your weight down to normal and at the same time develop that urge for activity that makes work a pleasure and also gain in ambition and keenness of mind?

Get on the scales today and see how much you weigh—then get an 85 cent bottle of Kruschen Salts which will last you for 4 weeks. Take one half teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning—eat what you need—take the exercise which Kruschen will induce, persist in this method every morning of your life and when you have finished the contents of this first bottle weigh yourself again.

Now you can laugh at the people who pay hundreds of dollars to lose a few pounds of fat—now you will know the pleasant way to lose unsightly fat and you'll also know that the 6 vitalizing salts of Kruschen (Salts that your blood, nerves and glands must have to function properly)—have presented you with glorious health.

WISCONSIN MAN DISCOVERS AN EASY WAY TO GET RID OF PILES

Got Disgusted with Nasty Salves. Suffered Terribly.

"I hope nobody else in the world suffers six long years with piles and wastes all the time I did on salves and such stuff," declares Mr. John Linde, well known Wagon Maker, 213 South Center Street, Beaver Dam, Wisconsin.

"I had to keep trying something to keep from suffering. My case was bad, but nothing hel; l me until I read the testimonial of a man suffering with piles who claimed he was helped by Colac Pile Pills. I sent away for a couple bottles and began using them; you swallow a couple three times a day—and strange as it seems, they helped me from the start and today my piles are gone and I feel more like a human being. Life is worth living again. Thousands of men and women who suffer with piles are discovering that such troubles can be quickly, easily, banished in this simple, inexpensive, harmless, internal way. No bother or fuss, so why should anybody suffer another day? Doctors prescribe these pills, which you may now obtain, 45 pills in a bottle, sufficient for a full week's treatment, for 75c at drugstore, or send 75c in cash or stamps to Colac Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md. No risk. Money back without quibble or question if Colac Pile Pills fail to banish your trouble. You are sole judge.—(adv.)

Decline Reported for First Time Since Civil War; Other Churches Suffer Decreases.

For the first time since the Civil War, the Methodist Episcopal church showed an actual loss of 25,000 members during 1929, according to statistics prepared by Dr. H. K. Carroll for the Christian Herald and released by that church paper, a weekly publication.

The gain of the Baptists declined to 53,000 in 1929 as compared with the gain of 300,000 recorded in 1928. The Roman Catholic church gained only 77,307 as compared with 1928 gains of 360,153.

Pointing out that the figures relating to church membership for 1929 "contain several surprises," Dr. Carroll's analytical article says:

"Among the changes shown in the gains of 1929, perhaps the most striking are those of the Methodist group, long in the lead of Protestant families in vigor of growth. It now appears for the first time in its history with a net decrease of 2,240. The figures are not large but the fact is.

Net Loss of 25,000.

"Leaving out of consideration for the moment that of the three largest bodies of African Methodists with a total of 1,000,000 members of which the only one that reports at all for 1929 shows a fair increase, the Methodist Episcopal church, the oldest, largest and most vigorous member of the group from the beginning in 1765—this hitherto steady-growing body now reports a net loss in the United States of nearly 25,000 members.

"Moreover," continues the Christian Herald article, "this net loss appears to be widely and evenly distributed. Of the Episcopal areas, of which there are 21 in the United States, only three report any gain at all. The delinquent list which bears the unhappy title of "non-resident—inactive" is mounting year by year, furnishing the chief source to which pastors resort for the pruning process.

"It is surely strange that the church which began its growth under the guidance of the great founder of American Methodism, Francis Asbury, and continued to grow by millions, should now apparently enter this period of decline. It had grown by leaps and bounds. It won its first million in 1844 and lost it through the slavery movement, but regained it in 1866 at the end of our greatest war. In the next 21 years it gained its second million, won its third in 15 years, got its fourth in the next 13 years and passed the fifth million mark in the next 11 years.

Won by Evangelism.

"What now? Shall it begin to cast off these millions, won so courageously and impoverish itself? It must know that it is easier to lose than to win and that it was by evangelism it won and by a great financial enterprise it began to lose.

"The Baptists, so close to the Methodists, are also slacking in their growing process somewhat. They as a group are close to the Methodist group, the former with 9,141,856, the latter with 9,162,280. The negro element is large in both and seems to be lacking in vigor, though the three largest bodies of blacks in the Methodist group have voted almost unanimously, in their respective annual conferences, we are told, for union and now only have to win the lay element to succeed.

"Of other bodies, the Roman Catholic has fallen behind its return of 1929—360,153—to 77,307 in 1929, which does not, of course, mean heavy losses but rather, we suspect, a habit some dioceses have formed of neglecting to report every year."

Hyde Is Summoned For Fund Inquiry

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Chairman Wood, of the house appropriations committee, has called Secretary Hyde before his group to explain the need for the appropriation of 86,902,000 asked March 20 for Mediterranean fruit fly eradication work.

Secretary Hyde and agriculture department insect experts are to appear before the committee Monday.

Wood said that the recent investigations conducted in Florida disclosed that the fruit fly existed in that state four years ago and that it was "kept under cover."

"So far as can be ascertained, however," Wood said, "no fruit flies are in that state now. It has been admitted by entomologists that the fly was in Florida four years ago, but none have been found since last summer."

Action on Postoffice Expected Wednesday

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(Special.)—Postoffice department officials let it be known today that no action may be expected on the Atlanta federal building site situation until after the first of next week. Efforts will be made to dispose of the matter by Wednesday, while there is some possibility of a decision for this coming Monday, it was stated.

Ever since the return from Atlanta nearly two weeks ago of Fourth Assistant Postmaster-General John W. Philp and Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Ferry Heath, constituting the interdepartmental committee in charge of the federal building program, the Atlanta building site has been up for consideration. Both officials while trying to expedite a decision, have said they preferred to move cautiously in an effort to hit upon a location finally that will prove satisfactory to the city as a whole.

Traffic Club To Laud Returning Delegates

The 24 members of the Atlanta Traffic Club who attended the recent Cincinnati convention and succeeded in getting the October meeting of Associated Traffic Clubs to come to Atlanta will receive congratulations at the annual May luncheon meeting of the club to be held Monday.

The luncheon will be at the Atlanta Athletic Club and the program is sponsored by Foote and Davies Company. F. R. Campbell, department manager, made the arrangements and M. M. Davies, president of the company, will be the principal speaker.

How often are the dividends paid and when?

Preferred Stock dividends are mailed out by check every three months to fully paid shareholders. Dividends are payable on the first days of March, June, September and December. Many of our shareholders are having their dividend checks sent to their banks for deposit in their savings account. In this way they receive interest on their dividends, and thereby make their money do double duty.—(adv.)

LADY MARY HEATH IS GRANTED DIVORCE

RENO, Nev., May 3.—(AP)—Lady Mary Heath, noted aviatrix, today won an uncontested divorce from Sir James Heath, wealthy British iron master and colliery owner.

Sir James, who is 75, made no response to the action brought by his 31-year-old wife. She charged extreme cruelty and, referring to alleged penurious inclinations of her elderly husband, testified, "I think he is a bit 'touched.'"

Lady Heath explained she meant that he was mentally affected, particularly on the subject of money matters.

The aviatrix, who gained fame in 1928 by making the first solo flight from Capetown, South Africa, to Cairo, testified that when she came to the United States more than a year ago to lecture on aviation she was "flat." Her husband declined to accompany her at the last minute, she said.

Later Sir James published an announcement in London that he no longer would be responsible for her debts.

Lady Heath said he had a habit of telling her she could charge articles to his account and subsequently repudiating such bills.

Three minutes after their marriage in London, October 13, 1927, Lady Heath testified her husband told her that he was going to make a will naming his daughter by a previous marriage as the principal beneficiary and leaving his wife nothing.

Lady Heath today appeared to have fully recovered from the serious injuries received last August when her plane fell through the roof of a factory at Cleveland. She has taken steps to become a citizen of the United States.

No mention of alimony was made in the divorce suit. Sir James is understood to have made a pre-nuptial settlement on his wife.

Ohio Prison Returns To Normal Routine

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 3.—(AP)—For the first time since the tragic Easter Monday fire when 320 convicts, locked in their cells, were killed, conditions in Ohio penitentiary today were almost normal, with the Ohio national guard in control.

More than 600 prisoners, some of whom revolted after the fire, worked in the prison yard during the day. Thirty-eight men, confined in the barbed wire stockade pending repairs to cell blocks, refused to go to work and these were placed in solitary confinement cells by the soldiers. Several hundred negro convicts refused to work, but the military, armed with riot guns, changed their minds and within a short time they were busy at tasks assigned to them.

Mike Dorn, serving 1 to 15 years for burglary, and who escaped during the excitement incident to the fire, was returned to the prison. He was captured at Cleveland. Dorn said that after participating in rescue work at the prison hospital, he donned the white uniform of a doctor, pilfered a medical case and a stethoscope and calmly walked from the penitentiary.

Alabama Fugitive Kills Woman, Self

TUSCUMBIA, Ala., May 3.—(AP)—Vinson Vandiver, 23, who shot himself after killing Lorene Redding in El Paso, Texas, last night, was wanted by Franklin county, Alabama, authorities in connection with the slaying of Hamp Shields last February 12.

Vandiver was said by the officers to have shot Shields at the home of the latter during a quarrel over liquor. A warrant for his arrest was sworn out the day following the shooting. He made his home here with his widowed mother.

Harry Hicks, a steel worker, father of Mrs. Redding, today was making an effort to raise funds to return the body of his daughter here. She married Harry Redding five years ago and they were separated two years later.

Mrs. Redding left her home here a week after Vandiver's disappearance and had not been heard from by the family until news of her death was received today.

Prof. E. C. Roberts Speaks Here Today

The four local chapters of the Phi Beta Sigma fraternity will present Professor E. C. Roberts, director of the academic department, Tuskegee Institute, in a public address at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the Central Methodist Episcopal church in West Mitchell street.

This occasion marks the conclusion of the fraternity's week campaign for bigger and better businesses among colored people, and is celebrated annually as a part of the national program of that fraternity.

Boston Police Head Refuses To Resign

BOSTON, May 3. — (AP) — Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, of Boston, today refused to resign his office, as demanded yesterday by Governor Frank G. Allen, of Massachusetts. Instead, he denounced the findings of Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner, who, after investigating the pensioning of Patrolman Oliver B. Garrett, reported evidence of incompetence, negligence and even corruption in the police department.

Pass Rider Wins Damages for Ejection

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 3.—(AP)—Because of a technical error in the pass she presented the conductor, Mrs. A. D. Hadley charged she was ejected from a Louisville & Nashville railway train last February. And it was raining.

Today the Tennessee court of appeals affirmed a $1,000 judgment awarded Mrs. Hadley by the lower courts.

RUTH BRYAN OWEN HAS OPPOSITION

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—Opposition to her candidacy for the democratic nomination for congress from the fourth congressional district appeared here tonight for Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen from a member of her own party as the final hour for qualifying candidates for the June primaries was reached. A few hours before the qualification book was closed DeWitt T. Deen, of Daytona Beach, announced his candidacy for the office held by Mrs. Owen, his race to be made on the democratic ticket. Mrs. Owen qualified for renomination some time ago.

At the same time L. E. Womack, of Tampa, qualified as a candidate for congress from the first district on the republican ticket. The seat has been held for a number of years by Herbert J. Drane, of Lakeland, a democrat. Drane has qualified for the democratic renomination.

The secretary of state's office also qualified F. P. Parker, of Mayo, as a candidate for state senator for the twelfth district and M. O. Harrison, of Palmetto, for state senator for the thirty-sixth district, both on the democratic ticket. Harrison, the incumbent, has republican opposition as Lees Day, of Bradenton, republican member of the house last year, has qualified against him.

While the qualification book of the secretary of state's office legally closed tonight, Secretary of State R. A. Gray announced yesterday that his office would place a "liberal interpretation" upon the law which, he said, would deprive no prospective candidate of the privilege of qualifying for the primaries. It was believed, however, that the secretary of state's office would only accept qualifications by mail which are postmarked up to midnight tonight.

ENTRANCE TO SENATE DELAYED BY MORROW

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Dwight Morrow, ambassador to Mexico and naval conference delegate, announced today that he would not enter the senate at this time and would open his campaign for the republican senatorial nomination in New Jersey before returning to Mexico City.

Governor Larson of New Jersey had intended to name Mr. Morrow to the senate as a successor to Senator Baird, republican, on the former's return from London. Prolongation of the naval parley caused a change in plans. Morrow said that he had prevailed upon Baird to retain his senate seat.

The ambassador expects to open his campaign in New Jersey within ten days. He will be a witness here next week at senate hearings on the London conference treaty.

After the primary is over he intends to return to Mexico City to take care of a number of matters pending there.

TWO TELL FLORIDIANS THEY MAY ENTER RACE

CRAWFORDVILLE, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—Gathering in annual picnic convocation, several hundred Floridians stood beside historic Wakulla Springs near here today and heard one announcement and one semi-announcement for the gubernatorial campaign of 1932.

The occasion was the yearly spring revival of the state's most famous political pow wow, the Wakulla Springs picnic.

The gubernatorial announcement came from former State Senator John S. Taylor, of Largo. The other was made by Fons A. Hathaway, former chairman of the state road department. Both were unsuccessful candidates in the governorship race of 1928.

Taylor's aspirations were made known through a letter from State Senator W. C. Hodges, Leon county. It touched only upon the intentions of the former solon and did not discuss political issues of the day.

Hathaway, however, was not so reticent. "I am not going to announce my candidacy, but will get so close to it that my formal announcement will not cause any great commotion," he said. Hathaway said if he made the race for governor, he would pledge himself to exercise all of his power to obtain enough money to complete Florida's road system and to "restore the road department to its former prestige of confidence and usefulness to the people of this state." He said he was not opposed to horse racing in the state, but that he believed it should be "properly regulated" and that he would favor such sports by local option.

Girl With Passage Put Off Steamer

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Adele Tennien set out for Europe again today after a false start and detour.

She embarked last night on the liner Paris, accompanied on board by a friend who neglected to leave before the gangplank was drawn up. As the liner started down the bay members of the crew signaled a tug to stand by and take off the unbooked passenger.

The tug drew alongside. Miss Tennien accompanied her friend to the rail. Members of the tug's crew reached up, pulled the friend on board and then, despite Miss Tennien's vigorous protest, yanked her and took her back to the pier.

Miss Tennien made her second start today on the Belgenland. Her baggage will be waiting in Paris.

Toscanini Conducts Concert in Paris

PARIS, May 3.—(AP)—Before a capacity audience of 2,000, including many distinguished leaders of French artistic and social life, Arturo Toscanini tonight made a triumphant European debut with his New York philharmonic symphony orchestra at the Paris opera.

The first visit of a complete American symphony orchestra to Paris was received with wild applause. Signor Toscanini, who last appeared in Paris in 1910, received a great ovation as conductor. Time and again he was compelled to bow to the audience's approval.

The diplomatic corps was out in force. Ambassador and Mrs. Walter E. Edge occupied a box and had among their guests Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, tennis star.

Greeting From Rockefeller

:: MILITANT LABOR LEADER REACHES CENTURY MARK ::

Softens Mother Jones' Heart

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—Mother Jones, militant woman labor leader, who celebrated her one-hundredth birthday Thursday, today declared peace with the Rockefeller interests, dictating from her bed a friendly reply to a telegram of congratulation from John D. Rockefeller, Jr., son of her former bitter enemy.

For nearly a score of years Mother Jones fought the Rockefeller interests because of their attitude on labor questions and because they represented capital. Today, however, she telegraphed to John D., Jr., her appreciation of his message.

"Like all rich men, fighting for their interests," she said in explaining her reply, "they saw their duty differently."

But though Mother Jones said she "forgives" the Rockefellers she declared she could not forget.

"Yes, I forgive them," she said. "But I don't forget. Why, John D. Rockefeller had me put in jail."

The telegram from the son of Mother Jones' former enemy said:

"Please accept my heartiest congratulations on your one-hundredth birthday anniversary. Your loyalty to your ideals, your fearless adherence to your duty as you have seen it is an inspiration to all who have known you. May you have continued health and happiness as long as life lasts."

Mother Jones' reply read:

"Your good wishes and hopes for continued long life on my one-hundredth birthday was a happy surprise and among those messages most appreciated by me. Knowing all the responsibilities on your shoulders it was a humane act to think kindly of me at this time and your message was the expression of a Christian heart."

The aged labor leader received the message from Rockefeller yesterday at her home near Silver Springs, Md., just outside of Washington.

Mother Jones said today that several years ago John D. Rockefeller, Jr., invited her to his home for dinner but that she did not go because people would have said that she "had sold out the workers."

"Mr. Rockefeller has a Christian heart, and his message to me shows it is still beating," she said.

"I can't tell him that the past is buried and we are friends again but I want him to know I appreciate his message as much as any I received."

Mother Jones began her bitter fight against the Rockefellers after mine guards at Ludlow, Colo., fired on a group of strikers in 1914, killing 33 persons. As a result of her agitations against the Rockefellers she served a jail sentence. She said that since she rejected the dinner invitation, Rockefeller's telegram was the first peace overture made by either side.

Yancey Will Tour South America

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., May 3.—(AP)—Captain Lewis A. Yancey, navigator on the recent New York to Bermuda non-stop flight, announced today he will take off soon for a South American air tour, with Buenos Aires as the final destination.

He will be accompanied by Emil Burgin, pilot, and Zeh Bouck, radio operator. They will fly in the Pilot Radio, the plane used for the Bermuda hop.

Captain Yancey also said he plans to make a trans-Atlantic flight after the South American tour is finished.

MOSCOW, May 3.—(AP)—The Russian government today granted permission to Captain Lewis A. Yancey, noted American flyer, to fly over soviet territory in a non-stop flight he proposed to attempt from New York to Moscow. The flight is tentatively scheduled for June.

Flying from Old Orchard, Maine, the aviators landed near Santander, Spain, and then continue to Rome. Recently Captain Yancey made a flight to Bermuda.

Henry C. Wright Dies At Wilmington Home

Henry C. Wright, 64, died Friday at his residence in Wilmington, N. C. He was connected with the Burdett Oxygen Company of that city and removed there several years ago from Nacoochee Valley.

In addition to his widow, Mrs. Mary V. Wright, he is survived by three sons, Charles Eugene Wright, of Decatur; John Harrison Wright, of Humbolt, Tenn., and Richard Henry Wright, of Atlanta; three daughters, Mrs. Mary Bell Seville, of Des Moines, Iowa; Mrs. Nina Gertrude Galloway, of Decatur, and Miss Myrtle Wright of Wilmington.

New Orleans Promised Enforcement of Laws

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 3.—(AP)—Law enforcement in New Orleans will be tightened under the guiding hand of Colonel H. B. Myers, of the United States army, who has resigned his commission to become superintendent of police under the new city administration going into office on Monday.

Colonel Myers will succeed Superintendent Theodore Ray, who was not reappointed by Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley. A new office of chief of police will be created for Police Supervisor George Reyer, who will have active command of the police force.

Appointment of new heads was expected to forerun a complete reorganization of the police department that has been criticized for the wave of outlawry in New Orleans during the last year. Colonel Myers plans to bring strict army discipline to the force and strike terror to the underworld. The new administration will be inducted into office amid elaborate ceremony, including a grand ball led by the mayor and his lady Monday night at the municipal auditorium.

OVERDUE BRITISH SHIP TO DOCK AT PALM BEACH

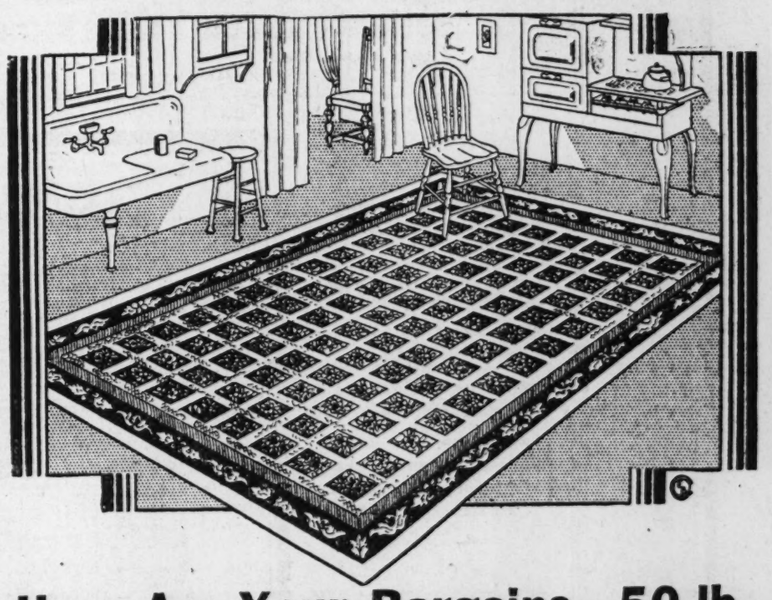

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—The Wisteria, British naval sloop, three days overdue here because of rough weather, will sail into the port of Palm Beach early tomorrow according to a wireless message received today. The Wisteria was due Thursday but put in at Bimini on account of unfavorable weather.

FACTS OF LEADERSHIP

THIRTY years ago in a little shop in Akron I began to make tires. I put my name on them to certify that they were the best tires I knew how to make and that I was ready to back them up.

The little shop has grown to a great factory which employs fifteen thousand workmen. Every one of these workers is a part owner of the business—every one of them is a stockholder. They have backed the quality of their product with their savings.

From Akron we have pressed out through the world. We have plants in Los Angeles, Boston, Fall River and New Bedford. We have plants in Canada and in England. We have a plant at Singapore—in the heart of the East Indies—so that we may buy the raw rubber where it is grown. We have offices and expert buyers in every important rubber growing center in the world.

When the British Rubber Restriction Act sought to raise the price of rubber, Firestone fought it practically alone and unaided. And, in order that this country might never again have to beg its rubber from a foreign power, Firestone planted an outpost of American life in Liberia on the west coast of Africa—the Negro Republic founded by Americans in the days of President Monroe. There we have a million acres to insure that America may always have rubber at a fair price.

The first little shop could make a dozen tires a day. Today we can make eighty thousand a day. That is progress. We will not make a tire that is just a tire. Every tire must express all that we know about tires and its fitness for its use. That is why we have progressed.

Such is the spirit which has taken Firestone into absolute tire leadership. Such is the spirit which maintains the leadership. Never has the leadership faltered. The record of Firestone is the record of the march of improvement in the tire industry. For Firestone brought out for automobile use:

—The first straight side tire

—The first rubber non-skid tread

—The first commercial demountable rim

—The first patented Gum-Dipping Process

—The first balloon tire

Each of these five inventions marked a new era in tire building. Together they made possible the safe and economical high speed motoring of today.

An automobile is no better than its tires.

Firestone has:

—kept ahead of the tire makers.

—kept ahead for the automobile makers.

—kept ahead for car owners in safety, comfort and economy.

That is leadership.

The ultimate test of leadership is performance.

—for ten consecutive years they have won the 500 mile Indianapolis Endurance Race.

—were on the Studebaker car which on a board track in Atlantic City in 1928 went 30,000 miles in 26,326 minutes.

—were on the G. M. C. truck, carrying a two-ton load, that hung up the coast to coast endurance record.

—ran 71,351 miles on a Detroit taxicab, before the first tire was replaced.

—and for 10 years Firestone has sold more tires on a mileage cost basis to taxicab and bus lines than any other manufacturer and now equips the world's largest taxi fleet and world's longest bus line.

Such are the facts of Firestone leadership.

Each year we have learned more about tires. Each year we have put that added knowledge into our tires to give added values.

And so we can say, with all the facts before us, that, while there are many good tires, the best is Firestone.

Harvey S. Firestone

New Extra Credit Offer Made in Prize Campaign

Final $30 Club Plan Is Announced; Race for Extra Car Ends in Three Weeks.

Earn a new $1,075 Graham sedan in three weeks!

Unequaled in liberality, this offer in The Atlanta Constitution's $25,000 prize campaign is announced in detail elsewhere in today's issue of The Constitution.

Coupled with this wonderful offer is the opportunity to get 80,000 extra credits on every $30 worth of prepaid subscriptions and 40,000 extra credits on every $30 worth of new contract subscriptions.

The extra credit offer opens tomorrow and closes on May 24.

The $1,075 Graham sedan will be given to the candidate who turns in the highest amount of new subscription business during the five weeks ending May 24. The winning of the Graham sedan will in no way interfere with the candidate winning one of the other awards, another car or one of the radios to be given at the close of the campaign May 31.

Candidates should not overlook the fact that while they are working for the Graham sedan during the next three weeks, they are at the same time earning 80,000 and 40,000 extra credits on $30 clubs of new prepaid and new contract subscriptions, and thereby building up a large score so as to be among the prize winners at the end.

The 80,000-40,000 extra credit offer is the last $30 club offer of the campaign and never again will new subscriptions be worth so many extra credits as they are during this period.

In several of the districts the situation is such that an energetic man or woman entering the campaign now might easily gather before the end of the campaign the credits that would mean a prize. Three prizes—an automobile and two radios—are bound to be awarded in each of the 10 campaign districts. Hence, the opportunity to step in now, where competition is weak, should not be overlooked.

If you have not entered the campaign, do so now and determine to win by taking advantage of the last $30 club offer.

Helping Candidate

Mrs. Mendle Boorstin, 279 McKenzie avenue, N. E., is active in assisting Miss Lena Romm, a candidate in The Atlanta Constitution's $25,000 prize campaign, to secure credits in order to win one of the fine awards to be given by The Constitution.

Cottonseed Crushers Meet in New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—(AP)—Representatives of the cottonseed industry of the United States will meet in New Orleans May 12, 13 and 14 for the annual convention of the National Cottonseed Products Association, to perfect plans for cottonseed grading and standardization of the business.

The rules committee will hold a preconvention session on May 9 and 10 to organize its program to be laid before the convention and the most important business will be acted on Tuesday, May 13.

G. S. Meloy, senior marketing specialist of the United States department of agriculture, will tell the convention of the progress being made in the grading of seed.

President Harry Hodgson, of Athens, Ga., will formally call the convention to order and deliver the annual president's address.

The delegates will be given official welcome by Mayor T. S. Walmsley, of New Orleans.

SERVICE SCHOLARSHIP FOR COVINGTON GIRL

COVINGTON, Ga., May 3.—Miss Annie Laurie Turner, of Covington, who is a senior at the Georgia State Teachers' College, Athens, has just been advised that she has been awarded a service scholarship at Blue Ridge, N. C., for a three-month course, which is an unusual honor and distinction as she is among the 100 girls selected from all over the United States to receive this award. She will serve as counselor on the staff.

Miss Turner, who is the lovely young daughter of Mrs. Clifford Nixon Turner, of Covington, has been very popular during her four years as a student at G. S. T. C., is now a member of the Y. W. C. A. cabinet, is president of the athletic association and president of the senior class.

Miss Inez Wooten Weds W. T. Henry In Mt. Berry Chapel

MOUNT BERRY, Ga., May 3.—The wedding of Miss Inez Wooten and William T. Henry was solemnized in Mount Berry chapel at 5:30 o'clock Saturday before an assemblage of students, alumni, members of the faculty and admiring friends.

The bride was given away by her mother, Mrs. E. B. Wooten. Miss Martha Berry, founder and director of the Berry schools, acted as matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Jessie Wooten, Miss Mamie Wooten and Miss Julia Wooten, sisters of the bride. Dean S. H. Cook, of Berry college, was best man. Walter Johnson, assistant in the comptroller's office; Glenn Morris, superintendent of the printing office, and Lonnie Helton, a Berry college student, acted as ushers. Walter Russell and Virginia Green were ring bearers. Both were dressed in white and carried white lilies of the valley. Louise Moon and Carolyn King acted as flower girls.

The wedding music was under the direction of Miss Alice Warden, director of music at the Martha Berry School for Girls. A group of girls sang some original stanzas to the tune of the wedding march.

The Mount Berry chapel was beautifully decorated in green and white, the colors of spring.

The bride was lovely in a cream satin dress. She carried bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Berry as matron of honor was also dressed in white and carried Martha Berry roses.

Immediately after the wedding ceremony, which was performed by Dr. Wilbur M. Jones, chaplain of the Berry schools, a brilliant reception was given by Miss Berry at Oak Hill, her beautiful old colonial home.

Miss Wooten, the bride, graduated from the Berry schools in the class of 1921. Since her graduation she has acted as Miss Berry's assistant. She has traveled extensively in the interests of the schools and had filled many speaking engagements for Miss Berry with unusual success.

Mr. Henry graduated from Berry in the class of 1923. Since his graduation he has acted as assistant in the commissary department of Berry.

After a short trip to Florida and a visit to friends in south Georgia, Mr. and Mrs. Henry will return to Mount Berry, where the popular young couple will continue their work for Berry schools.

2 Kentuckians Meet Tragic Deaths

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3.—(AP)—Two Louisville businessmen met tragic deaths today, Millburn P. Kelley, being drowned in the Ohio river, near Macco, and Phillip H. Krebs, plunging to death 125 feet from the roof of an Asheville, N. C., hotel.

Mr. Krebs, who had been in ill health, was crushed to death on a concrete alley way. He was treasurer of the Myer Bridges Company, woodenware manufacturers, and was in Asheville for his health. He was 51 years old and leaves a widow.

FEEDSTUFFS CLOSE MONTH UNSETTLED

Feedstuff markets continued unsettled at the close of April, feed grains were slightly lower, but the hay situation was steady with seasonally light offerings in fearly active request, states the grain, hay and feed market news service of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Pastures were holding up satisfactorily in most of the eastern states but growth was retarded by cool weather during the past week. Rains over the southwest and Pacific northwest caused much improvement in range conditions. Rainfall was moderately heavy in most of the great plains extending southward over Texas.

Small offerings of spot bran were in good request and prices advanced over those a week ago, but the heavier wheat offal was weak and lower. The market, however, was easier at the close of the week than at the beginning. A production of about 402,000 tons of wheat offal at all domestic mills during March is estimated from reports of co-operating mills to the department of commerce. The outturn from July, 1929, through March, 1930, aggregated practically the same as for the same period last year. Weekly data of flour production at the principal milling centers suggests that April production will be less than for March but slightly more than for April a year ago.

Meal Prices Fall.

Linseed meal prices turned sharply downward during the past week but the small offerings of cottonseed meal were in excellent request and prices advanced 50c-$2.75 per ton at the central western and eastern markets. Pacific coast markets were unchanged to slightly lower. Movement of seed in the southwest has been very light and likely will remain so until after planting has been completed. Local and eastern demand for meal has been fair and fertilizer takings in the Carolinas was light as the season is just about over. Thirty-six per cent protein meal was quoted at Atlanta at $36-37, and 41 per cent at $39. Forty-one per cent protein was quoted at Memphis at $39.25 and 43 per cent at $41.75 per ton. Demand for hulls was slow but due to the light stocks, Atlanta prices advanced to $10.50.

Loose hulls were selling at $8 at Memphis. Forty-three per cent protein cottonseed meal was quoted f.o.b. north Texas mills at $38.50-39.50 per ton. The light supplies were in good request. Cold pressed cake was quoted at $31-32. Local supplies of cottonseed hulls were very light and requirements were being largely supplied by shipments from points east of the Mississippi river at $13-13.25 per ton delivered Texas common points.

Prices on other feeds were as follows: Atlanta bran was quoted, bagged in carlots sight draft basis at $36, brown shorts at $36.50, gray shorts at $38.50, red dog at $41, hominy feed at $39.50. No. 1 alfalfa meal at $33.75, gluten feed at $40.25 and linseed meal at $59 per ton. At Memphis, hard winter wheat bran was quoted on the same basis at $30, gray shorts $32 and corn bran at $30.50 per ton.

Grain Prices Decline.

Feed grain prices tended downward the past week. No. 3 yellow corn was quoted at Chicago on April 30 at 79-80c or about 1 cent under prices a week ago.

No. 3 white oats were quoted at the same markets at 39 1-2-40 1-2c and 41 1-2c per bushel, respectively. The weakness in wheat, somewhat larger offerings and only a fair demand were the principal factors in the lower corn market, and oats declined with corn. Planting was inactive during the last week of April, largely because of the unseasonably low temperatures. The coolness was also unfavorable for germination of the early planted crop. The generous rainfall in the western and southern portions of the corn belt improved the condition of the soil.

No. 3 white oats were selling at Atlanta at 56c, and No. 2 white corn at $1.05, or slightly under a week ago. The fairly heavy receipts of corn and oats at Birmingham met a good demand and No. 2 white oats were selling around 53 1-4c and No. 2 white corn at $1.1-4 per bushel.

Hay markets were fairly steady this past week with the seasonally light offerings in fairly good request. Timothy offerings have been relatively lighter and prices have advanced more than for other classes of hay. Recently in the larger producing areas of the central west has curtailed haling and loading operations and reduced marketings of alfalfa. The first arrival of new crop alfalfa from Oklahoma was among the Kansas City offerings this past week. This hay was reported leafy and of good color but it was undercured and heating. Hay was in excellent demand at the close of April at Atlanta and receipts were fairly heavy. However, inquiry for old alfalfa was very dull. United States No. 1 alfalfa from Arizona was quoted at $36.50. Practically all of the arrivals from that state were grading United States No. 1 extra green. United States No. 2 timothy was selling at $37 and United States No. 2 mixed from Wisconsin at $25 per ton. Timothy was in good demand at Birmingham but inquiry for alfalfa was quiet. United States No. 2 timothy was quoted at $27. United States No. 1 extra leafy at $36-38 and United States No. 1 alfalfa at $33-34 per ton.

Memphis Population Shows 89,698 Gain

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 3.—(AP)—Memphis, largest city in Tennessee, added 89,698 inhabitants to its enumerated population in ten years, it was shown today by census figures revealing a total of 252,049. This was a gain of 55.2 per cent.

The percentage of increase was the largest in recent times, though between 1840 and 1850, when Memphis still was a river village, its population quadrupled.

Part of the 1930 increase may be accounted for by annexation last year which added an estimated 40,000.

G. S. C. CLUB PLANS DANCING RECITAL

ATHENS, Ga., May 3.—The Dance Club of the Georgia State College of Agriculture will present a recital of natural dancing on Thursday night, May 8, in the auditorium of the new physical education building.

The program will consist mainly of original group and solo dances composed by the Dance Club and students in the regular classes. The recital will also include compositions of Miss Lucile Marsh, Marsh School of Dance, New York city; Miss Gertrude Colby, Columbia University; Miss Margaret H'Doubler, University of Wisconsin.

The cover page for the program is being designed by students of the art department, under the direction of Miss Mildred Ledford, director of fine and applied arts. The students of the dancing classes have posed for the trial sketches.

AIR VIEWS AT CANDLER FIELD

Although Candler field devotees probably will find the going somewhat mushy this afternoon, especially in view of the weatherman's prediction of still more rain, one exceedingly strong compensating feature will be a lack of dust, which, for the first time in several weeks, was very thoroughly laid Saturday.

In addition to the conventional flying activity, which always is attractive to a large number of Atlantans on Sundays, something quite new in the way of municipal airport entertainment will be offered. This attraction will be an exhibition in glider flying, which will be put on by Beeler Blevins—who bought the ship a short time ago for the Blevins Aircraft Corporation—and probably some other Candler field fliers. Members of the Blevins Glider Club—an outgrowth of the Beeler Blevins School of Aviation—who are said to be considering the purchase of a similar machine, also will be on hand to witness the ceremonies. The new glider, which was assembled and flown for the first time the middle of last week, was taken up on its inaugural hops by Blevins, Kytle, Ledbetter and other well-known local fliers. The ship is launched by means of a shock cord, with four stout fellows on each of the two unattached ends.

Organization of a Junior Chamber of Commerce class in aviation, to receive ground instruction through the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, has been effected, it was announced by Jaycee officials Saturday. Following a preliminary organization meeting held last Thursday, officers of the class were elected as follows: Charles M. Ford, Jr., president; Duncan Peek, vice president, and Aldine Perry, secretary and treasurer. The next meeting of the class will be held at 7 o'clock Thursday night in the Chamber of Commerce assembly hall. Following that weekly meetings will be held on Wednesdays at the Curtiss-Wright Flying Service classroom at 105 Marietta street.

According to a mass of statistics which the industrious Lee Sanders has compiled, the average pilot employed by Southern Air Transport, Inc., is 28 years old, has been flying eight years, has accumulated 3,315 hours in the air and has covered enough distance to circle the world 11 times. Individual records show the ages of the pilots ranging from 25 to 39 years. Total hours of the 32 pilots employed by the company amounts to 106,100, or long enough to fly around the world 379 times, the demon statistician reported. Considerations in the employment of S. A. T. pilots, according to Sanders, have been flying ability, education, character, habits, health and resourcefulness.

Miss Laura Ingalls, 25 years old, of New York Saturday afternoon at Lambert field, St. Louis, established a new woman's record of 344 consecutive loops, and utterly ruined the former mark of 46 loops which had been held by Miss Mildred Kauffman, of Kansas City. Miss Ingalls' goal was 400 loops and she fell short by only 66, these being thrown out by the judges when the flier was forced to suspend looping operations long enough to pump gasoline from a reserve tank. The 344 loops were executed in an hour and three minutes and at an altitude of 8,000 feet, her maneuvers being watched by representatives of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale through field glasses. Miss Ingalls recently won her transport pilot's license, thereby becoming the 15th woman in the United States to qualify as such.

The aeronautics branch of the department of commerce dealt with 122 violations of the air commerce regulations during the first three months of 1930, it was announced recently by Clarence M. Young, assistant secretary of commerce for aeronautics. Of this number, 22 cases still are pending. "Fines in the amount of $550 were assessed and collected for this three-month period," Mr. Young said, "and penalties in the form of 31 reprimands, 30 suspensions, 2 revocations and 2 denials of license were meted out for the violations. In 20 cases evidence was produced which justified dismissal.

"Violations of the air commerce regulations dealing with acrobatic were greater than any other specific offense, the number being 28. Violations of the low-flying prohibitions ranked second, with 20; unlicensed pilots flying licensed planes, 14; flying without navigation lights, 5, and flying without identifcation numbers, 3. Miscellaneous offenses numbered 52."

Beer Champion Seems Certain To Hold Crown

PARIS, May 3.—(UN)—After persistent attacks by thirsty Americans during the past two years, the beer-drinking championship of the world remains accredited to Jack Frost, late of Harvard, who clipped five seconds off the previous best when he lowered a half-gallon stein in 17 seconds.

Two years ago this August, Frost, who appears to believe his name so far as beer imbibing is concerned, made drinking history at the New York bar when he wrested the laurels held up to then by a Frenchman. Apart from the honor thus gained, the new champion had the privilege of leaving the bar without paying for the beer, thus setting a new precedent in barroom annals.

And women? There is a woman world's champion beer-drinker too. She is Miss Helen Eshelman, of Lancaster, Pa., who found enough time during a flying trip to Paris last year to down the half-gallon mug in 62 1-5 seconds, officially certified by barmen and spectators. As woman's champion she stands completely alone, since all the other women who have tried have either been hopelessly outclassed or given up half way through the attempt.

Competition in the men's and women's sections of the beer-drinking contest will continue for another year and if the records remain unbroken the present holders will be declared world champions for life and will be granted certificates entitling them, among other things, to butt in on conversations, borrow off the barman and generally make themselves at home wherever they happen to be.

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Ominous suspense hung over Chicago's Chinatown tonight as internal strife in the ranks of the powerful On Leong and Hip Sing tongs seethed menacingly.

A leader's rumored duplicity had stired resentment among the former group and political jealousy had divided allegiance among the latter.

Revelation of On Leong discord came with the arrest of Frank Moy, known as the "mayor of Chinatown," who appeared in police court to protest the arrest of Harry Lee, fellow-tongman, only to be put in jail himself when he was found to be carrying a pistol.

Moy said there was no strife imminent between the two tongs, but admitted trouble had arisen within the societies. In his own tong, he said, members had been swindled out of $30,000 by a former officer who, according to Moy, used his position to make his countrymen invest. The purported swindler has been ousted, Moy added. It was he, Moy asserted, who instigated Harry Lee's arrest.

In the Hip Sing tong, dissension started when William Wong, their head, was sent to jail for dealing in narcotics. Albert Young was elected as his successor, but a powerful family, known as Chin, has refused to recognize the new chieftain. One members of the tong has already been killed as a result of the dispute, police were told.

Hunt Continues For Men Missing In World War

LONDON, May 3.—(AP)—One last appeal is to be made to the allied governments to locate some of the army of missing men who disappeared between 1914 and 1918.

The "Prisoners of War Support Association" is asking veterans of the various countries to organize campaigns of search to see if the fate of such prisoners of war as have not returned to their homes can be determined.

Nearly 48,000 men are missed by France and 8,000 by Great Britain. Italy, by energetic search, has traced all but 5,000 of the soldiers who did not return. The figures for Russia and the split-up Austro-Hungarian empire are not known, but a large registered figure is shown by Germany, where relatives are still waiting for 24,000 men.

German official circles assume that many prisoners of war sent to Siberia first postponed travel through Russia during the hectic days of revolution and then abandoned intention to return. Many of these men married under assumed names and can not return because of possible bigamy charges.

Numerous prisoners were shot trying to escape from war-time prison compounds and as they had removed all identification marks, there is no blame attached to any government for failure to record these deaths.

Finally there are the tragic cases of men who never came back because hardships destroyed their memories.

Brush Fire Sweeps 5 Island Towns

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Twelve houses, most of them small cottages, were destroyed tonight in the towns of Pleasant Plains, Princess Bay, Annandale, Charleston and Rossville, all on Staten Island, by the worst brush fire on the island in 20 years. Eighteen suffered burns.

For the first time in 15 years additional fire apparatus was summoned from Manhattan. Five Manhattan companies and 15 Staten Island companies apparently had the flames under control tonight.

Smoke from the fires caused premature darkness in the five threatened towns.

There also were brush fires burning along a 25-mile front on the eastern end of Long Island from Mastic to Southampton. Flames in densely wooded sections shot a hundred feet in the air and the smoke was so dense that firemen used gas masks.

Thousands of dollars' worth of rabbits, pheasants and other released game was destroyed on the hunting preserves of the South Side Sportsmen's Club at Oakdale, Long Island. Seven fire departments and several hundred volunteers were fighting the flames tonight.

New England Air Tour To Study Field Needs

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., May 3.—(AP)—Six states will be visited by 30 planes in a New England air tour starting here May 27 and ending May 30.

The tour will be the first step in a survey of Massachusets, Vermont, New Hampshire, Maine, Rhode Island, and Connecticut to determine the necessity of establishing emergency landing fields and additional airports.

The New England council, a board appointed by the governors of the six states, will sponsor the event which is sanctioned by the National Aeronautic Association.

Major Luke Christopher, secretary of the contest board of the association, has been appointed air commander. Fifty-one cities will be circled and stops will be made in 19 cities.

Bowles airport will be dedicated here when the planes return May 30 and air races, for which $7,000 in cash prizes have been posted, will be held May 31 and June 1.

BUILDING CLEANER DIES IN SEVEN-STORY FALL

One man was killed instantly Saturday morning when a rope supporting an improvised scaffold on the exterior of the Trust Company of Georgia building became unloosed from its fastening, and lives of two others were endangered.

E. H. HAGEWOOD.

E. H. Hagewood, 26-year-old cleaner living at 397 Richards street, plunged to the pavement below the seventh floor of the building and fell within a few inches of where Traffic Officer Roy Edderman was standing. Charlie Ward, who was working with Hagewood on the building, grabbed the rope at the south end of the scaffold, which held fast after the other became untied. He swung himself then to a window ledge and soon had a clerk in an office opening it to admit him.

Ward said it seemed "an awful long time that I swung there in the air." The traffic officer, who narrowly missed being in the path of Hagewood's fatal fall, was beside an automobile giving a motorist a ticket.

Hagewood came here recently from English, Fla.; secured a job, and just a few days ago forwarded money to his wife in order that she might come on to Atlanta and join him.

H. H. Hoppendietzel, president of the Southern Cold Steam Corporation, with which Hagewood was working when he fell, said that the scaffold from which the dead man dropped was protected by safety devices.

"There are three safety catches attached to the cable which held the scaffold and it is our opinion that in tightening them he made them so tight that they failed to work."

STRENUOUS CAMPAIGN PLANNED BY RIVERS

Gubernatorial Candidate To Make Two to Four Speeches Per Day.

LAKELAND, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—C. C. Brantley today issued a statement as chairman of the committee in charge of the preliminary organization of the "Rivers for Governor" campaign, in which announcement was made that Senator E. D. Rivers would make the opening speech of his campaign at Lakeland on Saturday, June 7. From that date, Brantley said, until the primary is over in September, Rivers will conduct an active speaking campaign throughout the state, "making from two to four speeches a day every day except Sundays."

W. L. Miller, banker and merchant of Lakeland, has been named head of a committee to arrange for this opening speech, in which speech Mr. Rivers will deal with all phases of the campaign.

"The entrance fee for Senator Rivers' qualifications will be paid and his formal entry filed well within the time limit set by the executive committee but the senator will await the opening speech of his campaign to announce the issues upon which he proposes to conduct the race for governor," the statement read.

Double Play in Eleventh Halts Bears and Petrels Win, 11 to 10

NEW RULING AIDS CRACKER ROSTER JAM

The season of grand opera was a failure in a cultural way.

Only two of the crowd leaving last night were humming. One was flatting through: "Cooking Breakfist for the Man I Love." The other was mumbling "Sing, You Sinners, Sing."

COMEDY RELIEF.

Emerging from the status of a quiet chuckle, the Southern league rule governing the determination of Class A and Class B players has become a guffaw.

When enacted the rule was so poorly framed that absurdities soon resulted.

To quote just two instances at hand:

Hoke Beasley, a raw recuit, who had played just one game in a league of equal classification with the Southern was an "A" man; Frank Walker, a comparatively young man with major league experience and now the peer of any Class A outfielder, is regarded a "B" man because he came to the Southern from a lower class league where he was a manager.

Now President Martin has ruled that all free agents, when signed, become Class B men.

The Crackers have such experienced men as Milton Stock, last year with Dallas; Ivy Wingo, last year with Cincinnati; Lee Meadows, last year with Pittsburgh, and Jimmy Johnston, last year with Chattanooga.

They were signed as free agents, having been given an unconditional release by those clubs during the winter. Under the latest interpretation of the rule, they now are Class B men.

Thus is the purpose of the rule completely defeated; that of keeping a proportion of inexperienced men on club rosters and thereby enabling clubs in smaller cities to compete with richer franchises in salaries paid.

YES, YES, GO ON.

The conclusion is obvious.

All players on whom waivers can be secured can be made Class B men in 24 hours. Hand the player an unconditional release and resign him immediately as a free agent..

Under the new interpretation of the class rule, a smart owner could make his entire club Class B with little or no trouble.

Fans are delighted over President Martin's interpretation of the rule. It now enables all clubs to present higher caliber teams. And fans do not care a whoop if the athletes are technically tagged Class X so long as they play baseball.

OUT OF BOUNDS.

East Lake district was reported as having a population of six in the first census tally. Rechecking showed the population was seven. The uncounted person has been found to be a caddy looking for one of W. A. Alexander's educated hooks that failed on its intelligence test and did not hook.

CONTRADICTING DISPATCHES.

"Fielders Hampered in Night Baseball Test."—Another paper.

Looks like we'll have to play the game over again.

Close investigation might show also that one reporter wanted a night out, while the other had bronchitis.

WIRELESS CROSSED.

Brother Blake, in his loyalty to the cause, got off on the wrong foot in commenting on the Texas league legislation to permit radio broadcasting.

The Texas league lifted the ban on broadcasting ROAD games. The restriction remains on games played within 100 miles of the broadcasting station. Texas league fans were kicking because they could not keep up with the team on the road.

The Southern league permits broadcasting road games, but quite sensibly refuses to allow broadcasts of home games. The Southern league realizes it would be just too thrilling for anything to listen to somebody call the plays when the club is at home. Fans would stay by the old radio set entranced by the vivid descriptions and forget all about going out to the park.

Not operating baseball clubs entirely for the love of the game, club owners quite reasonably decline to give away the entertainment they provide at some expense.

The Texas league nor any other baseball league in its right mind will not encourage radio broadcasting of home games. Radiocasts never yet brought a fan from a neighboring town chugging in at high speed to see a ball game; he can hear it down at the store.

ON THE OTHER HAND.

One never hears radio broadcasts of these grand opera performances, for instance. Think how nice that would be! Someone ought to suggest that to the guarantors sometime.

JIMMY'S COMING BACK.

Jimmy Londos—"thees Jeem Londo' "—the idol of the restaurant wing, is coming back to town to rend apart if possible the sinewy frame of Paul Jones, the man from Texas.

Henry Weber, the impresario of the pachyderms, has been trying for weeks to attach a date in the big hall to stage a real show. He has the wrestlers, but could not get the right date.

Weber made good when he did catch on. No better, no harder working exponents of the puffing art could be found than Jeems and Paul. They play on the emotions of a house full of folks as no tenor from La Scala can ever has. No villainous baritone ever aroused the hate in a whole evening of opera than Londos can inspire with one jab of an elbow.

PETRELS BEAT MERCER, 11-10, TO WIN SERIES

Oglethorpe Keeps Slate Clean in College Circles With Victory.

MACON, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—The Oglethorpe Petrels fought an uphill battle here today with the Mercer Bears, and by pulling a double play in the eleventh inning were able to win out in the second game of the series, 11 to 10. On an attempted squeeze play, Johnson, Bear third-sacker, bunted a pop fly to Wall, who threw Campbell, who had already crossed home plate, out at third, to end the game.

The contest was forced into extra innings when Oglethorpe tied the score in the seventh inning by tallying four runs. In the tenth the Petrels pushed over two runs, but the Bears duplicated the trick. Two more went the Stormy Birds' way in the eleventh, and in their half the Bears scored one run before the double play.

HOME RUNS.

Bradford Lamson, Mercer first sacker, hit for the circuit in the second inning with the bases loaded. In that canto the Bears pushed over six runs.

Twenty-five hits, nine errors, 16 free passes to first and a little bit of everything in baseball's category was seen in the game.

Although he did not pitch but seven balls, Jimmy Wilkes, who was sent to the mound for Mercer in the eleventh, got credit for losing the game. He walked Appling, the first man to face him; Wall sacrificed Appling to second, and Coach McNabb sent Clarence Stovall, who was routed by the Petrels Friday, to the mound. On "Stovie's" second pitch Gardner singled to right and Appling scored. Gardner took second on the throw in. Kimbrell hit to short and Marion threw low to first, Gardner taking third on the play. Gardner scored the eleventh Petrel run when Todd forced Kimbrell at second.

RAGGED FIELDING.

Mercer played raggedly in the field, making six errors at crucial moments. In fact, if the Bears had not made the errors no extra innings would have been necessary.

The two-game series between the Bears and Petrels offered thrills aplenty, and those who stayed away because it was "college baseball" missed a treat.

Coach Frank Anderson, of Oglethorpe, who is one of the baseball wizards of the old school, was only too glad that his club could squeeze out wins over the Bears. He said tonight before leaving that "Mercer has a hustling, hard-fighting ball club, and is the best that my team has played this year."

Petrels, Bullpups Battle to Tie.

Freshmen baseball teams of Oglethorpe and the University of Georgia were still fighting in a scoreless tie when rain halted the game here Saturday afternoon after the sixth inning.

Ellington, Georgia pitcher, did not give up a hit in the six innings. Walker, for Oglethorpe, was touched twice by Davanport and once by Chandler. Oglethorpe won Friday, 8 to 4.

Bohler Is Named Louisiana Coach

RUSTON, La., May 3.—(AP)—George M. Bohler, former head of the physical education department of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, at Auburn, Ala., was named today as the successor to Tod Rockwell as director of athletics of Louisiana Tech by President G. W. Bond.

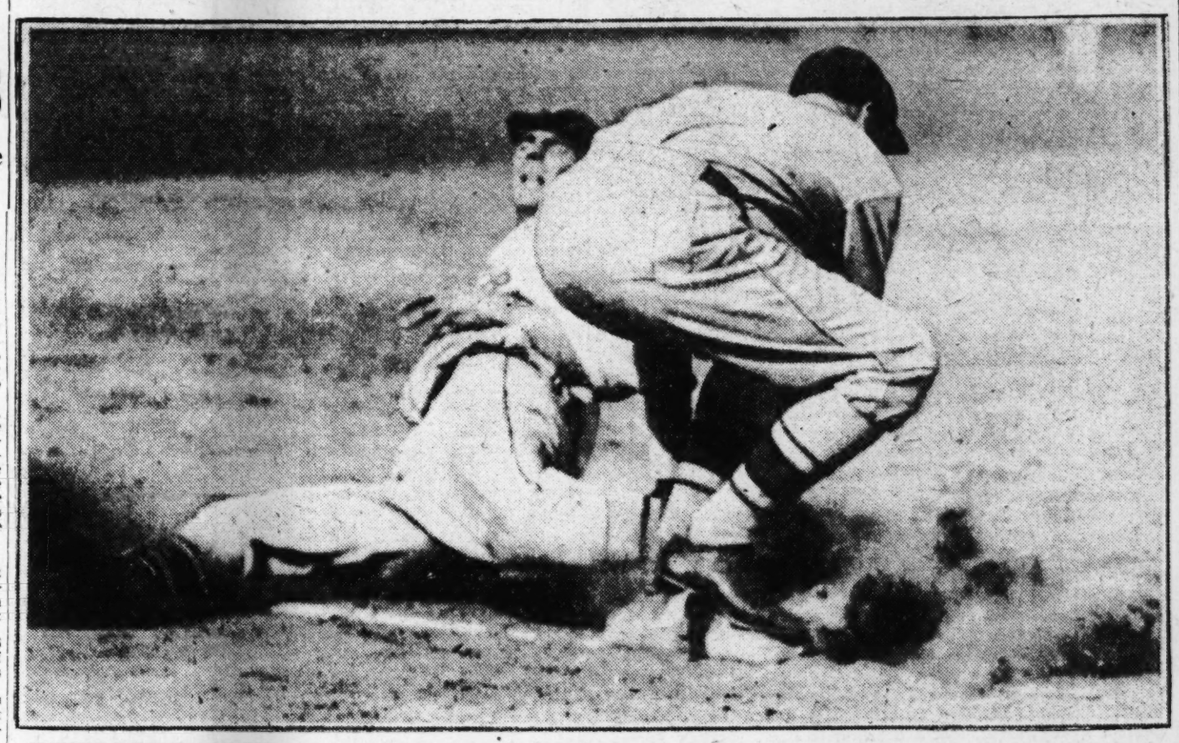

Bohler's appointment to the post was expected and confirms reports from Jackson, Miss.

Coach Bohler comes to the Tech highly recommended by heads of various schools he has served.

Rain Holds Up Two Tourneys

Rain late Saturday afternoon played havoc with two golf tournaments which had just started. Tommy Wilson was promoting a best-ball foursome at Ansley park and Harry Stephens was in charge of another of a series of five tournaments in which every fifth score receives prizes.

Jackets Catch Vandy Runner at Third

At the top is J. T. Lipe, Vanderbilt catcher, as he was thrown out at third in the Saturday game between Vanderbilt and Tech at the Rose Bowl field. Lipe attempted to make third on an infield play and Brosnan, Tech pitcher, threw him out to Frinck at third. Below are the twins on the Vanderbilt team, Joe Scheffer, left, and Charley Scheffer, right. Both play on the Vanderbilt football team and Joe Scheffer is captain-elect for 1930. VANDY BEATS JACKETS, 6 TO 1

By Ralph McGill.

John Neal (Bull) Brown, all-Southern football guard, captain of the Vanderbilt team in 1929, outfielder and pitcher with the 1930 Vanderbilt baseball team, had the situation well in hand Saturday afternoon at the Rose Bowl field as the Commodores beat the Jackets, 6 to 1, in eight innings.

The ubiquitous Mr. Brown was in the outfield Friday when the Jackets humbled the Commodores, but he took the rubber Saturday and allowed but five hits in the eight innings. Not only that but he hit a home run to tie the score in the fourth and singled on two following times at bat. He was a very busy young man, indeed.

It required a flood and a hailstorm to get the game called. The sixth, seventh and eighth were played in a driving storm that at last forced Tubby Walton to the cover of the dugout. He stuck out his head to observe the weather and five hailstones struck it violently, bouncing to first base. This aroused him to decision and he angrily called the game.

Bull Brown got better as he went along, throwing up a submarine ball that had the Jackets worried. Brosnan, Jacket pitcher, went along in fine style until he was upset by Brown's home run in the fourth. He walked Bill Schwartz and Joe Scheffer's single sent him to third. Schwartz scored when Scheffer attempted to steal second and got caught in a chase.

Following that inning and its two runs, which put the Commodores one up, the Vanderbilt batters began to peck away with some success. A single, a balk and a second single sent Lipe, who had made the first one, over the plate in the fifth.

Johnny Askew, Vanderbilt halfback, opened the sixth with a single. Bull Brown's terrific hit to left field only got Askew as far as second. He could not see well in the rain and slowed down. Little Bill Schwartz doubled to score both of them.

An error and a couple of singles

Knight Reports To Cracker Club

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 3.—(Special.)—Jack Knight, hurler obtained from the San Francisco club of the Pacific Coast league, joined the Cracker club here this afternoon.

Manager Dobbs announced that Lee Meadows would take the mound Sunday afternoon. Andy Messenger, another new Cracker pitcher, will be ready if needed.

Goodrich-Rios Bout Sought Here

Ted Goodrich, popular Atlanta welterweight, signed a contract Saturday for a fight here on May 27, according to Eddie Hanlon, matchmaker. Negotiations are being completed to bring Tommy Rios, Chicago battler who defeated the Atlanta scrapper in Chicago recently, here for Goodrich.

Matchmaker Hanlon is confident Rios will accept his offer for the bout here against Goodrich and is planning a corking good card to back up the fight.

In the Chicago bout Goodrich put up a great battle, only to lose out in the closing minutes of the fight. Rios was substituted for Duke Trammell, whom the Atlantan had beaten in a previous bout.

Baltimore Hurler Bought by Engel

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., May 3.—(AP)—Joe Engel tonight announced the purchase of Bonny Hollingsworth, right-handed pitcher, from Baltimore. Hollingsworth has hurled for New Orleans and Memphis in the Southern. He won 11 games and lost 8 for the Orioles in 1929. His home is in Maryville, Tenn.

Alabama Sweeps Ole Miss Series

COLUMBUS, Miss., May 3.—(AP)—Alabama swept the two-game series with Ole Miss by taking today's game, 9 to 3. Sington allowed only six hits and clouted out a home run in the fifth with one on. Boutwell was hit freely.

CRACKERS LOSE TO PELS, 4 TO 3

Errors by Blethen and Stock Put Men on Base for the Hit.

NEW ORLEANS, La., May 3.—"Rube" Oldham's support went to pieces first and then "Rube" himself weakened and the Pelicans made it two straight over the Atlanta Crackers here this afternoon, winning 4 to 3. Barring a bit of wildness, Oldham didn't hurl bad ball, holding the hard-hitting Pels to six hits. But three costly errors, a ball lost in the sun by Climax Blethen, who was playing left, and one hit batsman proved Oldham's undoing and though Johnnie

MEADOWS, STOCK, WINGO, JOHNSTON CLASS 'B' MEN

Dobbs Gets Break When Martin Declares Four Players Not 'A' Men.

By Ralph McGill.

Mr. John D. Martin's telegram, the one that bounced back right in his face, finally made Milton Stock (ex-Cardinal), Jimmy Johnston (ex-Robin), Ivy Wingo (ex-Red) and Lee Meadows (ex-Pirate), just four rookies trying to get along with the Cracker ball club in the Southern Association.

Rell J. Spiller, after years of doing business on Ponce de Leon avenue, and after naming his swimming pool "The Fountain of Youth," at last found it. He found it over in John D. Martin's office at Memphis. Ponce de Leon, the old boy himself, was away off. He never did wander up to the fifth floor of the Planters' bank building and ask John D. Martin for monkey glands.

Rell J. Spiller was bemoaning the fact that while he made others young he couldn't help himself any. He isn't as trim as he was when he was driving a horse and buggy around through south Georgia. But he did make four of his veterans rookies.

KIDS ONCE MORE.

Stores were closed in New Orleans when the glad tidings came to John Dobbs, but the Cracker skipper declared that the boys were out trying to buy rompers just the same.

As a result of the decision, which deluged the Crackers with Class B men, Jim Poole up in Nashville, was outfitted with a sand pail and shovel and declared a rookie. Arch Yelle, signed by Memphis, was buying a bib. Wires were being prepared from all quarters to be sent to Mr. John D. Martin, the league president.

What a job of work THE MAN is going to run into Monday morning!

Last Thursday night Mr. Martin, quite innocently, no doubt, answered a query sent by Bob Allen, of Little Rock, concerning the classification of a half dozen players in the league.

CASUAL DECISION.

In deciding the one concerning Brazil, of Memphis, he said "It has heretofore been decided that a player who is a bona fide free agent and signed by a Southern league club enters the league within the "B" classification."

Whereupon various Southern league magnates joyfully asked, "How long has this been going on?" and began preparing wires asking for reclassification of their men who had been signed as free agents.

It required three wires from the Atlanta office to get the men definitely classified as "B" men instead of "A." The first time Mr. Rell J. Spiller merely received a copy of the rule and its amendment.

ASK ME ANOTHER.

He wired again. This time Mr. Martin replied that if the Crackers had not "directly or indirectly" paid a club for the release of the players in question they were free agents.

It looked like collusion with the telegraph people, but the Cracker office wired again and said that they had not in any manner whatever contributed to the free-agency of any of the four players named.

Mr. Martin's request was as follows:

"Players Milton Stock, Ivy Wingo and Lee Meadows will be classed as B men, provided no money consideration was paid for the release of these players by the Atlanta club, either directly or indirectly. Advise me definitely on this point.

"Did Atlanta give Jimmy Johnston money with which to purchase his release from Chattanooga?

"JOHN D. MARTIN."

Mr. Martin's three-star final reply, given to the press services was:

"The Atlanta club, through Mr. R. J. Spiller, business manager, today applied for a change in the classification by that club of Players Ivy Wingo, Lee Meadows, Milton Stock and Jimmy Johnston from "A" to "B" men.

"Relying on the statement of Mr. Spiller that the Atlanta club did not pay any other club either directly or indirectly for the release of the four players named and that these players were signed by the Atlanta club as bona fide free agents, I hereby rule that Players Stock, Wingo, Meadows and Johnston be reclassified as 'B' men."

Apparently quite content to be relied on in such fashion, the Cracker president wired John G. Dobbs the happy news. It served to mitigate his agony at three straight defeats, the final at Mobile and two in a row at New Orleans.

CURIOSITIES.

Atlanta was able to place Andy Messenger, strike-out king of the Texas league last season, and Jack Knight, who pitched a no-hit game two seasons ago on the coast, on the list. They are both class "A" men. Oh, yes they are. It appears that now and then there must actually be a class "A" man.

Both those players reported to the Crackers late Friday night.

The Crackers now have the following class "B" men: Knox, Barrett and Wingo, catchers; Sheehan, Johnston, Bader and Stock, infielders, and Walker, outfielder. Bader and Knox are under suspension at the time.

The rookie rule, adopted by the league four seasons ago, provided that each club should carry five men on the squad of 18 who were class "B" ball players.

THE BIG IDEA.

The idea was to give the smaller clubs a chance by handicapping the larger cities who could spend more money for experienced players. The idea also was to develop young players.

After this solemn bit of legis-

MAX SCHMELING DUE TO ARRIVE THIS MORNING

German Said To Be Bringing Cuckoo Clocks to Sports Writers.

By Frank Getty.

United News Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(UN)—The faint, melodious chirp of the cuckoo sounded far out to sea beyond Ambrose light at nightfall, indicating to this expectant community that something was delaying Maxie Schmeling's boat and that the German heavyweight couldn't arrive, as expected, along with the milk man in the morning.

A spy-glass view from the weather-beaten old lighthouse finally disclosed that the rhythmic "cuckooing" issued from a score or more of cuckoo clocks which Maxie had stopped the ship to wind up before bringing them here as presents for local sports writers.

Whether there is any special significance in Schmeling's choice of gifts for the boys whose duty it will be shortly to scrutinize and criticize his preparations for his battle with Jack Sharkey for the heavyweight title has not been made clear. Joe Jacobs, the Teuton's sarcastic little manager, has a wickedly humorous gleam in his eye, but isn't saying anything.

In any event, here comes Maxie, cuckoo clocks and all, due in Sunday morning to start training for his attempt to win the world's championship. The S. S. New York will land him and Jacobs will take him up to Endicott, N. Y., and put him to work.

From now on, Schmeling will be an object of keenest scrutiny, nor if he really has kept himself in something like fight form and really can sock 'em with that right hand the way he could a year ago, there is every possibility of him taking Sharkey and winning the title. And if Maxie has gone the way of all flesh pots, there isn't a chance in ten of his standing up to the Bostonian, and the affair on June 17 will be just another international fiasco.

Another question agitating fight fans concerns Schmeling's left hand, which never was much use to him on his previous visits to this country. Joe Jacobs, of course, would have you believe that Maxie has learned to swing with lethal heft from his port side, but this is doubtful. However, just as long as the German has something to serve as a left hand to go along with that dynamite-laden right he will be a very, very dangerous customer.

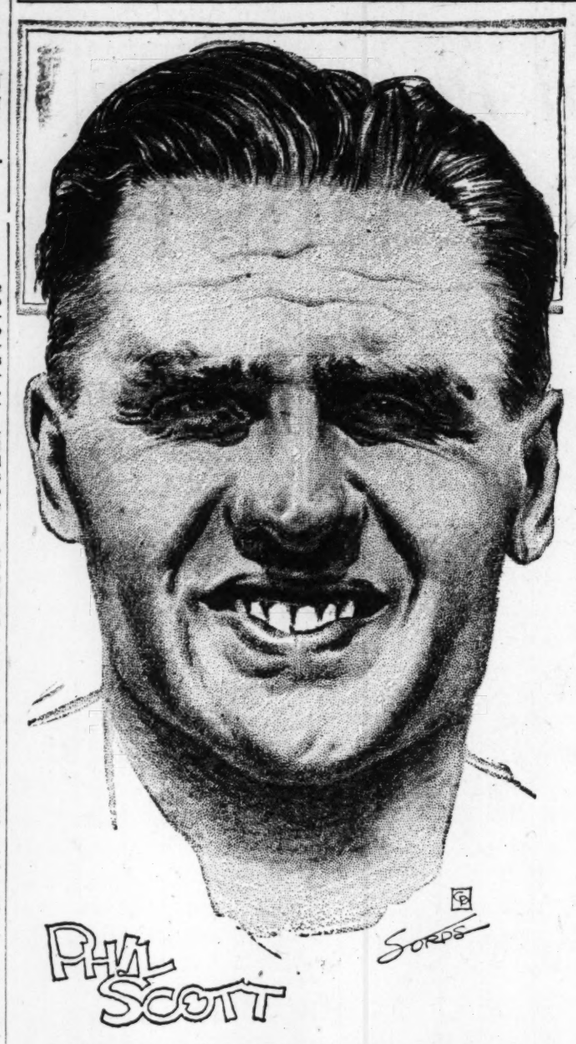

On form, his best form, Sharkey figures to win this fight going away. The German who arrives tomorrow after an absence of nearly a year, during which he has fought not at all, is the unknown quantity in the equation.

Max Schmeling is being tossed into a spot coveted by heavyweight prize fighters since the game began, a chance to battle for the championship of the world. Fortune has smiled upon Maxie as upon none other, for his record certainly doesn't entitle him to the opportunity in any kind of first-class going. Perhaps Sharkey will wipe off that smile on June 17, and then again perhaps it's the smile that won't come off.

Cities Raise Stars.

The Hagerstown club of the Blue Ridge league will be made up of Baltimore boys this year, while Waynesboro, in the same circuit, will have a lineup largely of Philadelphia youths.

Meets Stribling

Phil Scott, of "Fainting" fame, has been signed to meet W. L. (Young) Stribling in London in June. Scott, leading British heavyweight, lost a decision to Jack Sharkey during the winter, but Sharkey's victory was not impressive. Stribling has a chance to get back at the head of the contenders with a knockout.

Switzerland Loses In Davis Cup Play

ZURICH, Switzerland, May 3.—(AP) Australia's Davis cup tennis team eliminated Switzerland and advanced to the second round of European zone competition, three matches to none.

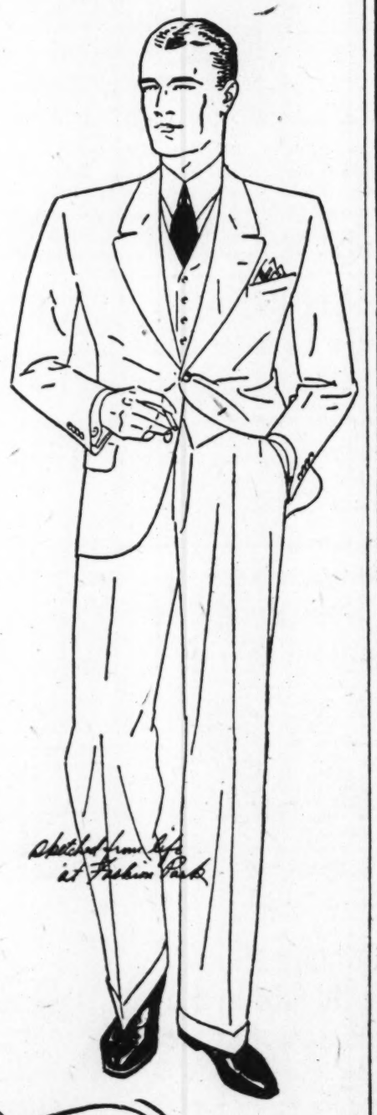

The Australian doubles combination of Willard and Hopmann defeated Aeschlimann and Guarin, 2-6, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3. Australia took both of the singles matches yesterday. E. F. Moon defeated H. Chiesa, 4-6, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1, and Jack Crawford defeated Aeschlimann, 6-0, 6-3, 6-1.

Yale Varsity Crew Defeats Columbia

DERBY, Conn., May 3.—(AP)—Yale's varsity crew tonight defeated Columbia, defending champion, and Pennsylvania in the annual Blackwell cup regatta, rowed on the Housatonic river over a two-mile course. Columbia finished second, about a length behind the Elis, with Penn third. The time was 10 minutes, 19 seconds.

Yale also won the 150-pound and junior varsity races, while the freshmen event went to Penn.

FOSTER WINS IN 50 SINGLES.

H. J. Foster was the big winner Saturday afternoon in the regular weekly shoot at the Atlanta Gun Club traps. Foster broke 48 out of the 50 single targets and 19 out of the 24 double targets. He is a former Georgia state champion and is practicing for the state shoot to be held in Albany May 12.

Jack Tway finished second in a tie with Dr. H. N. Alford at 47. He broke the first 24 clay targets but the 25th got away from him in a strong wind.

Henry Alford, Jr., shooting his first 12-gauge gun, broke 10 targets out of the first 25 and came back and had 13 in his last 25. He is only 11 years old and is the youngest trapshooter in the Atlanta Gun Club.

Next Saturday there will be a special program of 100 birds with sterling silver goblets to winners in each class and bread and butters to the runners-up. One class to each five men.

50 SINGLES.

Baby Jackets Bow to Tigers

AUBURN, Ala., May 3.—With Chester A. "Chet" Wynne, Auburn's new football coach, viewing the festivities from the Auburn dugout, Coach Earl McFaden's Auburn yearlings made it three out of four for the season against Coach Roy Mundorff's Baby Jackets from Georgia Tech, winning the final ball game, 10 to 5, here today.

The two teams split the duet of games in Atlanta last week.

Auburn jumped on the offerings of Crowley in the first three stanzas to roll up an early lead which the Baby Jackets never threatened.

Parker, Jenkins and Grant helped the Auburn cause with their brilliant fielding, while Hitchcock, Miller and Curlee were the big guns with the willow.

Shawmut Defeats River View, 10 to 0

SHAWMUT, Ala., May 3.—Shawmut defeated Riverview today, 10 to 0.

Unleashing a heavy batting attack in the first inning, Shawmut scored five runs and was never threatened by the boys from Riverview. Walker, pitching for Shawmut, gave up only five hits and struck out seven batters.

The hitting of O. Lanier and Wallace was outstanding for Shawmut.

Shawmut has won two and lost none in the Chattahoochee Valley league. They play Opelika next Saturday.

Glenna Collett At Top of List

With a ranking of two strokes plus, Miss Glenna Collett, nation's champion, heads the handicap list of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association. Her closet rivals are Miss Maureen Orcutt, of White Beeches, and Miss Helen L. Hicks, of Hempstead, both of them are rated at one plus.

WOLVES DIVIDE.

GREENVILLE, S. C., May 3.—Jim Hudgens hit a homer with the bases loaded in the eighth inning of the first game here today to give Greenville a 5-to-1 victory over Augusta, but the Wolves donned their hitting clothes for the nightcap tussle and came back to trounce the home club by the score of 10 to 3. Pearce and Surratt were engaged in a hurlers' duel when Hudgens' homer was hit in the first game.

CHAMBERS SIGNS AT EAST LAKE

Mike Chambers, trainer for the Georgia Tech athletic teams and boxing instructor at the Atlanta Athletic Club, will be the lifeguard and swimming instructor at East Lake Country Club during the summer months, it was announced Saturday.

Chambers will assume his new duties May 18 and will have charge of the lake and swimming activities at the club during the remainder of the summer.

Swimming is no new line of athletic training for Mike. He handled two former world's women's champions and was trainer and coach of the American Olympic girls' team which won first place several years ago. Chambers trained and coached Helen Meaney, of New York, and tutored Carolyn Smith, of Chicago, to a swimming championship.

He was a former swimming instructor in New Orleans and later at Jackson Park in Chicago.

The popular trainer came to Georgia Tech last fall from Ohio State and since that time has proven himself a worthy addition to Atlanta's athletic circles. In addition to his duties at Tech he has co-operated and helped athletic officials at the Atlanta Athletic Club organize and train a boxing class and wrestling class. He has also helped coach amateur basketball teams and now is ready to do his bit in helping young Atlantans learn to swim.

15 EXPECTED IN PREAKNESS

BALTIMORE, May 3.—(AP)—A field of 15 in the $50,000 added Preakness next Friday, with 13 likely starters already racing or training at Pimlico, was indicated today though 78 of the country's leading three-year-olds are eligible. The latest candidate to arrive is the Fair stable's Desert Light, which arrived today from New York.

The other candidates for the mile and three-sixteenths struggle, now here are the Belair stud's Gallant Fox, present favorite; T. M. Cassidy's Crack Brigade; Mrs. Walter M. Jeffords' Armageddon; Audley farm's Woodcraft; Glen Riddle farm's Full Dress; J. L. Ponthius' Michigan Boy; Sylvester W. Labrot's Fortunate Youth; Hal Price Headley's filly, Alcibiades; Walter J. Salmon's Swinfield and Snow Flake, and the Seagram stable's Sun Craig and Sweet Sentiment.

The eighth renewal of the $5,000 Rennert handicap, a six-furlong sprint for three-year-olds scheduled for Monday is expected to reveal the condition of several of the candidates for both the Preakness and the Kentucky Derby. Chief interest centers, however, in the Worthington, a test at a mile and 70 yards, entries for which are Desert Light, Crack Brigade, Woodcraft and Michigan Boy, all eligible for both the Preakness and the Derby.

Texas Road Games Go On the Air

DALLAS, Texas, May 3.—(AP)—Representatives of Texas league clubs have voted to lift a ban on radio broadcasting of road games.

The only restriction retained by owners meeting here yesterday was that games could not be broadcast when played within a radius of 100 miles of the broadcasting station without the consent of owners of both baseball clubs.

The broadcasting inhibition was lifted after fans in several cities had complained and assertedly retaliated by refusing to attend the games.

Dallas Purchases Former Vandy Star

DALLAS, May 3.—(AP)—Purchase of Larry Creson, young right handed pitcher, on option from the Louisville club of the American association, has been announced by Bob Tarleton, business manager of the Dallas Steers. Creson, a former Vanderbilt University star, played last season with the Louisville Colonels.

Georgia Polo Team Loses at Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—The 118th Field Artillery polo team defeated University of Georgia squad here this afternoon four goals to three in the second and last game of the series.

TARS RALLY TO WIN.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 3.—Beating down a determined ninth inning rally which netted four runs for Pensacola, Jacksonville scored its third straight victory over the Fliers here today, 7 to 5. Manager Tom Pyle's homer with two on base featured the late spurt.

In the eighth Danny Seremba tripled with the sacks full to help the Tars rack up five runs and the winning margin.

Pensacola again was unable to hit in the pinches, having 12 runners stranded against Jacksonville's four.

13 INNINGS.

COLUMBUS, Ga., May 3.—A home run by Finlator in the 13th inning broke up the game here this afternoon between Selma and Columbus, the Leafs winning, 8 to 7. Numerous errors both in fielding and judgment lost the game for the Foxes.

Lowe, who started on the slab for Selma, had the Foxes eating out of his hand for six innings, allowing only one scratch hit, but began to weaken in the seventh. He was yanked in the eighth with two on base and none out, so Black, a southpaw, could fan Beasley, sent here two days ago by the Crackers.

The fourth scheduled game of the series tomorrow has been transferred to Montgomery because of no Sunday baseball in Georgia.

40-LAP EVENT IS SCHEDULED FOR SPEEDWAY

Hamilton Seeks Sanction for Race Within Next Ten Days.

Application for a sanction from the contest board of the American Automobile Association in Washington, D. C., for a race meet at the Atlanta Speedway on Pace's Ferry road has been made by George Hamilton, president of the Atlanta Speedway. Definite dates for the races have not been made, pending Hamilton's arrival from Pennsylvania, where he attended the annual 100-mile Langhorn race Saturday afternoon.

Plans for the races will be completed as soon as official word has been received from the contest board. It is expected that they will be held within the next 10 days and it is planned to have a 40-lap event as the main attraction.

Under the 1930 rules and regulations of the contest board, every race has to have an official sanction from the contest board, before the records can be recorded and before any drivers who are affiliated with the A. A. A. can participate. It is necessary for the race promoter to post the prize money before each race and should one of his programs fail to come up to the A. A. A. rules, then the promoter will be suspended or fined. Every requirement of the contest board has to be fulfilled in order for the track and promoter to maintain his standing in American Automobile racing circles.

Any records made in the future on the Atlanta speedway will be recorded as official, since the next race will be the third that has been under the A. A. A. rules and regulations with A. A. A. officials present. In recent races, the world's record for a half-mile dirt track has been lowered by several seconds, but the timers had not been present at three A. A. A. races and were not recognized as authority to record new marks.

Hamilton and four drivers, who left Atlanta last week to participate in the Langhorn events, are expected to arrive in the city late tonight or Monday. Hamilton will begin immediately to perfect plans for his next race meet. He left Atlanta with a number of entry blanks in his pockets in the hopes of luring some of the Langhorn winners to Atlanta for the next program.

Stanford Athlete Sets New Record

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3.—(AP)—Harlow Rothert, big Stanford University weight star, today broke the recognized world's record for the shot put when he put the 16-pound ball 52 feet 1 1-2 inches during the Pacific Association track and field meet here. The recognized record is 52 feet 11-16 inches, held by John Kuck, of Kansas.

Rothert's mark was made after he had won the shot putting event in regular competition. He won the first place against the field with a distance of 51 feet 10 3-4 inches. Herman Brix, of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, chalked up a mark of 50 feet 2 inches to take second place.

Rothert's record heave, however, does not exceed marks now up for consideration before the International Federation of Amateur Athletics. Earlier this year Brix put the shot 52 feet 4 inches.

Les Bables, Stanford, competing unattached, won the 100-yard dash in 9.5 seconds, a time which would be a new record if accepted. A strong wind at his back, however, precluded any possibility of this.

Farmer Equals His Dash Mark

MEMORIAL STADIUM, GREENSBORO, N. C., May 3.—(AP)—Charlie Farmer, fleet-footed University of North Carolina flash, equalled his Southern conference record of 9.8 for the 100-yard dash in the North Carolina conference field and track meet this afternoon.

LIKED WET BALL.

Brown seemed to find the wet ball to his liking. In the sixth, seventh and eighth, when it was raining hardest, only 10 men faced him. The first eight went out in order. Dawson singled, but was forced by Waldrep, pinch hitter.

It was then that the deluge arrived which forced Tubby Walton to the cover of the Jacket dugout. The hailstorm convinced him.

Tech's tally came in the second on a single by Harper and a three-base error by Orr, who threw Terrell's grounder over Schwartz's head at first.

Big Bill Schwartz brought along quite a few football players with his squad. As already reported, Brown was captain and All-Southern guard last fall. Gene McIlwaine was alternate captain in 1929. Schwartz won honorable mention for All-Southern end. Joe Scheffer, center fielder, is the captain-elect for next fall.

The two-game series ended Tech's baseball campaign, with the exception of the Georgia series, which is scheduled for next week, the first two games being scheduled for Athens, May 9 and 10.

GEORGIA BEATS TECH ON TRACK

Young, Anderson and Maddox Stars as Bulldogs Win, 78 1-2 to 37 1-2.

ATHENS, Ga., May 3.—Fighting in a sea of mud and a downpour of rain, the Georgia Bulldogs of the track battled their way to a 78 1-2-to-37 1-2 victory over Georgia Tech on Sanford field today. The Bulldogs have not lost a major contest to Tech during the present school year.

Captain Bob Young, Buck Anderson and Johnny Maddox accounted for 38 of the Georgia points, more than the entire Tech team made. Captain Young took first in the mile and half-mile, Maddox won both hurdle races and took second in the 100-yard dash, while Anderson won the shot put, discus and javelin. Graydon, of Tech, did not contest in the javelin, a sore arm forcing him to scratch.

Hamm, Tech's ace, won the 100, 220 and the broad jump.

The Tech-Georgia freshman teams tied up, both frosh squads romping off with seven first places.

SUMMARY.

Purple Trackmen Defeat Feds, 91-18

Winning 12 first places, Boys' High's track team easily defeated the Commodore Fed cindermen, 91 to 18, Saturday afternoon at the prison.

Coach Ward's team was in much better condition than the Feds and Kelly was the star, with first places in the 50-yard dash, the 100-yard dash and the 220-yard dash.

The summaries:

50-yard—Kelly, B. H. S., first; Massey, Feds, second; Fisk, Fed, third. Time, 5 3-5 seconds.

100-yard—Kelly, B. H. S., first; Shahbaz, B. H. S., second; Turman, B. H. S., third. Time, 10 2-5 seconds.

440-yard—Howard, B. H. S., first; Wesley, B. H. S., second; Coles, Feds, third. Time, 54 3-5 seconds.

880-yard—Ward, B. H. S., first; Stamp, Feds, second; Green, B. H. S., third. Time, 2 minutes 17 seconds.

Standing broad jump—Kelly, B. H. S., first; Gatlin, B. H. S., second; Robbins, Feds, third. Distance, 10 feet.

Shot put—Gatlin, B. H. S., first; Howe, B. H. S., second; Eberhardt, Feds, third. Distance, 44 feet 2 inches.

High hurdles—Thrash, B. H. S., first; Philpot, B. H. S., second; O'Malley, Feds, third. Time, 10 seconds.

One-mile run—Ward, B. H. S., first; O'Malley, Feds, second; Parker, B. H. S., third.

440-yard relay and 880-yard relay were both won by Boys' High with Kelly, Turman, Howard and Shahbaz on the team.

High jump—Clark, B. H. S., first; Robbins, Feds, second; Ward, B. H. S., third. Height, 5 feet 7 inches.

Loyola Star Sets New Dash Record

ALEXANDRIA, La., May 3.—(AP) Establishing a new S. I. A. A. record in the 220-yard dash and giving the 100-yard dash mark a shave by one-tenth of a second, Toppino, Loyola University athlete, led his team to victory in the Third District Southern Intercollegiate Athletic Association track and field meet held at Louisiana College here today.

Toppino bettered the S. I. A. A. 220-yard record, held by Dana Jenkins, of L. S. U., at 21.8 seconds, by four-tenths of a second, his new mark being 21.4 seconds. Jenkins' record was set in 1916.

Loyola scored a total of 49 1-3 points to win the meet. Southwestern of Louisiana took second with 33 points. Mississippi College third with 26 and State Normal fourth with 24. Louisiana Tech tallied 17 points and Louisiana College 14 1-3.

Auburn Trackmen Defeat Tulane

AUBURN, Ala., May 3.—Auburn defeated Tulane in a dual track meet here Saturday afternoon, 60 1-2 to 51 1-2. The victory over the Greenies was the third straight for Coach Wilbur Hutsell's cindermen, as they defeated University of Georgia in a dual meet in Athens two weeks ago and won the Southeastern A. A. U. meet last Saturday in Atlanta.

Tulane and Auburn were evenly matched and the meet was not decided until the final event.

William "Primo" Coleman, Birmingham, broke his second Auburn record this season when he hurled the discus for a distance of 137 feet and 1 inch. He had previously shattered the Auburn record in the shot put, which was also held by Nick Carter.

MARKS BROKEN IN FOUR EVENTS AT COLUMBUS

Crowd of 15,000 Sees Ohio State Defend Title in Fast Field.

OHIO STADIUM, COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 3.—(AP)—George Simpson, of Ohio State, keyed highly to defend his world record against two challengers on his home track before 15,000 spectators, today contributed another "9.5" for the record books of the 100-yard dash during the Ohio relays.

He convinced the handful of remaining skeptics that he is definitely the master of Eddie Tolan, University of Michigan negro, and Claude Bracey, Rice Institute flyer, two of his foremost rivals, and that he is probably the fastest sprinter of the year just as he was in 1929.

LEAVES FIELD.

Just as though his victory over Bracey and Tolan in the national collegiate meet last year had not been enough, Simpson left them about two yards behind today. Tolan, who got a slightly faster start, finished second, with Bracey lagging a few inches.

Simpson's victory was within one-tenth of a second of his world record of 9.4, made as today's mark was, with the use of starting blocks. It allowed him to win the century of the Ohio relays for the third straight year. Last week he won the century at the Penn games for the third time.

Under sunny skies, a fast track and no hindering wind, athletes from 140 universities, colleges and high schools in 17 states broke records in 22 of the 35 events during the seventh annual renewal of the big two-day meet. Another was tied. These included a new national inter-scholastic record of 13 feet, 4 inches in the pole vault by John Wonsowicz, of Proebel High school, Gary, Ind., and the equalling of the national inter-scholastic mile relay record of 3:26.7 by Newark, N. J. Preparatory school yesterday.

NARROW ESCAPES.

No world records fell today but three of them escaped but narrowly. In addition to Simpson's attack on the "hundred," Tam Warne, of Northwestern University, cleared 13 feet, 11 1-8 inches in the pole vault. The world record by Sabin Carr, of Yale, is 14 feet even. Warne was pressed as high as 13 feet, 6 inches by Verne McDermott, of Illinois. He failed three times with the bar set at 14 feet, 2 1-4 inches, but his efforts took spectators' breaths away.

University of Illinois hurdlers, Etnyre, Gage, Rodgers and Sentman, came within one-tenth of a second of the world record of 1:01.8 in the 480-yard shuttle hurdle relay. Others were seriously threatened but not so closely.

Records fell in four of the seven university relays, all five college relays, four of the five relays for high and prep schools and in four of the 10 individual events for college athletes, among others.

HONORS DIVIDED.

The Universities of Michigan and Illinois divided honors for the meet on an unofficial basis of team comparisons. The Wolverines won the quarter-mile and one-mile relays, breaking the meet record in the latter, while H. Campbell won the hammer throw with a new record of 164 feet, 1 inch, and Broker Brooks took the discus.

Illinois half-mile and shuttle hurdle relay teams were victorious, while Lee Sentman broke the record in the 120-yard high hurdles with his time of 14.8 seconds.

In the other university relays, Notre Dame's half-mile stars broke the record for the two-mile relay by badly outdistancing Ohio State in 7:48.6.

Indiana won the four-mile relay and set a new record at 17:52.3. Purdue won the distance medley relay and broke its 1929 record with the time of 10:25.7.

Berlinger Leads Penn To Victory

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—(AP)—Barney Berlinger's fine performances today gave the University of Pennsylvania track team a close victory over the Yale athletes on Franklin field. The score was Pennsylvania 68 1-2, Yale 66 1-2.

Barney, who last week won the decathlon championship at the Pennsylvania relays, scored a total of 15 points. He took first place in the shotput and javelin throws; second in the pole vault, and third in the discus throw and broad jump.

T. P. Avery scored 10 points for Yale by winning the high jump and the discus throw.

Ruth Is Member Of 10 Winners

This is Babe Ruth's seventeenth year in the big show. In the 17 years he has been on 10 pennant-winning teams.

Ty Cobb got in early at Detroit and then played nearly 20 years without seeing another flag in his ball yard.

George Sisler, one of the game's greatest, never has been in a world's series.

There is something besides the money end of it. It must be a keen disappointment to one of the world's greatest players of all time to miss year after year the feel of a championship.

But, unfortunately, there is no way to divide up the honors. A good man is often buried with a hopeless club—but not often these days. A weak team sells an outstanding star so that it can buy players who will give it a better all-around club.

Auburn Scores Two Runs In Eighth To Defeat Georgia, 8 to 7

BAD JUDGMENT BY CHANDLER HELPS TIGERS

Game Is Played on Muddy Field; Errors Are Frequent.

ATHENS, Ga, May 3.—A brace of hits, two Bulldog errors and bad judgment on the part of Spurgeon Chandler, Georgia hurler, enabled the Auburn Tigers to score two runs in the eighth inning of the second game of the Georgia-Auburn series today and win the game, 8-7.

Auburn came to bat in the eighth inning with the Bulldogs leading, 7 to 5, although Chandler had already allowed the Tigers 13 hits. Brown, first up for the Tigers, grounded out. Riley, Tiger second baseman, singled and took second when McGaughey dropped the ball after Chandler had retrieved Prim's line drive and had thrown it to second. Prim was at first. Hodges singled and Riley was safe at home when Harry Gorman dropped the ball on the throw-in.

Jim Crawford, who hit three times in five trips to the plate, headed for home. Catfish Smith's throw-in was perfect, but Chandler, who had come in to back up Gorman, stepped in front of the Bulldog catcher and grabbed the ball. Prim was safe before Chandler could give the ball to Gorman.

LEAD CHANGES.

The lead changed hands five times during the course of the game, which was played on a wet and muddy diamond. It had rained heavily here for several hours prior to the game and the rain ceased only half an hour before it started. Auburn jumped off to an early lead with two runs, but the Bulldogs went ahead in the third inning when Day, McGaughey and Downes scored on two doubles, a single and two Tiger errors. The Bulldogs scored two runs in the fifth, but the Tigers went ahead, 6 to 5, in the sixth when they scored four runs on three singles, two bases on balls and an error by Rothstein.

Georgia took the lead in the seventh inning, scoring two runs after two were out. McGaughey, who had hit two doubles in three previous trips to bat, singled after Day and Chandler had gone out. Downes doubled and joined McGaughey on the bases. Bennie Rothstein, who emerged from a batting slump this afternoon, doubled to score both men. Rothstein took third on an error but was left standing there when Davenport grounded out.

Both teams played raggedly afield the entire game; Auburn chalked up five errors, while the Bulldogs made four. Rothstein's error in the sixth inning allowed two runs to cross the plate. Errors by Riley, Newton and Lloyd, Tiger infielders, aided the Bulldogs in sending across two runs in the third inning.

PRIM HOLDS 'EM.

Lefty Prim, whom the Bulldogs sent to the showers in a game at Auburn, held the Georgians to eight hits during his nine innings on the mound, while his mates were reaching Spurgeon Chandler for 15 hits in eight innings. Chandler was batted freely by the Tigers, five of the hits made off him going for doubles. He walked two men in the sixth and enabled the Tigers to send over four runs. Lefty Simpson, who relieved Chandler in the ninth, gave up one hit.

Cliff McGaughey, Austie Downes and Bennie Rothstein were the batting stars for the Bulldogs. McGaughey collected two doubles and a single in four accredited trips to the plate. Downes got two hits in four trips and Rothstein got two doubles in his three accredited times at bat. Between them the three either scored or batted in all of the seven Bulldog runs. Rothstein batted in three runs. Slim Newton, Lanky Tiger first baseman, carried off hitting honors with four, one of them a double, in five times at bat. Jim Crawford, center fielder, and Lloyd, third sacker, got three hits apiece, helping score four of their team's runs.

Catfish Smith, in center field, and Austie Downes, the diminutive left fielder, made two running catches in the ninth inning to keep the Tigers from further scoring. Smith went back against the center field fence to make a one-handed catch of a fly ball that Pate had labeled "homer." Downes had to hurl himself high in the air after a running start to get Riley's hard hit fly and retire the side.

Emory Swimmers Meet on May 17

Emory University's annual inter-organization swimming meet will be held on May 17, which is to be featured as Dad's Day at the school. The Sigma Alpha Epsilons are highly favored to repeat their win of last year, with such men as Art Merril, Henry Sherman and Allan Davis, all lettermen on the varsity squad, to swim for them.

Should the S. A. E.'s win the meet this year they will gain permanent possession of the large silver cup which is being offered by the Emory Athletic Association.

The following events will be held: 50-yard dash, 100-yard free style, 100-yard backstroke, 100-yard breast stroke, 220-yard free style, fancy diving, and a four-man relay for the length of the Emory pool on each lap. Four places will be counted in each event, and ribbons will be awarded to the individual winners.

"Jeem" Londos in a Bit of Fast Action

Veteran Baseball Men Like Duke's Great Team

By Edward J. Neil,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—If Duke University's crack baseball team, from down North Carolina way, doesn't turn out something big in major league prospects, a couple of famous old-timers are going to be greatly disappointed.

LOCAL POLOISTS AT FT. BENNING

Horse Guard, McPherson Play Infantry School Teams This Afternoon.

Polo fans will not see their customary game at Fort McPherson this afternoon due to the presence of both the Horse Guard and Post teams at Fort Benning, Ga. The two Atlanta teams, in a double-header, play the first of a series of games with the infantry school's best today.

The Fort McPherson players are: Major Gus Franke, Major G. I. Tolson, Captain Allie Wing, Lieutenant William S. Biddle, Oscar Schubert and Lieutenant Spettel.

The next game at the Fort will be played next Sunday at 3:30.

Georgia Team In Tourney.

The polo team of the University of Georgia will compete in the fourth corps area southern circuit elimination polo tournament to be held here from May 25 to June 8.

The University of Georgia is the only southern institution maintaining polo as a sport. The game was introduced at the university in 1928 by Major A. T. Colley, cavalry (D. O. L.), professor of military science and tactics. Despite the handicap of a limited number of mounts to select ponies from and lack of outside competition, the sport has gained a foothold second to none of the minor sports at the university. There are at present 12 promising players on the polo squad and competition for the varsity is keen.

Last year games were played by the varsity team with Fort McPherson and with the Governor's Horse Guard, while this year games have been played against the Fort McPherson and Fort Bragg teams. In each of these games the team has played very creditably. Two games are also scheduled with the Savannah team on May 1 and 3.

BULLDOG LINEUP.

The university team lineup will be as follows: No. 1, Charles E. Bell, Jr.; No. 2, James M. McIntire; No. 3, Noble W. Jones; back, J. E. Palmour, Jr.; substitutes, William D. Harden and Walter A. Sams, Jr.

Jones is team captain and a senior in the university. He has been playing polo at the university for the past three years and also with the Savannah team where he made good.

McIntire is a sophomore. He also is a resident of Savannah, Ga., where he has been playing with the national guard team for the past several years. He has been playing at Athens for the past two years.

Bell is a junior, and is a resident of Jacksonville, Fla. He has been a member of the polo squad of the university since the sport was introduced here.

GAINESVILLE STAR.

Palmour is a senior in the law school of the university and has been playing polo for the past two years. He is a resident of Gainesville, Ga. He was a member of the freshman football team in 1925 and of the varsity boxing squad in 1928.

Harden is a junior in law school and has been playing polo for two years. He is a resident of Augusta, Ga. Sams, a senior in the university, has been playing polo for the past two years. He is team manager, and a resident of Athens.

Panthers Win Two.

SEBRING, Fla., May 3.—Atlanta Panthers defeated Sebring Red Sox in both games of a double-header here this afternoon. The visitors won the first game 12 to 0 and added the second by a 6-to-0 score.

In both games the visitors scored in the early innings and maintained a safe lead throughout.

The Panthers will play two more games in Florida before returning to Atlanta.

Yesterday Thomas, as big and brown now as in the days when he was the finest "target" in baseball and Coombs was one of the greatest hurlers, took a day off for a number of reasons. He wanted to fan on the bench with his old battery mate, while admiring some of Duke's young stars, and besides he had a promise to keep.

LIKES KISTLER.

Coombs' husky young first baseman, a hitting lad named Henry Kistler, has an idea that he can hit only with the bats of Al Simmons, the Athletics great clouter. A few days ago he broke the wand he had been using all spring. A hurry call was sent Thomas to get another.

Ira sneaked into the Athletic dressing room as soon as he got the call and quietly "borrowed" one of Simmons' prize woods. Just as he was setting out, Al nailed him.

"What's the idea," he demanded, "Give me that bat. That's mine."

It took all of Ira's tact and size to get him out of the room safely with the club. Simmons subsided only when the dire need of the Duke youngster was explained to him. Thomas brought the club to New York in time for Kistler to use it against New York University. With the bat, Kistler made three hits, two two-baggers and a triple.

TWO GOOD ONES.

Thomas thinks that both Kistler and Werber, the crack shortstop, will make the big league grade. He thinks too, that four years of college baseball under competent coaching is the finest preparation a youngster can get for the majors.

"College," he said, "not only gives the boy a fine education but in the case of a young ball player it gives him a fine environment to work in. He escapes the bad contacts possible in the small leagues, the overwork that might ruin a pitching arm, and the disappointments that spoil his disposition.

"In addition he gets better instruction, more and more the majors are looking in the colleges for replacement of the old liners. It's a great thing for baseball."

Bailey To Promote Bouts at 81 Theater

Thirty rounds of colored boxing will be staged Friday night at 81 theater, Decatur street, Manager Tom Bailey announced Saturday. Manager Bailey has secured some of the best colored talent in the south and promises nothing but fast action in every bout.

The main event brings together two hard-hitting boys in K. O. Randall, of Macon, and Henry Johnson, of Pensacola, Fla. Randall has made himself quite a reputation in this section and is anxious to add the Pensacola battler to his list.

Battling Cyclone and Gene Thomas will fight six rounds in the semi-windup. Jimmy Stafford fights Dick Banner in six rounds. Young Billy Hooper, namesake of the old-time fighter, meets George Ring in four rounds. K. O. Tom and Henry Wood and Lightning Howard and Kid Radford are other matches on the program. A battle royal will open the show. Special seats will be reserved for white people.

Golf Pro's Life Is Tough—Sarazen

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Gene Sarazen, former national open golf champion, believes golf conditions have become better in the last ten years for every one except professionals.

"One of the principal money making mediums for the pro is his shop," Sarazen, who is in Chicago playing in a vaudeville act with Johnny Farrell, another former open titleholder, "but you'd be surprised at the number of golfers who know somebody who is able to get them a price on equipment.

"Exhibitions don't pay as well as they did," Sarazen added. "The average person interested in the game would a lot rather play it than watch it."

Fifth One.

Londos Meets Jones Here Tuesday Night

Great Match Expected When Two Favorites Clash on Mat; Paxos on Card.

Wrestling is next on the boards at the city auditorium now that the big fellows of grand opera are out of the way.

Promoter Henry Weber is turning Atlantans that way on Tuesday night when Jim Londos and Paul Jones, both headliners, meet in the feature match of a double-header heavyweight card.

It required weeks of work to obtain the signature of Jim Londos, famous Greek champion, to the contract. There was some spirited bidding for the match but Weber landed it.

Londos, who was not at his prime when he was defeated by Stecher, has come along to occupy the spotlight with Dick Shikat.

Only one wrestler placed the $5,000 guarantee with the national commission a few weeks ago as an indication of willingness to wrestle Londos.

FELL OFF HORSE.

That was John Pesek, the so-called Tiger Man of Nebraska. As soon as he saw that Londos was really going to make him go through with the match Pesek conveniently fell of a horse and claimed a bad shoulder.

The match Tuesday night will be Londos' first big appearance in the south in months. He was not willing to wrestle Jones. For weeks Londos demurred, arguing that he could get more in other cities. Promoter Weber finally raised the ante, giving the largest guarantee ever given a wrestler here to get Londos on the contract.

Londos knew that in Jones he had a foe who was likely to give his championship drive a set-back. This match will show what Londos can really do. Jones gave Shikat the battle of his life, losing on a break which left many dissatisfied and believing that Jones was the better man.

IMPORTANT MATCH.

This is an important match to Londos because of the contrast it will offer with Shikat's ability.

Londos is temperamental as all the champions or near-champions are. It is, however, a pleasure to do business with Jones, according to Promoter Weber. All Jones says is, "Bring them on."

Weber substituted John Paxos, another sensational Greek wrestler, for Charley Fox, the hard-boiled egg from Cleveland when Fox attempted to get temperamental because Jones was given the big match.

The move cost Weber more money but he made it, bringing Paxos in against La Dudey, the Canadian champ who has been in the city all week.

PAXOS POPULAR.

Paxos has many friends here who will be glad to see him return to Atlanta. He has recently completed a tour of Europe where he attracted favorable attention.

Despite the cost Weber has retained the same old prices. Tickets are on sale at the Piedmont Hatters and at the Candler building soda fountain. Ladies will still be admitted to any seat in the house for seventy-five cents.

Weber is proud of his audiences. "I have the best people in Atlanta coming to my shows," he said. "I give them good shows and they come. That's all Atlanta wants—the best."

Ellijay Defeats Gainesville High

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 3.—Ellijay defeated Gainesville High, 18 to 12, in the ninth congressional district high school track meet here this afternoon. Westmoreland, of Ellijay, was the star of the meet, with a first place in the 440 and 100-yard events.

PERRY CROWNED GOLF CHAMPION OF CONFERENCE

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 3.—(AP)—Shooting spectacular golf on the last four holes in carding 3 birdies and a par, Sam Perry, University of Alabama star, came from behind here today to win the Southern conference golf championship from Bill Duckwall, of the University of Florida, 1 up.

Perry, southern and Alabama amateur champion, was 2 down as he teed up on No. 15 but met the test in championship style to win 15, halve 16 and then win 17 and 18, and the match.

SHOOTS PAR GOLF.

In beating Duckwall, Perry shot even par on the difficult Shades Valley course of the Birmingham Country Club where the tournament was played.

He carded a 36, one over par, to turn all square with Duckwall and then scored a 35, one under par on the incoming nine to win. Duckwall had a 38 going out and even par coming in.

Deadly approach shots and a fine putting touch kept Duckwall ahead or even with Perry until the champion put on his winning rally. On six par three holes Duckwall was on the green only once with his tee shots but chipped dead each time to score his par. He lost only one par three hole, the one he drove with his tee shot.

Perry's driving and putting were ragged through the greater part of the match but he regained his putting ability on the final holes to nose out his opponent.

SECOND TITLE.

Perry's victory gave the University of Alabama its second consecutive championship, Harry Pritchett having won the title a year ago. Duckwall eliminated Pritchett in the first round this year.

Perry went into the finals with a 2 and 1 victory over Jesse Rainwater, Tulane, while Duckwall beat Bill Legwen, of Georgia, 2 up in his semi-final match this morning.

Perry's victory also gave him revenge for an early season defeat by Duckwall in an inter-team match between Alabama and Florida. At that time the Florida star won 1 up.

Team honors in the tournament this year went to Alabama with a score of 614.

Gallant Knight Turns Fast Mile

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 3.—(AP) The Audley Farm stable's Gallant Knight turned in a mile workout here today which bettered anything accomplished on the Churchill Downs strip in workouts this season.

Wearing blinkers, the Audley Farm colt covered the distance in 1:39 2-5, the first time this year that 1:40 has been broken here. He turned the quarter in :23 4-5; half in :48 4-5, and six furlongs in 1:13 4-5. Jockey Herman Schutte, a package of about 115 pounds, was in the pilot house.

The colt was under a drive at the finish, but appeared to have plenty of stamina and impressed the clockers.

Japan Stars Advance In Zone Cup Matches

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 3.—(AP)—Japan advanced to the second round of European zone Davis cup competition today, eliminating Hungary, three matches to none.

Today's match, in doubles, saw the Japanese, Takeichi Harada and Tamio Abe, easily win from Baron Von Kehrling and Carl Ascher, 6-2, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4.

Japan won both of the opening singles matches yesterday and its victory in the doubles automatically clinched the series.

Holiday Declared For Earl of Derby

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 3.—(AP)—Kentucky will honor the visit of Lord Derby, of England, to the Kentucky Derby, May 17 by a state holiday, officially proclaimed today by Governor Sampson. In his proclamation the governor said he had set aside Derby Day as a state holiday on which all Kentucky may serve as a "reception committee" to Lord Derby, who will present the silver cup to the owner of the winning horse.

So far as known it is the first time Derby Day ever was designated a state holiday and Governor Sampson's proclamation said that "Kentucky feels honored indeed to have as her guest so noble an exponent of clean sportsmanship," on the day when thousands gather from over the state and nation to see the classic of the American turf.

Governor Sampson, in behalf of state, and Mayor Harrison, in behalf of Louisville, already have sent official invitations to Lord Derby to visit the state and city and extensive entertainments have been planned for him at Lexington and Louisville.

TUSKEGEE WINS ANNUAL RELAYS

ALUMNI BOWL, TUSKEGEE, Ala., May 3.—The fourth Tuskegee annual relays were held this afternoon with the Alabama institution capturing the lion's share of events and winning permanent possession of the Liberty trophy by winning the two-mile college relay in record time. Five thousand fans watched the events.

Morris Brown University, of Atlanta, placed in nine of the various events and won one first place when Moore, the Wolverine flash, nosed out Fraser, of Alabama Teachers' College, in one of the fast sprints of the meet, the 220-yard dash.

Eric Roberts won the running broad jump, with his fellow student, Elmer Baker, winning the pole vault in rare form to give Clark University two first places in the finals.

Laura Demry, of Clark University, won the women's collegiate singles championship by defeating Elmira Fannin, of Tuskegee, 6-2, later joining her co-student, Almeta Hill, also of Atlanta, in winning the doubles championship defeating Charlotte Moton, daughter of the principal, and Elmira Fannin, 6-2, 6-0.

In the men's doubles and singles championship, Trotman and Ashe, of Wilberforce University, emerged victorious. Trotman won the singles championship from Ashe, after the two had turned back all opposition in rare form.

Morehouse won the sprint medley college relay, to capture a beautiful trophy for the victory. This event was the only relay the Atlanta school entered.

One of the outstanding features of the meet was the girls' relay teams with Ogeter Bridges, of Tuggle Institute, and Belle Pearson, of Tuskegee, sharing the honors. The Pearson girl hurled the discus 92 feet and 2 inches.

Booker Washington High school placed in two events, while the girls' relay team placed in one. Washington High is an Atlanta colored school, and showed great strength.

Harvard Polo Team Gets New Field

The Myopia Hunt Club of New England has invited the Harvard University polo squad to practice on its field, and the offer has been accepted. Captain Frederick D. Sharp, coach of the Crimson team, will call the players about May 1 for practice. About 25 ponies are available, and Harvard probably is better off for mounts than at any stage of its polo history.

Georgia Poloists Lose at Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—In one of the most brilliant polo games seen here, and on a dusty playing field, the 118th field artillery team defeated the University of Georgia squad by 4 goals to 3 this afternoon in the second and final game of a two-game series.

Harding riding, skillful interference, bitter fighting throughout the six chukkers thrilled the good-sized gallery. Coleman, No. 3 on the artillery squad and its most spectacular player, scored a goal a minute after the referee's whistle blew in the first chukker, duplicating his feat of Thursday afternoon, when the regiment defeated Georgia 6 to 4 goals.

NIGHT GAME PLEASES FANS

Wichita Asks More Light But Trial Is Declared Success.

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 3.—(AP) Apparently only the turnstile approval of baseball fans now is needed to make night baseball under artificial lighting a success.

The Des Moines and Wichita, Kan., clubs of the Western league, last night demonstrated before nearly 12,000 spectators that mechanically the game may be played as well under powerful lights as in the sunlight—and probably better than on gray days.

Des Moines defeated the league-leading Wichita club, 13 to 6, by a wild first inning which netted 11 runs, but there was no indication that the unusual conditions were responsible. The pitching was as good as in the day time and the players handled ground balls and throws without hesitation. Wichita played errorless baseball, while Des Moines was charged with four misplays. Of the errors made by Des Moines all were made in the infield, outfielders having no difficulty with towering flies.

Both of the team managers, Claude Davenport, of Des Moines, and Art Griggs, of Wichita, were enthusiastic over the prospect of regular night attractions. Griggs believed a little more light would improve the game, while Davenport agreed with the opinion of E. Lee Keyser, president of the Des Moines club, that night contests would be the salvation of minor league baseball.

So enthusiastic was Keyser, who has planned and experimented for seven years with lighting systems suitable for night baseball, that he decided today's contest would be called at 8 p. m. instead of in the afternoon as scheduled.

U. S. B. Net Stars Defeat Riverside

GAINESVILLE, Ga., May 3.—University School for Boys, of Atlanta, defeated Riverside's tennis team, 4 to 2, here this afternoon in some of the best matches of the year. Riverside won one singles and one doubles match, while the visitors took four points by winning three singles and one doubles.

In the single matches, Boynton defeated Smith, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4; Martin defeated Walker, 6-2, 2-6, 6-1, and Morris defeated Anderson, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2. Thompson won a singles match for Riverside over Kitchens, 6-3, 7-5.

In the doubles, Boynton and Morris defeated Walker and Anderson, 6-8, 6-3, 9-7, and Kitchens and Martin lost to Smith and Thompson, 6-3, 6-3.

FLIMSY GRABS PIMLICO OAKS IN GREAT RACE

Harry Payne Whitney's Filly Stages Gallant Battle To Win.

By Orlo Robertson,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Written by flying hoofbeats on the historic hilltop turf, the name of Harry Payne Whitney's Flimsy today was inscribed on the roll bearing the signatures of the winners of the colorful Pimlico Oaks.

Answering the challenge of eight classy 3-year-old fillies, the daughter of Broomstick literally flew over the early part of the mile and 70-yard journey and then held on with the gameness of her great sire to win by a nose in one of the severest duels of the season. Battling the carrier of the light blue and brown topped colors at every stride through the stretch was Ral Parr's Her Grace, unbeaten in her last four starts.

SNOWFLAKE THIRD.

Third was the portion of the purse for W. J. Salmon's Snowflake, while fourth was easily accounted for by Lost Agnes, from the Montpelier farms. Alcibiades, rated as the best filly eligible for the derby, was badly beaten. With $5,000 added by the Maryland Jockey Club, the race enriched Flimsey's owner $4,990, and at the same time chalked up Whitney's first stake victory of the Maryland season. Flimsey paid $11.40 in the mutuels.

Flaunting the colors of Mrs. Payne Whitney's Greentree stable in the faces of a brilliant field of older thoroughbreds, Comstockery won the Kings County handicap at Jamaica in a sensational finish. With Jockey Hebert laying back for an opening, Comstockery drove through the field coming into the stretch and then went on to win by a half length from the Belair Stud's Frisius. R. L. Gerry's Ironsides, a Man o' War offspring, and the favorite, finished third over the mile and a sixteenth route, which Comstockery stepped in 1:46 2-5.

With much of the money going on Ironsides, Comstockery paid the good price of 9 to 2 for his victory, which was worth $5,750 to Mrs. Whitney.

VAN DUSEN WINS.

Clyde Van Dusen, winner of the 1929 Kentucky Derby, made his four-year-old debut a successful one, winning the sprint over the Futurity course at Lexington. The diminutive son of Man o' War went the distance in 1:10 2-5 to put a stamp of approval on his fitness for richer stake events to follow.

The victory of last year's derby winner was expected, but the defeat of the favorite in the $3,000 Idle Hour stakes came as a great surprise. The four and one-half sprint for juveniles went to Don Leon, from R. W. Collins' stable, with C. B. Dailey's Deemster second and Backlog third. Liberty Ace was next, with Bill Morris, made the hot favorite because of a sensational winter campaign, landing in fifth place, a badly beaten youngster. Don Leon paid $17.76 for a $2 mutuel ticket and sprinted the four and one-half panels in 54 2-5 seconds.

Nostaw, once known as Lord Baredelbane, galloped home an easy winner of the Merry Month handicap at Aurora. Break of Dawn, from Benny Creech's string, was second to Miss Blanche Watson's four-year-old, with O. L. Foster's Tommy Lad third. The mile and sixteenth was covered in the fast time of 1:46 4-5.

Gordon Institute Beats Aggies, 4-0

BARNESVILLE, Ga., May 3.—Gordon institute hung up its 17th consecutive game this afternoon by defeating the strong Madison Aggies an an interesting affair, 4 to 0. Percy Dixon, smooth-working portsider, breezed along and was never in real danger of being scored upon, fanning 10 of his opponents and allowing six scattered hits.

Walker, Aggies' speedball ace, also pitched well, but Gordon bunched its hits with smart base running and used the squeeze play effectively to account for its runs.

Chicks Pass Chattanooga To Take Southern Batting Lead

TRIBE MAKING FURIOUS PACE WITH .324 MARK

Doc Prothro's Memphis Chicks put on additional power at bat last week to overtake and pass the Chattanooga Lookouts. The Chicks are pounding the ball at the dazzling pace of .324. Chattanooga had a similar mark last week, but slumped to a mark of .306. New Orleans, batting .310, last week, dropped back to a mark of .303, but continued to hold down third place. The Little Rock Travelers vaulted from seventh to fourth place in team batting, replacing the Barons who have settled into fifth position.

Chattanooga also lost its position as the best fielding team in the Southern, Birmingham climbing into the lead with figures of .967, while the Lookouts stopped in second place with a mark of .966. The Lookouts maintain the leadership in double plays, having completed 20.

George Detore, the young third base sensation of New Orleans, shows no sign of relinquishing the individual bat lead. The young Pelican, throughout Thursday, had hit safely in 14 straight games, for an average of .491. Hutcheson, of Memphis, is Detore's most serious rival, having a bat percentage of .486.

Jim Poole, of Nashville, apparently is determined to do even greater things in the Southern league this year than he did in 1929. Present compilations give Poole four home runs, 20 runs batted in and batting percentage of .381.

Eleven pitchers are yet to suffer a set back, with Kelly, of Memphis, holding down the lead with three victories.

Atlanta Juniors Victors at Emory

Emory University Junior college defeated the Valdosta and Oxford Junior colleges in a meet here Saturday. The total scores were: Emory 34; Valdosta 32; Oxford 26.

The three schools are under supervision of Emory University and this was the first time the three had met here in competition.

The Atlanta school scored 10 of its points by winning both singles and doubles in the tennis matches yesterday. Oxford was second and Valdosta third.

The Valdosta debating team, composed of Ulmer Crosby and John E. Wilson, won from the Oxford team, composed of Floyd Everitt and Chesel Lovern. The Atlanta school previously had been eliminated.

Pole Vault—Fincher, Atlanta, 10 feet; Burney, Valdosta, and Jackson, Oxford.

Atlanta also won the relay race.

The three glee clubs performed separately yesterday and were then joined for several choruses. A total of 150 voices participated in the singing.

The Atlanta school was awarded a cup for high score at a luncheon. Individual teams were given trophies for each event.

Many Twin Bills Slated in National

Albany Wins Over Sylvester Team

SYLVESTER, Ga., May 3.—In an exhibition game here Friday afternoon the Albany club of the newly organized Southwest Georgia Semi-Pro Baseball league defeated the local club of the same league by a score of 8 to 6.

The game was interesting although loosely played, there being many errors committed by both. The locals were the chief offenders, however.

The batteries were: For Albany, Johnson, Burk and Barr; for Sylvester, Love and Story.

Love hurled a very nice game for the locals and with better support might have won. He allowed eight safeties while the locals collected 11 off the delivery of the brace of Albany chunkers.

F. Deariso, third-sacker, led the local offensive efforts with three safe smacks.

Being only a practice game and so many rough spots developed on both teams it is difficult to get much of a line on the strength of either. There will doubtless be several changes made before the experimental stage has passed.

The weather was ideal but only a small crowd of fans turned out, due in part no doubt to limited advance advertising and the fact that many of the fans in this section are engaged in farming and seldom come into town on mid-week days.

WALKER TOPS SALLY LEAGUE

Walker, of Greenville, with an average of .458, is holding the batting lead in the Sally league by a margin of 8 points. Breakfield, Asheville's slugging third sacker, is packing a wallop at the plate to the tune of .452, while Sullivan, also of Asheville, is holding down third place with a .450. Smith and Hipps, both of Asheville, follow in order with percentages well into .400 figures.

That sort of batting is responsible for the Tourist club being far in front in club batting. Asheville is laying the wood to the horsehide at the rate of .343. Macon comes in for second place with a .320.

The standings in the fielding are just the reverse, with Macon topping the circuit, .963, and Asheville second, .958.

Nine Sally flingers are yet to taste defeat. Three of the hurlers—Greene, Baylin, Gallivan—have won three and lost none.

Including Games of Thursday, May 1.

Since the back swing must be somewhat slower for the drive, due to the fact that here we are using the longest club in the back, and necessarily it takes somewhat longer for it to complete it circular trip, it follows that the turn from back swing to forward must be slower in exact proportion. Now average golfers think a great deal, and spend much study on different single phases of different swings, and especially of their drives. In doing this they often get their action entirely out of proportion, a very common golfing fault. Then they think one thing and then another has gone wrong, and they spend painful efforts seeking to "cure" their mistake. If you put any particular emphasis on some one part of your swing, you will almost certainly throw your swing as a whole out of proportion unless you watch your proportions. And one spot where proportions frequently go wrong is at the turn from the top. Here your action must be not too fast nor too slow, but in just the right proportion.

Your hands, arms and shoulders should work in unison throughout your golf swing. To make them do so is the goal you seek. Chester Horton has prepared a short-cut to success with this, in a free monograph entitled, "Hands, Arms and Shoulders in Your Swing." To receive this write Chester Horton, care of The Constitution, enclosing a stamped, addressed envelope, and asking for this monograph.

Valdosta Leads In Golf League

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 3.—With games played this week in Tallahassee, Fla., Albany and Valdosta, six of the contests of the 1930 season in the Georgia-Florida Golf league are past history, with the Valdosta club having won each of its contests, officially its score standing: Won, 6; lost, 0.

On March 27 Valdosta defeated Quitman at Quitman; April 3 Valdosta won from Moultrie at Moultrie; on April 10 Tallahassee, Fla., was defeated on the Valdosta course; April 17 Thomasville was defeated on its home course; April 24 Albany lost to Valdosta in this city; May 1 Valdosta, playing at home, defeated Quitman.

There are yet four games to be played, Moultrie coming here next week for its second game with Valdosta. On May 15 Valdosta goes to Tallahassee, Fla., for a game and May 22 Thomasville comes here for its last game with Valdosta. The final game of the series of ten will be played on May 19, with Valdosta closing at Albany with that team.

According to the present score with six straights, Valdosta appears almost certain to win the series. The Valdosta team would have to lose two or more of the four coming games and Albany, the nearest competitor, would have to take at least three of the four games in order to shut out the Valdosta team from winning the league trophy for the third and last time.

This city has already won one of the permanent cups and needs only to win this series to become the owner of the second trophy.

FINLATOR GETS MARK OF .440

Smacking the ball at the pace of .440 flat, Finlator, of Selma, this week is lording it over the batsmen in the Southeastern league, and his nearest rival in the batting department is Griffin, of Pensacola, who is doing a neat .423.

Caldwell, of Montgomery, tops the league in clouting doubles, having a total of 7. Caldwell also came in for honors in the triple division, being tied with Griffin at 4 all. The home run lead is being held by Finlator, who has biffed a trio of circuit passes.

Tampa has collected 154 hits in 506 official times at bat, to lead in club batting with an average of .304. Tagging along behind the Tampa club in batting is Montgomery with a mark of .298. Pensacola is three points in the van in fielding, leading the field with a mark of .973, with Tampa holding down second place.

Tampa also leads in double plays, having negotiated a total of 20.

In the pitching department, Chambers, of Pensacola, has pitched four victories for a perfect percentage. Brush, of Tampa, has won three and lost none to place second to Chambers. Six other Southeastern hurlers continue to hold perfect figures.

Ford's Pitching Gives Fulton 10-3 Victory Over Southern Bell

OSBORNE FANS 12 AS SOUTHERN BEATS WHITTIER

Casey Gets Three for Three as Hapeville Wins, 8 to 6.

Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills managed to stay on top in the City league Saturday by defeating Southern Bell 10 to 3. Ford pitched masterful ball and the teamwork of the Fultonites behind him was fine, just one bobble being recorded. Whitney hurled good ball for the losers but errors allowed the total to mount.

Morris starred at the bat with two out of four for the losers, and F. Whitney led for the winners with two out of three. Whitney, Giles and Harrington got the only extra base hits of the day. Ford struck out seven and Whitney six.

OSBORNE'S HURLING.

Whittier Mills tasted defeat again Saturday, Southern Railway winning from them this time with a lone point margin, 1 to 0. Osborne pitched a fine game with 12 strikeouts and his teammates played almost errorless ball behind him, but in a shutout game even one error is liable to lose. Whittier hit Pugh, the Southern pitcher, eight times, while Osborne allowed only five hits. Price featured in the batting department with a triple, double and a single out of three times up.

Pugh and Austin; Osborne and Dowda.

CASEY AT THE BAT.

Hapeville won a ball game from Exposition Cotton Mills Saturday 8 to 6. The hitting of Casey with three hits out of three trials and the home run of Ray were the best batting features. The all-round playing of the Hapeville team in the field with only one error made the game interesting for them.

The Exposition team gave a ragged exhibition in the field and had six errors. Casey and Lawson hit three-baggers. The game was almost rained out, the deluge coming at the start of the sixth inning.

Atlanta League.

CAUGHT BY RAIN.

Ruralist Press and the new Fisher Body team of the Atlanta league played four and one-half innings of a game Saturday before the rain caught them and stopped the scoring. The Fishers were behind in the fifth and did not get to finish their three outs, so the rules call it no game. The count was 6 to 2 when it stopped. In the third inning an error and a triple by Shelton assisted four runs to cross the plate. One double play, Howell to Wilkie to Shelton, featured the work in the field.

DOLLAR'S DAY.

Pullman Co. won a game in six innings from Southern Bell in the Atlanta league Saturday 7 to 3. The hitting of Stogner and Dollar, each making two hits out of two tries, featured the stick work. Dollar also contributed the only home run of the day. Pullman found Henderson's groove in the first inning and made it count for four runs. After that they could not make more than one run in an inning. Henderson hit well for the losers with two out of three.

So. Bell .....001 200—3 6 0
Pullman .....410 011—7 11 3
Henderson and Byrd; Stogner and Conkle.

SPRINGERS WIN.

Southern Spring Bed won from Railway Express 9 to 5 in six innings. Hammock pitched a good game for the winners, striking out nine men in the process. McEachern and P. Mize were best in batting with perfect days, making three hits out of three times at bat. Mize, McEachern and Hammock all knocked triples. Ferguson was also perfect with two out of two.

This gives Southern Spring Bed a one-game grip on first place in the league, being just one ahead of Pullman.

Ry. Express .....301 010—5 7 2

Granite League.

INTERESTING TILT.

Lithonia defeated the strong Norcross team 8 to 2 in an interesting game at Lithonia Saturday. The feature of the game was the airtight pitching of Hollingsworth, who struck out 11 men and allowed four hits. The whole team played well in the field. The Lithonia batsmen were too good for Letson and they touched his offerings often and hard.

DUCKS ENJOY RAIN.

The rain saved the Georgia Duck team from what looked like a beating Saturday when it stopped Chamblee's attack in the second inning. Chamblee scored a run through Pierce's triple and Struill's single, while Duck was blanked. Bankston and Hammond were both pitching good ball.

CLARKSTON SAVED.

Tucker was one up on Clarkston when the rain came along in the second inning and ruined the day for a nice crowd. Tucker led 2 to 1 in the second inning.

Earl of Derby Here To See Famed Race

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The Earl of Derby, seventeenth to hold that title, has arrived in the United States to renew his acquaintanceship with America and see his first Kentucky Derby.

Lord Derby arrived aboard the Aquitania yesterday and was met at quarantine by Police Commissioner Grover Whalen, George D. Hand, of the mayor's reception committee, and Joseph D. Widener, wealthy Philadelphia sportsman, who will be Lord Derby's host in the United States.

After a round of social entertainment in New York and Washington, the British nobleman will visit several famous breeding establishments in Kentucky and witness the running of the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs May 17. He will present the gold trophy to the winner and make a short speech which will be broadcast internationally.

B. CLEM WINS IN SLAB DUEL

Jackson Hills Star Outpitches M. Harper To Score 4-3 Victory.

In a pitchers' battle, B. Clem, of Jackson Hill Baptist, outpitched M. Harper, of Druid Hills Presbyterian, and Jackson Hill won its first game of the season, 4 to 3, in the only full ball game played in the S. S. A. A. Saturday afternoon.

For three innings both pitchers retired the opposition without a run, but in the fourth, Druid Hills got one across, and Jackson Hill Baptist came back, scoring all of their four runs in this frame. After H. Clem flied out to Wilder, Gober singled, Humphries followed with a double, scoring Gober, and then Pittman slammed one for three sacks scoring Humphries. A single by Harrison scored Pittman and a hit by Awtry brought in Harrison.

Score by innings: R. H. E.

GAME CALLED.

The Grace Methodist-Westminster Presbyterian game, was called in the last half of the fifth inning on account of rain. At the time rain stopped the battle Grace was leading 6 to 2. These teams will play a double-header when they meet each other in the second round.

BAPTISTS WIN.

The East Point Baptist nine broke into the win column by defeating Gordan Street Baptist, 7 to 5, in an abbreviated game, due to the heavy rain, which forced the game to be called in the seventh inning.

A pretty double play by Breedlove in the sixth inning, spiked a would-be Gordon Street rally, Breedlove speared a hot liner off the bat of Endicott and touched first to double Pittman, to pull Williams out of a hole. Williams pitched a good game, keeping his hit fairly scattered.

SPEAKS' DOUBLE BRINGS VICTORY TO BETHANY, 11-10

Nicholson and Still Each Fan 15 as Hale Class Wins.

Smith's hitting enabled Bethany Methodist to tie the count on two occasions, but Speaks' long double sent Speer across with the final and winning run in the sixth inning, to give Bethany their second straight win and a tie for the Sewanee league lead. Capitol View Methodist was their victim. Edwards wielded the big stick for the losers, getting three out of four, all of them doubles.

THIRTY MEN FAN.

With each of the mound artists accounting for 15 men, the Hale Class defeated the Floding Class, 4 to 2, in the best of the games played in the Y-Church leagues. Both clubs secured four hits and made the same number of miscues. Two double steals by the victors, in which Fincher and James participated, gave them the margin of victory. A double play, James to Timmons to James, nicked a would-be rally of the losers.

B. CAMP STARS.

B. Camp's long home run was the big factor in Grant Park Methodist's victory over Central Presbyterian, 7 to 6. Mize, of the losers, hit one for three bases, while Arwood and Lanford contributed a double to aid in the scoring. Rambo pitched well, averaging a strikeout for each inning played. This was Central Presbyterian's third defeat of the season, but all losses have been very close.

LUTHERAN BLANKED.

RAINED OUT.

Rain brought the Alpha Class-Gordon Street game to a close in the last half of the fourth with the score at 1-all.

Dixie League.

RETAINS CELLAR.

Fighting for the cellar ownership of the Dixie league, Twentieth Century Class shoved across enough runs in the second frame to secure a lead that eventually proved enough for victory by a 7-to-5 margin. The Peps staged a gallant fight and were cut short by the rain. Morris hit a single and home run that practically won the game. West did the best hitting for the losers, getting a single and triple in four trips to the plate.

NORTHWEST WINS.

Rain came too late to save Kirkwood Methodist from a 6-to-0 defeat handed them by Northwest Atlanta mainly through the hitting ability of Roy Daniel, who had a double, triple and single in three trips for a perfect day. McCall pitched brilliant ball, allowing the losers but three scattered hits. Kirkwood played erratic ball afield, making many costly bobbles.

RAIN.

With Peachtree Christian leading North Atlanta Baptist, 4 to 1, rain called a halt and perhaps saved the Baptists from their first defeat of the year.

Georgia League.

KEEP WINNING.

Mt. Zion continued its winning streak by handing the Go Get 'Em Class team of Gordon Street Baptist a 5-to-4 lacing at Mozeley park mainly through ability to hit when hits meant runs. Gordon Street staged a ninth inning rally that fell one short of tying the count.

Whitmire's home run in the first frame with one on gave the winners a lead never to be overcome. Satterfield, with three singles, hit best for the losers.

Although Cowart, of Lowreytown Baptist, fanned 18 Mary Branan Methodist batters, he was forced to travel 10 innings to gain a 5-to-4 verdict as the losers were playing fast ball and were leading until the ninth frame. Lowrytown garnered but five hits off Doyal, who fanned 10, but his mates were unable to hit the offerings of Cowart but one time. The losers scored all their runs on walks and errors, while the winners earned three of theirs.

G. MAXEY STARS.

Behind the stellar pitching of G. Maxey, who permitted but two hits, Inman Park Baptist easily defeated the Calvary Aces, 7 to 2. Garrison wielded a wicked bat, getting two doubles and a single in four attempts. Coker, elongated first baseman for the losers, did their best hitting, getting a long triple.

OAKHURST SLUGS HARD.

Oakhurst Presbyterian battered the offerings of every man assigned to the mound by Park Street Methodist to win, 21 to 2, while Carroll, on their firing line, held the losers to four scattered hits and sent 11 men back to the bench via the strikeout route. Sharpless secured half the losers' bingles. Maddox hit a double, single and home run for the victors.

UPHILL FIGHT.

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—The Philadelphia Athletics fought an uphill battle to win their third game in a row from the Detroit Tigers before a crowd of 18,000 this afternoon, 6 to 5. The world's champions won on Al Simmons' double that drove in two runs in the ninth.

The Mackmen started to wipe out a 5-to-2 lead in the sixth when they scored one run. In the eighth, Jimmy Foxx hit his third home run of the season over the roof of the left-field pavilion, cutting the visitors' lead to one tally.

INDIANS RALLY AGAIN.

BOSTON, May 3.—For the second day in succession Cleveland Indians came from behind to beat out the Red Sox, who fell victims to the warriors' war clubs today, 6 to 5. Cleveland scored four runs in the last two innings to annex its fifth straight victory.

A last inning rally by the Sox, in which two runs were scored, was halted when Regan started a double play by driving into Burnett's hands at third. The tieing and winning runs were on base at the time

HOYT'S FIRST VICTORY.

NEW YORK, May 3.—White Hoyt won his first game of the season today and the Yankees won their fourth, defeating the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 3, to even the series.

Hoyt's pitching and opportune Yankee hitting decided the game. The Brooklyn mortician allowed the Sox but seven hits and kept them well scattered. A homer by Kamm provided the last Chicago counter in the ninth inning.

The Yankees hit Hal McKain just at the right moments. Three hits brought a pair of runs in the second and Lazzeri's double with the bases full in the third brought two more. Ten of the game's 17 hits went for extra bases. Earl Combs led with three hits in four times at bat.

TWO RUNS WIN.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Liska let down after pitching good ball for six innings today and St. Louis broke a 1-and-1 tie in the seventh when the visitors drove two runs across the plate, finally winning 4 to 2. The Browns found Braxton, who replaced Liska, in the next inning and scored their final run. Washington, who had scored once in the second, got another in the eighth but Stewart held them scoreless in the ninth, allowing only six hits in the nine innings.

The Yankees hit Hal McKain just at the right moments. Three hits brought a pair of runs in the second and Lazzeri's double with the bases full in the third brought two more. Ten of the game's 17 hits went for extra bases. Earl Combs led with three hits in four times at bat.

DECISION REVERSED.

CINCINNATI, May 3.—The New York Giants reversed yesterday's decision against the Reds, winning today's encounter, 9 to 8, in a close game with plenty of hitting.

A walk and Freddy Lindstrom's double in the ninth inning decided the encounter. The Reds had tied the score in the eighth with two runs after each had made one big inning. Cincinnati scored five runs in the fourth and New York replied with six in the fifth. Buzz McWeeny, starting Red pitcher, and Ken Ash each walked in a run in this frame.

TWO FOR THREE.

PITTSBURGH, May 3.—Boston made it two out of three for the series from Pittsburgh today, winning the odd game, 12 to 7.

Burleigh Grimes, veteran spitball pitcher who went to Boston from Pittsburgh just before the season opened, started for the Braves but was driven from the mound in the first inning when the Bucs scored four runs without a man retired. It all happened after Boston had given Grimes a five-run lead. Cunningham, who succeeded Burleigh, pitched good ball.

Richbourg drove out a home run for the Braves in the fifth.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN,
Associated Press Market Editor.

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Despite lively transient rallies, wheat today followed the stock market down hill, overwhelmed at the last by heavy selling orders that came rushing from eastern sources. May delivery of wheat broke the season's bottom-price record and touched as low as $1.00 3-8 a bushel.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at nearly the day's lowest level, 7-8c to 2 5-8c a bushel under yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-8c to 3-4c off," oats unchanged to 1-2c up, and provisions unchanged to 7-8c down.

The final drop in wheat values today took place after a series of quick bulges that succeeded an initial sudden drop. Weakness of wheat both in the early dealings and toward the finish was directly attributed almost altogether to influence of stock market developments. Comparative slowness of export demand today for North American wheat, however, counted also as a bearish factor, but late indications pointed to considerable amounts of wheat as having been bought for Europe on the downward swings of the market. Nevertheless, the backwardness of overseas demand for wheat from the United States and Canada, together with lower Liverpool quotations today than had been looked for, evoked bearish comment about apparent waning of chances for disposing of present big supplies in North America before the need of caring for another crop arrives.

On the other hand, assertions were also current here that without cutting prices farm board allies have been making good-sized sales of wheat for export and to domestic millers as well. A leading Chicago crop expert pointed out that ill effects to the United States winter wheat crop, especially in the southwest, are likely to develop because abnormal warm weather tending to bring about excessive root growth prevailed when the crop should have been dormant.

Corn was swayed by the action of wheat. Oats owed their strength to absence of any such heavy selling as developed in other grains.

Provisions went lower because of scattered selling which found buying support slow.

Sugar.

NEW YORK, May 2.—Raw sugar was quiet today and the only sales confirmed were 50,000 bags of Cuban late yesterday for prompt shipment to a local refiner at 3.30 duty paid. This price was unchanged from the last previous sale, but today's traders showed little interest and there appeared to be a disposition to hold off and await further developments.
Reports that the house had agreed on a 2-cent duty for Cuban sugar, lower than generally expected, led to a more optimistic feeling in the futures market and promoted increased covering and outside buying. The spot position showed little variation and closed at a net decline of 1 point. Other positions opened 2 to 4 points higher on covering and some outside buying, but reacted partially under selling by houses with Cuban connections. The offerings were readily absorbed, however, and in the late trading the market showed renewed firmness and closed at net advances of 3 to 5 points. Approximate sales 36,450 tons. There were no sales in the No. 2 contract, with the market closing 1 point lower to 5 points higher. Closing prices: No. 1: May 1.52; July 1.53; September 1.61; December 1.70; January 1.71; March 1.76 and next May 1.82; No. 2: May 3.40; July 3.47; September 3.57; December 3.66.
Refined was quiet, with refiners listing at 4.90 for fine granulated, but second hands available below this level.

Coffee.

NEW YORK, May 3.—A somewhat irregular opening in coffee futures was followed by steadiness on week-end covering in a narrow market.
No. 7 contracts opened unchanged to 6 points lower and closed at a net advance of 4 to 17 points. Sales 6,000. Santos contracts opened 4 to 6 points higher and closed 6 to 18 points net higher. Sales 2,000. Closing quotations: No. 7 contracts, May 8.68; July 8.45; September 8.25; December 8.05; March 7.88. ATLANTA SPOT COTTON.

Atlanta spot cotton closed steady, 20 points down to 15.55.
Receipts, 24; shipments, 534; stocks, 67,304.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Cotton was lower today under week-end liquidation combined with some southern and local selling on reports of continued favorable weather for the coming crop, relatively easy Liverpool cables and the weakness in the stock market. May sold off to 16.19 and the new October contract to 14.39. The general market closed barely steady at net declines of 15 to 20 points.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 5 points. There was some covering, but it was readily supplied by selling on the easier showing of Liverpool and the favorable view of the weather map. Prices soon turned easier and the market worked slowly lower. Demand for old crop positions was much less active than yesterday, particularly in May, while a larger proportion of the business was in the new crop months. There were buying orders for May at 12 points under July which maintained the difference at about that figure, but July was sold a little more freely and the price eased to 16.28 or 22 points net lower. The new October declined from 14.60 to 14.39 or 18 points below yesterday's closing quotation and last prices were within a point or two of the lowest on most months. May finished 178 points over the new October compared with 181 points at the close of the previous day.

The smaller volume of business in the old crop positions, more particularly in May, was regarded as an indication that the scattering interest had been materially reduced and that trader's' attention was turning to the new crop situation. The weather news was considered favorable. Further rain was reported in the southwest and the more favorable view of the crop outlook was encouraged by reports of scattered southern selling, partly from Memphis.

Liverpool cables said trade calling and covering had absorbed scattering liquidation on the decline there.

SPOTS TUMBLE AT NEW ORLEANS.

NEW ORLEANS, May 3.—(AP)—The week-end session in cotton was only moderately active and prices showed further declines, making lows for the week in the present downward movement and the discount of October under July increased to 159 points. Poor Liverpool cables, more favorable weather for the crop in the cotton belt and the further slump in the stock market caused liquidation particularly in the new crop months which showed the greatest declines. After opening unchanged to 4 points down there was a slight rally, but prices soon weakened with the renewed break in stocks and continued to ease off until near the end. The market showed losses from the previous close of 18 to 24 points. The close was easy and near the lows. July declined 19 points to 15.95 and closed at 16.98, or 16 points net lower for the day. The general market closed easy at net losses of 16 to 23 points.

Liverpool came in unchanged to 4 points down and the first trades here showed no change to 4 points down. The market rallied a point or two right after the start but soon eased off on the good weather and the slump in stocks and by the end of the first hour May traded down to 15.88, July at 15.98 and October at 14.49, or 11 to 16 points below the previous close.

The market continued to ease off during the second hour on further liquidation and selling of new crop months on the favorable weather. Near months made new lows with May at 15.86, July 15.95 and October 14.36, or 18 to 24 points under the previous close. There were some slight rallies from the lowest at the end but the market closed easy with May at 15.86, July 15.98 and October 14.38, or 16 to 22 points net lower for the day on those months.

Port receipts 6,101; for season 8,202,535; last season 9,221,094. Exports 24,410; for season 6,149,764; last season 7,123,574. Port stocks 1,652,560; last year 1,345,097. Combined shipboard stock at New Orleans, Galveston and Houston 68,854; last year 77,104. Spot sales at southern markets 3,121; last year 8,282.

Dry Goods.

NEW YORK, May 3.—Cotton goods have sold moderately well for the week and prices are slightly firmer at the close. Wool goods have been in better demand, in overcoatings and men's suitings for fall. Raw silk has become a little firmer following better sales for contract delivery. Shantung and chiffon fabrics are selling well for summer wear. Linens are in moderate demand. Fine wash fabrics have sold more freely.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The stock ticker recorded fresh triumphs for the bears today in a tumultuous two-hour session that broke all volume records for a Saturday and that saw net declines of 5 to 18 points in scores of leading issues.

In general, the pattern of the market resembled Friday's. There was heavy liquidation at the opening in blocks of 5,000 to 30,000 shares, representing a large bundle of overnight selling orders. A ghost of a rally appeared after the first outburst had been assimilated, but then the market staggered downward under the burden of another load of last-minute sales. Transactions in the final 30 minutes reached the enormous total of 1,627,900 shares, bringing the day's business to 4,867,500 shares, the largest for a two-hour day in the market's history. An hour and 56 minutes after the closing gong the ticker tape printed the last sale.

The character of the selling likewise differed little from yesterday's. It was a repetition of the story of weakened margin accounts, persistent short selling by powerful operators and liquidation by pools whose holdings of stocks had been only moderately diminished since the market reached its 1930 peak early in April. And once more there was virtually no covering at the close.

Fast and Furious.

So much action was crowded into the short space of two hours that the movement seemed at times to be assuming more substantial proportions than it actually attained. The price index for 90 stocks lost 5.8 points, exactly the extent of the Friday loss, and the individual groups—rails, industrials and utilities—recorded changes closely approximating those of the previous session.

As is usual during violent movements in either direction, the market was filled with rumors. Prominent professional operators were reported to have turned uncompromisingly bearish. Some circles professed to see a political maneuver in the market's action, pointing out that the decline reached its greatest violence immediately after President Hoover's statement on business.

Whatever the immediate impetus, it was generally agreed that the basic cause was the realization that speculative activity earlier in the year had been following a will-o'-the-wisp, taking broad liberties with the recuperative powers of commerce and industry. First quarter earnings statements, particularly those of the railroad companies, failed to support excessive optimism and the bullish estimates heard in February had to be revised to conform with the cold figures of April.

Reminder of a Past.

Although the volume of selling was reminiscent of the memorable days last fall, brokerage houses reported stocks were well taken on a scale down and that at no time was there any suggestion of the lack of buyers that accelerated the October-November collapse.

Many high-grade investment shares were hard hit. United States Steel, General Electric, American Telephone, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Eastman Kodak, and Detroit Edison, among others, lost from 5 to 6 points, while Westinghouse tumbled 13 7-8 under the pressure of the late selling. The day's largest net loss was in Auburn Auto, off 17 7-8. Vanadium Steel dropped 16 3-4, Radio 9, J. I. Case 15, Columbia Gas & Electric 5, Paramount 8, DuPont 5, Public Service of New Jersey 6 1-2 and Standard Gas & Electric 7.

Oil, motor and rail stocks, which had already been substantially deflated, displayed moderate firmness and a few carrier company shares showed small net gains for the day.

There was another decline in commodity prices, featured by a drop of 1 to 1 1-2 cents in wheat on bearish weather reports. Cotton slumped 75 cents to $1 a bale.

Foreign exchanges were dull, with the French franc easing.

POTATOES, ALONE, SHOW STRENGTH

Imperial valley cantaloupe section began with the movement of two cars last week. During all of last season, Imperial valley originated 14,300 of the total 28,150 cars of cantaloupes shipped in the United States. Five cars came from Mexico during the past week, but California cantaloupes will soon dominate the market. A heavy crop is expected from the increased acreage in Imperial valley.

Produce markets were unsettled. Prices of potatoes, tomatoes and Florida celery advanced, but the position of Texas onions was very weak, and cabbage declined greatly.

Strawberries sold well in consuming centers. California lettuce was again dominating the lettuce market at fair prices for good quality stock. Apple markets were firm. Shipments of potatoes were fast increasing from southern states, and Texas onions were an important feature. California celery was again assuming prominence. Mexican tomatoes were about finished. A large number of states were beginning to ship strawberries. California cauliflower movement decreased rather sharply and output of grapefruit from three states averaged only eight cars daily. However, 190 carloads of grapefruit arrived from Porto Rico, compared with six cars a year ago. Of the 1,350 cars of oranges shipped last week, only 15 came from Florida. During the period last season, over 3,000 cars of organges moved, and both California and Florida were active.

Forwardings of green peas were rapidly increasing. Total of 400 cars was double the movement of the preceding week, and two and a half times that of a year ago. California and Mississippi were the chief sources of pea shipments. Spinach output increased to 490 cars, with Virginia marketing 350, Maryland 40 and Arkansas 90 cars. Movement of string beans from Florida increased to 180 cars, while Texas decreased to 65. Sweet potato shipments totaled 180 cars, as Tennessee increased to 115. Combined movement of 26 important products increased to 14,360 cars, but was still 7,000 less than during the same week last spring.

Potato Prices Advance.

Movement of southern and western truck crops was becoming very active and the price trend of some products was distinctly downward. Potato markets, however, showed surprising strength, in view of the continued liberal movement of old stock and the rapid increase in shipments of new potatoes. Florida and Texas together originated 1,145 carloads and the season opened in Alabama. Both barrels in the Hastings district of Florida and sacks in the Rio Grande valley of Texas advanced 50 cents during the week, and city consuming centers reported a corresponding rise of prices. Barrels from Bermuda reached top of $9 in New York, the same as top price of Florida Spaulding Rose in several markets. Texas Triumphs went beyond $5 per sack in some cities. Maine Green Mountains held firmly in distributing centers. The Chicago carlot market advanced 15c per 100 pounds on Round Whites from the north central area, but Idaho Russets remained steady. Prices at north central shipping points were about 20c higher than the week before, through movement increased slightly to 920 cars. Maine originated nearly half of the week's 3,200 cars of old potatoes. Shipments of both old and new stock were somewhat lighter than those of a year ago.

Shippers of Triumphs from southern Texas were getting $3.75 per 100 pounds, compared with Spaulding Rose in Florida at $7 per barrel or $4.50 per 100-pound sack. The western New York f. o. b. price of Round Whites was firm at $2.85 per 100 pounds, and Maine Green Mountains held steady at $2.55 to $2.60. The range of prices at north central points had advanced to $2.65 to $2.95. City dealers reported the jobbing market for Maine Green Mountains firm at $2.85 to $3.85. Northern Round Whites ranged from $2.90 to $3.15 in the Chicago carlot market, as against Idaho Russet Burbanks at $3.65 to $3.75.

Onion Market Weak.

The Texas onion market was in a sad condition, with crates of Yellow Bermudas returning only 75c to 90c and Crystal Wax onions selling at shipping points around 90 cents to $1.25. Prices had dropped sharply, as the week's output totaled 750 cars. Movement, however, was still about one-third lighter than a year ago. About 16 cars arrived from Chile and two from Egypt. City prices were quite moderate on all onions, Texas stock having declined at least 50c per crate. Yellow Bermudas were jobbing at $1 to $2 and Crystal Wax stock at $1.50 to $2.50. Quality of Texas onions is good this season. The 50-pound packages from Chile held at $2.50 in Boston. A few remaining old onions from storage sold at $1.60 to $2.50 per bag of 100 pounds, or 75c to $1.25 per 50-pound sack.

Berries Sell Well.

City values of strawberries held well, but the Louisiana f. o. b. auction declined slightly to an average of $2.85 per 24-pint crate. Total movement was down a bit to 745 cars, as Alabama decreased sharply to 175 cars for the week. Cold weather and drought have cut the Alabama crop in half. Louisiana increased to 460 cars last week, and movement was becoming active in Mississippi. Arkansas and North Carolina. Florida was about finished. Early arrivals from North Carolina were jobbing at 20c to 30c on a quart basis in the east. End of the season receipts of Florida berries ranged 20c to 45c, and the 24-quart crates from Alabama brought $3 to $6. Similar packages of Klondikes from Arkansas ruled $5.75 to $6 on the St. Louis market. Louisiana 24-pint crates jobbed generally at $3.25 to $4.25, with sales on a pint basis at 17c to 23c. Recent shipments of strawberries have been only half those of the same period last season.

Cabbage Prices Decline.

Though shipments of cabbage were limited to 670 cars, as against 690 the preceding week, prices were down everywhere. The Texas f. o. b. market declined $20 per ton, with city quotations down about $25. All other receipts also were selling lower in terminal markets. About 43 carloads still arrived from Holland, but this stock brought only $2 to $2.75 per 100-pound basket. Movement from South Carolina held around 410 cars, while Alabama increased to 55 and Texas decreased to 110. The season opened in Mississippi and North Carolina.

Early arrivals from Alabama brought $4.75 to $5 per barrel crate in Chicago. Louisiana cabbage had declined in New Orleans to $3.50 to $4 per 100 pounds bulk. The 1 1-2-bushel hampers from South Carolina and Florida ranged $1 to $2.50 in terminal markets. Western lettuce crates of Texas stock ruled at $2.75 to $4 with Cincinnati dealers getting $90 to $100 per ton. Shippers in the Rio Grande valley received only $40 a ton or $2.25 to $2.50 per lettuce crate.

Less Asparagus Moving.

Forwardings of asparagus decreased to 250 cars, of which California supplied only 60, Washington 25, Illinois 15, Georgia 30 and South Carolina 120 cars. Additional quantities moved by truck. A wide range of jobbing prices prevailed for medium to large sized stock. Crates of one dozen bunches from California sold at $2-5, or just above the same as South Carolina asparagus. Receipts from Illinois sold in nearby markets at $2-3.50, while arrivals from Georgia, Maryland and Virginia brought $2.75-4.75.

Tomatoes Advance.

Tomato markets were in a strong position as a result of better quality from Florida and the decreasing movement from Mexico. Six-basket crates went up to $4 on the east coast of Florida, with lugs bringing $2.75. In the Manatee section good quality stock was returning $3.50 per lug box. City values advanced accordingly. Florida originated 410 cars and the season opened in the Lower Rio Grande valley of Texas. Imports from Mexico were only 215 cars. In large consuming centers Mexican lugs had advanced to $3.25-5, while Florida sixes jobbed at $3-5.50.

More Western Celery.

Florida also started 405 cars of celery to market, and Southern California increased to 185 cars. The f. o. b. market in the Los Angeles-Venice district was lower at $3.25-3.50 per large crate of 4 to 5 dozen stalks, but Florida 10-inch crates were higher at $2.75-3.50 on an f. o. b. basis in the Manatee district.

City markets were very firm. Cates from Florida ruled $3-4.50 and the larger containers from California brought $6-7.

California Lettuce.

Central California became the main source of lettuce supply, with shipments from the state increasing very sharply to 1,190 cars. Only 75 cars cames from the Carolinas, and the season had opened in Louisiana. Arizona was about finished. Cash track prices in the Salinas district of California were fairly strong at $2-2.15 per crate of 4 to 5 dozen heads. City values showed a very wide range of $1.75-5.25 per crate of western Iceberg type and the 5-peck hampers of Big Boston lettuce from North or South Carolina ruled $1-2.25.

Apple Prices Firm.

Best Baldwin apples were firm at western New York shipping points at $2.10-2.20 per bushel basket. Boxed Winesaps, extra fancy grade, medium to large sizes, returned $2-2.10 in the state of Washington. Prices in British auction markets also were firm. Total shipments remained at 690 cars for the week. Washington was credited with 410 cars, New York originated 160, and Virginia 50 cars.

90 Issues Lose Aggregate Of 24 Points in 4 Weeks

BY JOHN L. COOLEY,
Associated Press Financial Writer.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The cumulative effect of unfavorable earnings statements, drooping commodity prices and a decline in share quotations since early April overflowed late this week into a powerful wave of liquidation on the stock markets.

Prices melted away rapidly on Friday and again today as many professional operators turned decidedly bearish and pools liquidated holdings. The result was that several leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange made some of the widest declines since early last December.

The favorable turn in world credit, based on the rate reductions by the Banks of England and France and the New York Federal Reserve bank, found the stock market willing to admit that it had painted too rosy a picture of current business conditions. The steps toward easier money were seen as an indication that all was not yet right with industry and that although the cheapening of credit would hasten recovery, it might be well to admit the improvement had been gradual.

The week, however, did not lack bright spots. Most important was the lowering of the central bank rates, which resulted immediately in 3 per cent call money in New York and a marked easing in time accommodations. Bonds, which had been laboring under the weight of new financing, picked up rather decisively. This in itself was encouraging, for a strong bond market is regarded as a fundamental requisite of business recovery. Furthermore, the success of the German reparations loan depends upon the strength of that market, and there is a general desire in international banking circles for an oversubscription to the issue.

The United States Steel Corporation's report for the first quarter, showing $3.44 a share against $5.04 a year ago when business was booming, was regarded as satisfactory. Railroad earnings did not make so favorable an impression for some of the carriers failed to make their dividends for the period. Pressure against the rail stocks became severe by the middle of the week and new lows for the year were numerous.

Utilities and industrials bore the brunt of the selling in the later sessions. Pool operations in these groups had reached sizeable proportions during the rally that reached its top on April 8 and professional holdings had not been well distributed when the market showed signs of crumbling.

The combined index for 90 stocks was carried about 24 points below the April high. Utilities finished the week about 35 points under the top, industrials 25 points and railroads 14.

MANUFACTURER'S SALESMAN
A MIDWEST manufacturer, with national and world-wide business, on account of large expansion program, has an exceptional opportunity for salesman in Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas and Florida.

A NEW product has just been added to our present line of high grade equipment for merchants. Practically every retail merchant is a prospect.

OUR salesmen earn from $400 to $1,500 per month and some even more.

WE PAY commission immediately upon receipt of orders. Salesmen between 25 and 45 years, willing to work hard to make big money, with a growing, strong, well established company, should investigate this permanent connection. The position offers a remuneration big enough to interest the highest class salesman.

THERE is a big future and unusual opportunity for advancement in this business for you, provided you can measure up to the necessary requirements, as our executive positions are today filled by promotion from the field.

IF YOU feel you can qualify see Mr. A. W. Howard, Piedmont hotel, from 9-5 p. m. Monday. Appointment by phone only.

A NATIONAL MANUFACTURER

FINANCIAL

Loans on Real Estate 40

Disappearing Mortgage

A FEW REASONS why the disappearing mortgage plan should be placed upon a home.
Monthly payments are less than rent.
Easier for the man with the monthly income.
Safer because the entire mortgage does not fall due at one time.
It places the complete payment of your home on a basis of certainty.
No more refinancing cost.
Easiest and most convenient to carry.

LISTEN TO THIS

"I DON'T UNDERSTAND IT, Hopkins, I looked at a bungalow on (a certain cross street in West End). They wanted $8,500 for it, and here you are pricing a BETTER BUNGALOW at $6,500. Why such a difference in prices?" Our answer was this: "It is more convenient to deal with the owners direct; we can, and do, save you a lot of unnecessary expense." The bungalow referred to is at 1767 Sylvan Road, Sylvan Hills. Beautiful, elevated, east front, shady lot. Six rooms and breakfast room; all attractively arranged. Beautiful paper and fixtures, and thoroughly modern. Has daylight basement and a furnace that is properly installed. If your furnace gives troubles, don't blame the furnace; it is very likely the installation. We do it right even though it does cost about $100 more. Strict attention to detail has contributed largely to the popularity of HOPKINS BUNGALOWS in Atlanta today. With a reasonable cash payment, the notes on this one can be arranged as low as $40 per mo. See it today. P. B. Hopkins & Sons, Palmer Bldg. P. S.—The party quoted above paid $8,500 for his home and wanted to exchange.

Parker Opponents Claim Defeat of Appointment

But Supporters Place Faith in Hoover To Change Enough Votes To Bring Victory.

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—The rejection of Judge John J. Parker, of North Carolina, as a member of the supreme court was predicted confidentaly today by the senate opposition as leaders in the contest checked over their forces after a week of debate, but his friends refused to concede defeat.

The senate will resume the debate on Monday with a vote likely on Tuesday. Administration senators will pick up the fight at the opening of debate Monday. The Parker opposition, led by Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, believed after a careful survey of the lineup today that 51 votes, including pairs, were against the nominee.

However, Senator Overman, democrat, North Carolina, who is leading the contest for Parker, replied that the outlook today "is more encouraging." He believed one vote might decide the issue. He also took into account that a tie vote was possible and he expressed confidence that in such an event Vice President Curtis would favor Parker.

The senate battle has been one of the most furiously contested affairs of this session and even today after a week of debate in which a dozen doubtful senators have held the balance of power, no one was sure enough of his ground to speak for publication on a definite prediction.

All day leaders were busy in conferences sizing up the situation. At least four members were considered still in the doubtful class tonight and upon those friends of the nominee based their hope of gaining a majority of the 96 votes by Tuesday.

The opposition expressed alarm over the effect of President Hoover's efforts in behalf of Parker. Several republicans on the doubtful list have been called to the White House this week.

The combined opposition of organized labor and of the negro organizations has split the ranks of the republicans and left the democrats holding the votes upon which the decision will hinge. Senator Watson, of Indiana, the republican leader, has been devoting most of his time to efforts to reunite the administration forces.

"The result is still very doubtful, with the odds against us," Watson said. "We will carry on."

Meanwhile, there was discussion of a move to recommit the nomination to the judiciary committee. However, word reached the capitol that President Hoover would not consider withdrawing the nomination under any circumstances and it was believed this would hinder such a drive.

Senator Overman said he would oppose a motion to recommit. Senator Borah likewise expressed his opposition to it. Foes of Parker took into consideration that this might open the way to a recess appointment of the nominee. However, some friends of Parker saw in this an opportunity to defer the Parker vote in the senate until next session after the election. But no one who would make the move to recommit had appeared tonight and it looked unlikely.

MEMBERSHIP DRIVE LAUNCHED BY ELKS

Recent activities of the Atlanta Lodge of Elks, No. 78, was featured this week by launching of a special membership drive in response to a challenge issued by the Elks' lodge at Birmingham.

The challenge provides for a contest to determine which lodge can obtain the most new members during the next 60 days. It originated during the visit of Grand Exalted Ruler Walter P. Andrews and Exalted Ruler John S. McClelland, of Atlanta, to the Birmingham lodge. The contest is to be terminated when the term of office of Grand Exalted Ruler Andrews is brought to a close at the annual convention of the grand lodge in Atlantic City.

Another highlight of Elks' activities here was seen in plans being formulated for special celebration on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 11. For this occasion officers and members of the Antlers of Atlanta Lodge, No. 78, including the patrol and Antlers band, will attend the 11 o'clock morning services at the Church of the Epiphany, 502 Seminole avenue.

The invitation to the Elks was extended by the Rev. Russell K. Smith, rector of the church. Those planning to attend will meet at the Elks' home, 736 Peachtree street, at 10 o'clock and leave for the church in automobiles at 11:30 o'clock. Composing the committee in charge of arrangements are Joseph R. Cooke, chairman; N. S. Noble and R. E. Lee Reynolds.

Soap Factory Raid Reveals Huge Still

PHILADELPHIA, May 3.—(AP)—Camouflaged as a soap factory, an alcohol distilling plant with a capacity, prohibition agents said, of 20,000 gallons a day was raided today under direction of Assistant Prohibition Administrator A. P. MacPhee.

Ten men found at work in the two-story brick building in Darby, near Philadelphia, were arrested.

MacPhee described the plant as modern and estimated its cost at nearly $200,000.

When raiders entered the building they were met with a blinding glare of electric light. Artificial illumination flooded the place and the windows were covered with tarpaper.

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

BUILDERS HOLD ANNUAL MEETING TUESDAY NIGHT

From 200 to 300 members of Atlanta's building and construction world will gather Tuesday night for the gala event of the season staged under auspices of the Atlanta Builders' Exchange. Consisting of the annual banquet, election of officers and directors of the exchange and a carefully arranged entertainment and business program, the affair has attracted wide local attention since its announcement.

The banquet will start at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday night in the ballroom of the Henry Grady hotel. Arrangements have been made for an entertainment program of wide variety and notable talent, while a number of prominent Atlantans are scheduled to appear on the speakers' program.

President W. H. George, of the Atlanta's Builders' Exchange, has been nominated for re-election. Other candidates on the nomination slate who will be voted upon at the Tuesday meeting are H. D. Hurlbut, for first vice president; J. E. Ingram and Carroll Griffin, competing for second vice president; A. B. McGaughey for treasurer, and the following for directors, of which five will be elected: A. W. Applewhite, Otis A. Barge, Frank Easterby, Robert S. Fiske, Hill R. Huffman, F. A. Pittman and C. L. Schilling. F. M. Noland is secretary of the builders' exchange.

Interest centering around the annual banquet and election of the builders' exchange has always been wide-spread throughout the construction industry and allied fields. The exchange is regarded as one of the most important factors in the local building trades and has played a prominent part in construction development throughout this section. Atlanta is said to have one of the largest and most active builders' exchanges among cities its size.

Traveling Art Exhibit Is Given at Spelman

The traveling exhibit of painting and sculptures by American negro artists sponsored by the Harmon Foundation and the commission on race relations of the Federal Council of Churches is being given at Spelman College from Thursday, May 1 until Wednesday, May 7.

This is the third year that the Harmon Foundation has sponsored this exhibit and the second year the exhibition has been at Spelman College. Last year the exhibit visited 11 cities and this year it will visit between 20 and 30 cities and will go as far as California. The exhibit comprises pictures and portraits by negro artists as well as two pieces of sculpture.

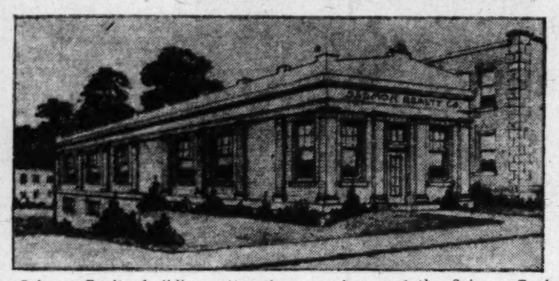

Cadets Promoted By Salvation Army

Commissions for officership in the Salvation Army will be presented to 55 cadets who have completed training in the school here during the graduation exercises at 7:45 o'clock Monday night.

Ceremonies will be held at the Salvation Army temple, at 54 Ellis street, and will be open to the public. Commissioner W. A. McIntyre will be the principal speaker and make the commission presentations.

The cadets who will be graduated come from various sections of the south. They have been in training here since last September.

Novel Realty Headquarters

Salmon Realty building, attractive new home of the Salmon Realty Company, just completed at 1094 Piedmont avenue, at Twelfth street, facing the park. Conveniently located in vicinity of the north side apartment buildings, managed by the apartment house specialist, the novel headquarters of the Salmon Realty agency point to a recent trend for locating property management offices where readily accessible for clients and prospective tenants. Jack Salmon, head of the concern, reported notable public interest in the undertaking at the outset. A number of new apartments in the immediate vicinity are to be taken over by the concern and rental agents for the beginning of next season, Mr. Salmon stated.

Ready To Begin Building On New Doctors' Structure

Orr Estate To Build Triple Unit of 11-Story Offices, Stores and Garage

Preliminary architectural details of the new Doctors' building that is to be erected on the site of the fire-destroyed structure at Peachtree and Pine streets were given out Saturday by Hunter Perry and John O. Chiles, of Adams-Cates Company, which is handling the development for the Marlborough Company, owner.

$750,000 Triple Unit.

The development will consist of a three-unit improvement costing approximately $750,000. The central unit will be an 11-story fireproof office building of latest design for the medical profession, to be located at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Pine. A second unit, adjoining the main structure in the front and extending north along Peachtree street, will consist of a one-story structure divided into commercial stores. On the property, in the rear of these units, will be a garage building of adequate capacity to house the automobiles of the building's tenants.

Preliminary plans have been drawn by the architects, Pringle & Smith. While these show the main structure to be nine stories in height, the present plans, announced last Thursday following the unanimous decision of the medical men in favor of the Marlborough Company's proposed development as recommended by the committee appointed by the former tenants of the Doctors' building, call for an 11-story structure.

The corner owned by the W. W. Orr heirs in the name of the Marlborough Company, contains more than 50,000 square feet, fronting 150 feet on Peachtree, 269 feet on Pine and having a depth along the north line of 366 feet. The main unit of the new development will be erected on the corner portion measuring 75 feet on Peachtree and 103 feet on Pine. The remaining 75 feet on Peachtree will be occupied by the one-story unit with three or four stores. Stores will also line the ground floor portion of the 11-story unit.

Start at Once.

In addition to the garage building in the rear, providing covered parking facilities for the doctor tenants, ample parking space will be arranged on the property for the automobiles of patients and clients.

Present plans call for immediate undertaking of the improvement, with the building expected to be completed and ready for occupants by January 1, 1931. It is believed that the general contract for building of the new structure and clearing of the site of its present obstructions will be let within a few days.

When completed the building probably will be called the W. W. Orr Doctors' building, in memory of the late W. W. Orr, prominent Atlanta business man.

Plan Property Class Tax in South Carolina

As a result of action by the state legislature which has just ended its work, the people of South Carolina will vote next November on a constitutional amendment to make provision for the classification and segregation of property for taxation purposes. In a statement issued before the adjournment of the legislature, Governor John G. Richards expressed his belief that the proposed constitutional amendment should and will receive the commendation of the state at the next election. Classification of property for taxation is one of the basic steps necessary in order to formulate an equitable state program for taxation, the National Association of Real Estate Boards points out.

Realtors Aid Group Of Property Owners

Co-operation of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in securing more equitable taxation for real property will be given the property owner members of the real estate boards of Detroit, Madison, Wisconsin, Trenton, New Jersey and Asheville, N. C., who have recently become members of the association's national property owners' division, through taking out membership in their local real estate boards. Certificates of membership have been received by property owners enrolled in these boards.

The national association plans to put at the disposal of the members of its property owners' division current information dealing with legislation of interest to holders of property, and bulletins concerning real estate tax matters and home ownership.

Dr. J. Calvin Weaver To Speak to Nurses

Dr. J. Calvin Weaver will be principal speaker at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at headquarters of the nursing service of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at a meeting of public health nurses of the fifth district, it was announced Saturday. He will speak on "Neurological Conditions in Children."

METHODIST HOSPITAL HOLDINGS INCREASED

Value of Plants Now $16,000,000, Against $2,000,000 12 Years Ago.

The Methodist Episcopal church, south, has increased its hospital holdings in the south from $2,000,000 in 1918 to more than $16,000,000 in 1930.

These figures will be reported by Dr. C. C. Jarrell, general superintendent of the hospital board of the church, to the general conference at Dallas, Texas, May 7.

Dr. Jarrell will point out in his report that in 1918 the denomination owned the Barnes hospital in St. Louis and the Wesley hospital in Atlanta, but that now the church owns 12 hospitals with a total bed capacity of 1,700. Total income from all hospitals last year netted $2,000,000, his report will say.

The hospitals are scattered throughout the south. Barnes hospital at St. Louis has admitted more than 66,300 patients since it was founded and last year cared for an average of 52 charity patients a day.

Wesley Memorial hospital here treated 4,448 patients. Candler nurses' home has recently been erected in Atlanta as a memorial to the sister of Bishop Warren A. Candler and the late Asa G. Candler, Sr.

The Methodist hospital at Memphis cared for 5,449 patients last year.

Other Methodist hospitals also are located at Houston, Texas; Lexington, Ky.; Montgomery, Ala.; Dallas, Texas; Fort Worth, Texas; Durham, N. C.; Elkin, N. C., and Hattiesburg, Miss.

Engineers Will Meet Here on Wednesday

Several hundred prominent refrigerating and mechanical engineers are expected to attend the national meeting of the American Society of Refrigerating Engineers, opening for a three-day session Wednesday at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Possibilities of greater commercial usage of "dry ice" will occupy an important part of the deliberations. F. W. Rabe, engineer for the Anheuser-Busch Company, of St. Louis, will discuss this subject. A paper on "Frozen Fruits," discussing latest developments in fruit crop storage, will be presented by W. R. Tucker, agricultural department agent of the A. B. & C. railway.

The program arranged for the three-day session covers a wide variety of other subjects pertaining to mechanical refrigeration and food preservation.

Tech R. O. T. C. Plans Tournament at Night

The annual military tournament of Georgia Tech will be held on Grant field at 7:30 o'clock at night May 10, it was announced Saturday by Major O. H. Longino, professor of military science and tactics.

The tournament will be featured by prize drills, award of trophies and parade of the Georgia R. O. T. C. organization. Eight highly prized awards will be given to successful competitors in individual and group contests.

Final Rites Held For Mrs. McCurdy

Last rites for Mr. Laomie McCurdy, 50, widow of J. A. McCurdy, sheriff of DeKalb county for 15 years, were held at 3:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon from the First Baptist Church of Decatur with the Rev. A. J. Moncrief officiating. Interment was in Decatur cemetery. As Mrs. McCurdy was a deputy sheriff at the time of her death, Thursday afternoon, all county officials and members of the Decatur Bar Association formed an honorary escort.

Asa Candler Buys 50-Year Leasehold in Fulton Hotel

Robert Fulton hotel, 15-story improvement on the southeast corner of Luckie and Cone streets, of which a 50-year leasehold estate was purchased by Asa G. Candler, Jr., from the Massell Realty Company last week for $800,000. The lease has 42 years to run before the property reverts to M. L. Hirsch, owner of the title to the land. Mr. Candler gave as part payment the old Union stockyards on Howell Mill road, valued at $250,000. J. H. Ewing, of J. H. Ewing & Sons, and J. H. Taylor negotiated the deal.

Home Building Resumption Seen as Next Logical Step

National Expert Points to Return of Conditions Favorable to Residential Construction.

The resumption of home building is the next logical step in the resumption of normal building activity, according to a recent statement of Julius Barnes, chairman of the national business survey conference and chairman of the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, following a report of conditions relating to residential construction made by the executive committee of the national building conference.

Credit Available.

"In most sections an ample supply of credit for home building is available at reasonable cost," Mr. Barnes said. "Prices and terms for materials and equipment for such construction have become fairly well stabilized on a basis satisfactory to the purchaser. Permits issued for repairs and betterments to existing structures since the early part of the year have increased 30 per cent, and the stimulus given these activities has aided appreciably in relieving unemployment.

"With favorable seasonal conditions almost at hand it would appear that attention might now be directed with advantage to requirements for residential building. The resumption of prudent building activity in the residential field will aid materially in bringing employment back to normal."

In its report of conditions relating to residential construction the executive committee said:

Costs Favorable.

"The most important single factor of recent development has been the increase in the supply and reduction in the cost of money available for residential building. It is true that prices and terms for materials and equipment for such construction are as favorable now as they are likely to be for any coming period of months."

Members of the executive committee making this report are Fenton B. Turck, New York city, chairman; Leonard P. Reaume, Detroit, president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards; Ernest A. Hale, Boston, president of the United States Building and Loan League; Thomas S. Holden, vice president of the F. W. Dodge Corporation; A. C. Pearson, chairman of the United Publishers, Inc.; R. B. White, president of the Exchange Sawmills Sales Company; W. A. Starrett, president of Starrett Brothers, and George A. Wilson, of Breed, Abbott and Morgan.

Next Realtor Sales Meeting To Be Monday

Real estate salesmen of the city will hold another session in the series of residential sales promotion meetings at 7:30 o'clock Monday night in the Chamber of Commerce building, it was announced by George J. Morris, chairman of the residential sales committee, Atlanta Real Estate Board, which is sponsoring the movement.

Three well-known figures in this field of the local real estate profession are scheduled as principal speakers for the Monday gathering. They are G. M. Taylor, R. C. Mizell and F. R. Wing.

Mr. Wing will talk on "Correct Methods of Showing Property." "Specializing" will be the subject of Mr. Mizell's address. Mr. Taylor's talk will be on the subject "Creative Selling."

Although arranged by and held under auspices of the board's residential sales committee, the promotional meetings are open to the entire profession, Chairman Morris stated.

The bi-weekly sessions of the real estate men is looked upon as one of the highlights of co-operative movements ever to have been undertaken within the local profession. According to opinions current among those attending the gatherings, the series has given rise to exchange of a wealth of information among leading salesmen in the residential field that is of considerable value to those participating.

TREMONT HOTEL OPENS FIRST UNIT

First unit of the new $500,000 Tremont hotel at the corner of Forsyth and Mitchell streets was opened Saturday, and the entire hostelry will be completed by the time the Forsyth street viaduct is ready for traffic, it was announced.

Opening of the Tremont marks the return of Mr. Wilmot to the hotel business after five years since he sold his hotel interests here to enter the real estate and building field. Prior to 1925 he had been associated with the Cannons and other large hotel operators in the construction and management of several hotels in Atlanta.

Mr. Wilmot stated that Dr. D. W. S. Fry, who has been identified with hotels here for more than 10 years, will be assistant manager and E. T. Wilmot will be night manager.

The new Tremont was built by M. L. Thrower as part of the general progress of development on the southside. The Tremont is one block from the Terminal station and when the Forsyth street viaduct is reopened, will be two blocks from the new Union station.

The hotel has 150 rooms, each with tile bath and built-in tub and is equipped with the first thermostat automatically controlled heating system to be installed in an Atlanta hotel. Mr. Wilmot said. Furnishings are modern and luxurious, more than $10,000 having been spent for brussells and axminster carpets on floors of rooms and hallways.

The first unit extends 157 feet along Mitchell street and 87 feet along Forsyth street while the second unit, now nearing completion, will extend 237 feet southward from Mitchell and parallel with Forsyth.

Mr. Wilmot and his family have occupied one suite in the new hotel and a number of rooms have been built en suite to accommodate permanent residents.

House Will Reopen Hill Seat Contest

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—A house elections committee today decided to reopen hearings on the election contest of John Philip Hill against Representative Vincent L. Palmisano for the seat from the third Maryland district.

S. H. HAWKINS JOINS HALLMAN-WHITTEN

Popular Figure in Rental Field Taken Into Firm.

Assuming his new duties with the Hallman-Whitten Company last Thursday, May 1, Seaborn H. Hawkins, popular and active figure of the real estate fraternity, has made his entry in the local field as a member of the firm after several years of success as a real estate executive.

The connection of Mr. Hawkins with the Hallman-Whitten firm is seen as the last step in expansion of the recently organized concern. Formed several months ago through purchase of the established renting department of B. M. Grant Company by two leaders in this division of the profession, the Hallman-Whitten Company has reported notable strides in the apartment property management market, in which it specializes.

Mr. Hawkins' entry into the firm, seen as an important phase of its growth promises valuable additions to the facilities and personnel ability of the concern. For a long time he has been prominently identified with the real estate concern, Lipscomb, Weyman & Chapman, formerly Weyman & Connors.

Being a native of Atlanta and engaged in the real estate professsion here for six years, Mr. Hawkins has a wide acquaintance, both social and business. His rapid rise in the profession is regarded as one of the achievements of the younger group in Atlanta's property world.

Harry H. Hallman and R. M. Whitten, heads of the firm into which Mr. Hawkins has come, have been recognized as important factors in the renting field for a number of years. Both are widely experienced in local property dealings. In addition to apartment management, the concern handles rentals on all residential property and commercial leasing.

Details of Highway Projects Completed

Details of projects, bids for which are to be received Saturday, have been completed by state highway engineers, J. W. Barnett, highway director, said Saturday.

Mr. Barnett was unable to make public the projects, but stated that they would total approximately $1,500,000. Other highway contracts will be awarded later in the month, probably May 22, he added.

Modern Medical Office Building That Will Supplant City's 'Original Apartment'

The new and the old: A study of progress made possible by fire which destroyed the Doctors' building at the northwest corner of Peachtree and Pine streets. To the left is shown the preliminary drawing by Pringle & Smith, architects, of the modern medical office building and stores to be built on the site of the old structure. It will be 11 stories high instead of nine, as shown here. To the right are seen the antiquated structures that will be cleared away. The rear wall of the fire-gutted building is shown in the right background. Originally the corner building was the Marlborough, Atlanta's first apartment structure.

PRIMARY AT SPARTA TO BE HELD MONDAY

SPARTA, Ga., May 3.—The primary for naming a mayor and four aldermen will be held here Monday. The primary will be held under the rules of the Australian ballot system.

Candidate for offices include: For mayor, L. P. Berry and George W. Johnson; for aldermen, Harry Binion, Gilbert Burdick, C. S. Jernigan, G. B. Moore, O. M. Peden, J. F. Smith and H. K. White.

The candidates are running on separate tickets, the old ticket being composed of G. W. Johnson for mayor with Harry Binion, Gilbert Burdick, G. B. Moore and H. K. White as the board of aldermen. The candidate for mayor and the last two named candidates for aldermen are now serving on the present council.

The new ticket is headed by L. P. Berry for mayor and C. S. Jernigan, J. F. Smith and O. M. Peden for aldremen.

Mother, Children Struck by Auto

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., May 3.—Mrs. Carson Wilson was knocked down, a baby thrown from her arms and her four-year-old son run over by a young driver at the intersection of the four main streets here Saturday. The mother was bringing the baby to a hospital to have burns made by hot coffee dressed. Other than a bruise from striking the pavement the baby was unhurt. The mother was badly bruised from the impact and fall and the little boy sustained a badly injured leg. It is said the accident was unavoidable.

SOPERTON POSTMASTER GETS REAPPOINTMENT

SOPERTON, Ga., May 3.—Telegrams were received here from Senator Harris stating that B. H. McLarty had been confirmed as postmaster. In June of last year McLarty's nomination was sent to the senate by President Hoover, but Congressman W. W. Larsen made a fight on the nomination on the grounds that the postmaster had been active in politics in the 12th district.

During the investigation of the charges congress adjourned and the matter went over. April 1 President Hoover again sent the nomination to the senate and Mr. Larsen again asked to be heard. He appeared before a subcommittee of the senate and registered his complaints early this week but the committee reported favorably. McLarty was first appointed postmaster by President Wilson July 1, 1919.

Race May Be Made By Waycross Woman

WAYCROSS, Ga., May 3.—considerable interest is being manifested here in the rumors as to candidates for the state senate. Under the rotation plan this is the year for Ware county to provide the senator. Today especial interest attached to the rumor that a prominent Waycross club woman may announce.

Now, Believe This or Not

Adna Lucy Howze and Merris Gelders live in Fitzgerald, Ga. The girl is the great-granddaughter and the boy a great-grandson of men who fought in the Federal ranks. In an essay contest given by the Daughters of the Confederacy, these two children were the winners. The subject of the essay was "Jefferson Davis."

Relics Tell Interesting Story Of Georgia's Picturesque Past

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., May 3.—Tarnished old brass buttons that once gleamed brightly on coats of Confederate gray, receipts for negroes sold in slavery, bright beads found in old Indian mounds in Georgia, and many other relics that tell the interesting tale of Georgia's past are being added daily to the Georgia history museum that has been established at the Georgia State College for Women here as a project of the Georgia history class and the History Club.

Dr. Amanda Johnson, head of the department of history, was the founder of the museum and has been the guiding spirit in its growth. Diligently she has searched out old objects of historical interest in Baldwin county.

A quaint old "At Home" card of Governor and Mrs. Joseph E. Brown was donated by Miss Dorothy Barr, of Milledgeville. A grant of land signed by Governor John Milledge and concerning land near old Fort Wilkinson, was given by Miss Emily Echols, of Steven's Pottery. There is a curious old book, kept by some Baldwin county resident in the last century, containing many odd bits of information such as how to make tallow candles, a sure cure for dropsy, how to cure sick stomach and other things. One of the most valuable of the collection is a bound volume containing the laws of Georgia from 1800 to 1810, including the acts relating to the founding of Milledgeville. This was donated by Mrs. J. L. Beeson, wife of the president of the college.

Old Valentine.

An old, old valentine, donated by Mrs. George Tunnell, of Milledgeville, bears a verse written in the fancy handwriting of another day, but with wording indicating that young love and Valentine day were just the same then as now. The verse is:

"I have sweet thoughts of thee, dear one.
Which I would fain reveal
When in the crowd or when alone
Upon my heart they steal.
They charm like music heard at even
Upon the calm blue sea;
Much sweeter than a dream of heaven are these dear thoughts to me."

Mrs. David Ferguson, of Milledgeville, donated a copy of The Christian Observer, oldest Presbyterian publication issued in the United States. Issue of The Countryman containing the first literary efforts of Joel Chandler Harris was given by Mrs. Dennis Turner, of Milledgeville. T. B. Coxwell, of Baldwin county, gave an old account book, showing prices of merchandise in Milledgeville as early as 1838. Miss Annie Lee Coxwell gave an antique lantern of wrought iron, formerly used upon one of the magnificent estates around Milledgeville. Harry Coxwell donated an old Indian grist mill that was in use in the 17th century. Jane Rambo, of Baldwin, gave an old Indian cudgel, and Colonel Erwin Sibley, of Milledgeville, presented the museum with Indian tomahawks found on his father's farm near here.

Grants of Land.

A letter sent before the days of stamps in Georgia was the gift of Miss Luie Cobb, of Washington county. A bill for a young lady's trousseau in 1882 was given by Miss Betty Murray, of Lincoln county. Grants of land, affixed with a wax state seal and signed by Governor Wilson Lumpkin, were given by Miss Helen Durham, of Greene county. Bright colored Indian beads found in Milton county Indian mounds were donated by Miss Dorcas Rucker, of Alpharetta. Miss Martha Weaver, of Spalding county, gave Indian arrowheads. Types of these were also given by Miss Ethel Carter.

An oath of loyalty to the United States was presented by Miss Farise Sasser, of Houston county. Old Confederate money was given by several people, including Miss Cornelia Chappell, of Richmond, Va., whose father was the first president of G. S. C. W., and the author of a history of Georgia; Miss Vesta Merritt, of Carroll county; Miss Alice Napier, of Baldwin; Miss Lillian Brown, of Sparta; Miss Myrtle Jenkins, Washington county; Miss Mildred O'Neal, of Merriwether; Miss Jimmie Davis, of Morgan county; Miss Nora Ethel English, of Griffin; Miss Lottie Mae Curl, of Dodge county, and others.

A bullet found on Kennesaw mountain was donated by Miss Jewell Daniel, of Marietta county.

Two letters written by Alexander H. Stephens are included in the collection. One, donated by Miss Annie Lee Sims, of Lincoln county, was written by Stephens to Governor Pinckney, of South Carolina, in an effort to help a soldier get a discharge. The other, donated by Miss Mary Lizzie Askew, of Washington county, was written to a man who was interested in the passing of a pension bill when Stephens was in congress.

A hotel bill from the Hotel Richmond, in Augusta, in 1836, shows an interesting comparison in hotel rates then and now. The board at the hotel, including meals, was $6 per week. A guest staying the week-end was presented with a bill for $2.75.

An old land grant from the days of the land lottery system was given by Miss Lizzie Mae Gammage, of Sumter county. Another land grant was the gift of Miss Lois Patterson, of Lamar county.

Letters of Veterans.

Letters written by Confederate veterans to their loved ones during the war were given by Misses Rosabel Burch, of Richmond county; Olive Jordan, Baldwin.

Wood from the tree under which Jefferson Davis camped the night before he was taken prisoner, and stones from the chimney of the house on the porch of which he rested, were given by Miss Claire Flanders, of Irwin county.

An interesting letter, donated by Miss Irma Vaughn, of Cartersville, shows the heart-breaking separations that slavery brought about. The letter is as follows:

"Dear Sir: Willis is here to get me to sell him to you. You may have him for $5,000 in treasury notes, or $200 in gold. If you choose to take him at either price, my son will give you a bill of sale. If you will take him, do it at once, so that I may try to use the money. All my folks oppose my selling Willis, but I do it out of feeling for him and his wife."

A Stone Mountain Memorial coin was given by Dr. G. H. Webber, of the faculty.

A copy of the Daily Chronicle, published at Augusta, July 19, 1861, carries in its headlines an article on "Starving Out the South," predicting the probable tactics of the north in the war.

Many other fascinating old relics are contained in the glas cases just outside the history rooms. It is planned to donate a special room to this museum in a new G. S. C. W. library some day.

JASPER COUNTY LOSES.

MACON, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—Jasper county, complete, shows a loss in population of 7,676, or nearly 50 per cent during the last 10 years, according to figures released here today by George L. Blossom, supervisor of the census for the eighth census district.

The population on April 1 of this year totaled 8,686, the report shows, while in 1920 there were 16,362 persons in that county. The report also shows 1,147 farmers in the county.

The only increases in population in figures released today were in Baldwin county, where the Georgia Reformatory for Boys showed an increase of 83 and Allen's Invalid Home an increase of 103.

In connection with the report Mr. Blossom gave out the population figures on missing militia districts of Jasper county and several other militia districts that have been completed, as follows:

Lindale Symphonic Band Gains Recognition

BY RILEY M'KOY.

ROME, Ga., May 3.—In Lindale, four miles from here, there is a symphonic band modeled along European lines—a band which has already a name for itself in this state and is now rapidly becoming recognized over the entire country through its regular weekly radio programs.

The director is Paul Nixon, of Rome, who has built up what is very likely the only symphonic band in the state. He introduced this idea as an innovation last summer when he added violin, 'cello and bass viol sections to his organization. The band has toured all of north Georgia giving free concerts as the guests of various cities. Last summer they presented several Sunday afternoon concerts at Marietta, Cartersville, Rockmart, Cedartown and other places. Each summer season for the past eight years the organization has been heard in an open-air, free Sunday afternoon concert on the lawn of the auditorium at Lindale, Ga. People come from a radius of 40 miles to hear them and each concert is attended by never less than a thousand lovers of good band music.

The Lindale band was organized in 1907 by Captain H. P. Meikleham, agent of the Massachusetts mills at Lindale, a division of the Pepperell Manufacturing Company of Boston. Its first membership numbered 12. At present there is only one member of the organization, in addition to the director, who was in the original band.

The band, which has given a number of radio concerts from Atlanta stations, was heard an hour each Monday night for a period of several months from Station WFDV at Rome, Georgia's latest radio station, operating on a frequency of 1370 K. The final program was presented last Monday night at 9 o'clock, and now preparations are being made to broadcast over a special hook-up the coming Sunday afternoon concerts held at Lindale.

The Sunday afternoon concerts which are given each summer are to start about May 15 and will continue through the month of September. These programs are not for radio, but are open-air affairs presented on the lawn in front of the Lindale auditorium in Lindale, one of the model mill towns of the south.

PAUL NIXON,
Leader of the Lindale Symphonic band (above) which recently presented its last regular weekly radio program from station WFDV at Rome, Ga., and is now preparing for summer Sunday afternoon open-air concerts, which will be broadcast by the station through a special hook-up between Rome and Lindale.

The director, Paul Nixon, who is the inspiration of those under him, served in the seventh division, fifty-sixth infantry for a little more than two years. During this time as a band leader he spent one year in France, when his band won a contest staged by the seventh division. As a result shortly after the signing of the armistic the organization was sent to Monte Carlo for three weeks, where they played nightly.

Mr. Nixon is the center of Rome's musical world, just as he was the spirit of his band in France. Not only does he direct the Lindale band, but directs the Rome Symphony orchestra which gives three concerts each year. The last of these concerts is always the climax of a citywide "music week," an annual event. His band is also allotted an evening for a concert.

Many of the numbers played by both the orchestra and the band are compositions by Mr. Nixon. One of his more well-known numbers is "The Legion of America," adopted as the official song of the Georgia department of the American Legion at the state convention held in Rome two years ago. At the national convention in Omaha, the official American Legion band played this number while President Calvin Coolidge was welcomed and given an ovation. At that time it was planned to name this song as the official one for the national organization, but due to the press of other business the matter, late on the calendar, was never reached. The lyric of this anthem was written by Professor E. L. Wright, headmaster of Darlington school, also at Rome.

"The Sign of the K," Kiwanis song, published in Kiwanis International book of songs, was also written by Mr. Nixon, assisted by Professor Wright. Some of Mr. Nixon's symphonic works include "Goldilocks" and "Scenes From the Dark Continent." Of the more popular type song he has written "Dark Eyes I Hear You Call," and "I Wonder Why." The words of the latter number were written by Warren C. Miller, of Atlanta.

One number which has proved popular with radio audiences at the "Lady Pepperell Hour," a morning broadcast given each week, has been "Daddy's Lullaby," written by Paul Nixon and his father, E. S. Nixon, who is also a well-known musician. This number has been sung by "Lady Pepperell," who is Mrs. Paul Nixon. The accompaniment is played by Mrs. E. S. Nixon and Paul Nixon, her son, can be heard at the 'cello. It is of interest that two years after the organization of the Lindale band, Mr. Nixon left and studied 'cello and composition in Germany, returning to the directorship immediately after the war.

LIVE STOCK EXHIBITION TO BE HELD IN ATHENS

ATHENS, Ga., May 3.—The tenth annual little international live stock show will be held at the Georgia State College of Agriculture in Hardman Hall, home of the animal hunbandry division on Tuesday, May 6, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

The show is sponsored by the Saddle and Sirloin Club at the agriculture college. Since this is the celebration of the first decennial of the exhibition, it is planned to be in the nature of a jubilee, and no effort will be spared in order to make it climax all former showings, it has been announced by those in charge.

Since its initiation ten years ago, the show has been steadily growing. Last year over 1,000 people from all sections of the state were in attendance. It is patterned directly after the International Live Stock Exposition held in Chicago each year.

The main benefit of the show is that it enables students to acquire experience in the essentials of organizing and operating a livestock show. The participants gain an intimate knowledge in fitting and displaying animals which will mean much to their future success as teachers, leaders, and practical producers of live stock, according to Dr. Milton P. Jarnagin, head of the animal husbandry division at the agricultural college.

Prizes Offered.

Several prizes are offered students who win these various contests. The topmost and the most sought after prize is the grand championship prize, which is awarded to the student in animal husbandry scoring the highest number of points in the show. Frank S. Carr, son of Mrs. R. D. Carr, of Jakin, was the winner of the grand prize last year. These contests serve as a stimulus to the proficient and capable fitting of showing live stock.

"Never in the history of the state of Georgia has there been such a tangible demand for a broader knowledge of live stock production," according to Dr. Jarnagin.

"Certain vital economic readjustments are taking place in agriculture. The state has made a most enviable record in diversification. What has been accomplished is insignificant in comparison with our diversified live stock posibilities," says the animal husbandryman.

One hundred of the finest animals at the agricultural college are being cared for with a view to exhibiting in this show by students of the school.

Dog Show.

The dog show of the Little International will be given considerable prominence this year, it has been announced. The theater dog cup is again offered as an award for the best dog in the show.

There will also be a pony show, and the committee reports that more entries than ever before are preparing to be on hand. The school children of Athens are getting their ponies ready for entry.

The military department of the University of Georgia, in co-operating with the show, will provide many thrilling and entertaining horse show numbers. This part of the program has heretofore meant a great deal to the success of the undertaking.

Democratic Committee Drops Sam Freeman

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., May 3.—The Decatur county democratic executive committee, in meeting Saturday morning at the court house, elected D. R. Bryan chairman to the vacancy of the late C. S. Hodges. J. G. Anders was named vice chairman. The committee adopted the rules of the state committee and set August 2 at noon closing date of the entry of county candidates.

Sam Freeman, who was on the committee from Faceville, was dropped because of his oath of allegiance to the republican executive committee, and Monger Duke elected to that vacancy.

3 Bound Over In Youth's Death

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 3.—Tobe Folsom and Claude Adams, white youths, were released Saturday afternoon on bonds of $1,000 each on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death of Stanford Cothron, 17-year-old youth, in the Rocky Ford district of Lowndes county on the night of April 24. Jelks Crosby, another youth, was held in bail of $500.

The three were given a preliminary hearing before Judge J. G. Cranford, of the city court, here Saturday, and the murder charge in the original warrant was reduced.

Defense attorneys requested the court and officers that a warrant charging murder be issued against J. W. Spires, who was the chief witness against the youths. Spires testified that he was awakened the night the murder occurred and looked out the window and saw the blows struck and heard the screams of Cothron, although he did not know who it was being assaulted. Spires said he did not recognize the three defendants, but recognized and described a car owned by one of them.

Spires admitted that, despite hearing the cries and seeing a person being beaten within 200 yards of his window, he did not make any investigation and did not know until the next day that young Cothron had been killed.

MRS. POWERS APPEALS TO SUPREME COURT

Bill of Exceptions Certified by Judge Mathews in Macon.

MACON, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—Judge H. A. Mathews, in Bibb superior court, today certified a bill of exceptions in the case of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth Powers, 72, condemned murderess, authorizing its appeal to the Georgia supreme court.

The record, said to be lengthy, will be prepared in the office of Vivian H. Roberts, clerk, this week and will be forwarded to the higher tribunal.

The appeal will be the first step outside the local court in an effort to save the life of Mrs. Powers, though the crime for which she was convicted occurred a year ago—on May 27.

She and Earl Manchester, of Rochester, Mich., were convicted of slaying James W. Parks, Hapeville, Ga., youthful printer, in an insurance plot. Manchester's motion for a new trial is pending in the supreme court of Georgia.

The principal feature of the appeal is based on a plea in abatement. It attacks (1) the qualifications of the grand jurors, who signed the indictment; (2) the qualifications of the traverse or trial jurors; (3) claims there was not sufficient evidence before the grand jury to warrant the return of a true bill; and (4) claims the indictment null and void because the names of two or three grand jurors were misspelled on the presentment.

The attack on the traverse jury is made because the names of women were excluded from the jury box when the jury commissioners revised the jury list, it was announced.

Dobson Freed By Floyd Jury

ROME, Ga., May 3.—Archie Dobson, charged with the murder of Guy Preacher Burns here several months ago, was acquitted by a Floyd county jury after about an hour's deliberation Saturday. A mistrial was declared in the case last week after the jury failed to agree after hours' of deliberation.

The charge grew out of the death of Burns at a filling station where Dobson was employed. Dobson claiming self-defense and that Burns was making a felonious attack on him at the time he shot him.

EXHIBIT TO FEATURE FORESTRY CONFERENCE

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 3.—One of the features of the Georgia commercial forestry conference, to be held in Savannah on May 26 to 28, with a score of nationally-known experts on the program, will be a display of interest to all timber land owners, naval stores operators and buyers of the products of the forests—from soap and paint to furniture and paper pulp.

The exhibits of wide range showing forest replanting, forest protection, forest conservation, the bad and the best ways of boxing pines, paper manufacture, the hundreds of uses of rosin and spirits, the vast variety of the wood possibilities of the section and many other valuable showings will be in charge of Charles A. Whittle, editor of literature for the Georgia forestry service.

Mr. Whittle, according to announcement made here, has completed arrangements with one of Savannah's leading hotels for space in the corridors and halls to place the exhibit where every delegate to the conference can see them all.

The Savannah conference is sponsored by the Savannah Chamber of Commerce and the Georgia Forestry Association with the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. Guy T. Woolford, of Atlanta, who is president of the Georgia Forestry Association, is chairman of the general committee for the conference, which is composed of 43 prominent Georgians. The Atlanta members of the committee are B. S. Barker, William Candler, L. P. Dickie, C. B. Harman, Francis E. Kamper, B. M. Lufburrow, Dr. Poole Maynard, Haynes McFadden, J. K. Ottley and C. A. Whittle. H. L. Kayton, of Savannah, is chairman of the executive committee, which has arranged the details of the program.

Thomasville Rose Show Attracts Record Crowd

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 3. (AP)—A new record for attendance at the annual rose show, which draws visitors to Thomasville from many sections of the country, was reported Saturday by officials of the Garden Club, sponsors of the show.

The turnstiles showed 21,986 adults admitted. Although this does not include children, it exceeded by several hundred the 21,565 admissions to the 1929 show. The 1929 figures included children. Club officials estimated the aggregate attendance of adults and children at yesterday's show at 23,000 or more.

The club said that from every standpoint, the show was the best ever held here. The show yesterday was the ninth to be held here.

EASTERN STAR ORDER OBSERVES ANNIVERSARY

Lawrenceville Chapter Holds Interesting Program on 9th Birthday.

LAWRENCEVILLE, Ga., May 3. Anne Winn Chapter, No. 203, Order Eastern Star, celebrated its ninth anniversary at the Masonic temple here. The hall was beautifully decorated for the occasion with flowers of every hue, and the burning tapers carried out the emblematic colors.

Miss Alice McKelvey, worthy matron, presided, and G. S. Perry, associate patron, in behalf of the chapter welcomed the visitors in an address. A short program was carried out by Davenport's orchestra and others, as follows: "History of the Chapter," by Miss Minnie Peeples; solo, "Star of the East," by Mrs. Sam G. Brown; reading, Evelyn Mays; solo, Miss Myrtice Kelley; reading, "When Pa and Ma Joined the Eastern Star," by Mrs. Tom Tanner; orchestra, "Farewell to Thee."

The birthday cake was beautifully embossed, having nine lighted candles, which were blown out by the past matrons, Mrs. Tommie Thompson, Mrs. Ellen Robinson, Miss Myrtice Kelley, Mrs. Lois Wilson Perry, Mrs. Edna Nix, Mrs. Junie Aderholt, Mrs. Grace Craig, Mrs. Virginia Bagwell and Miss Alice McKelvey.

Punch was served throughout the evening and at a late hour cream and cake in the five colors of the order was served.

Clean-Up Week.

The week beginning May 5 and ending May 10 has been designated by Mayor J. C. Houston as the Lawrenceville annual clean-up week, and the city will co-operate with the members of the Garden Club in every possible way to make the town more sanitary by the removal of the trash and rubbish.

The custom of observing an annual clean-up week in the spring of each year has grown in favor from the date of its inception, and when properly practiced has great possibilities in promoting health and beauty wherever carried out.

Mrs. J. H. McGee has been appointed to head a committee of local citizens for the purpose of planning a better homes campaign in Lawrenceville. This appointment was made from the national office of Better Homes in America in Washington, D. C., which each year sponsors a nationwide program for the improvement of housing conditions. The organization is headed by Secretary Wilbur, who succeeded President Hoover as its president.

Mrs. McGee has appointed a committee of over 50 Lawrenceville women to assist her in the work and the duties of the committee will be to interest those in their immediate neighborhood "to clean up, paint up and plant up," and in every way possible make their homes and business places more attractive, healthier and happier.

Church Observes Anniversary.

Mount Maria Baptist church, located in the northeastern section of Gwinnett county, will celebrate its 150th anniversary Sunday, May 4. This is no doubt one of the oldest churches in this section of the state, and a record to be proud of.

James W. Merritt, the new secretary-treasurer of the state Baptist board, will speak at the 11 o'clock hour, and the pastor, Rev. R. L. Lawson, will have other speakers for the occasion. The Smith Sacred Singers, of Lawrenceville, will have charge of the music, and with the other preparations completed a big gathering is expected to be at the old church on the 150th birthday of this old house of worship.

Moultrie Youth Hurt by Shot

MOULTRIE, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—W. A. Phillips, 22, teacher at Moultrie High school, was in a hospital here Sunday in a serious condition from a gunshot wound suffered Friday night when a pistol he was loading was discharged accidentally.

Phillips was loading the weapon at a picnic at which he was entertaining members of a Sunday school class he taught when it discharged. The bullet entered his side.

He is the son of the Rev. D. G. Phillips, pastor of the First Associate Reformed Presbyterian church, Charlotte, N. C., and a nephew of John R. Phillips, member of the Georgia highway board.

Robber's Victim Dies of Injuries

SAVANNAH, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—H. H. Peeples, aged hardware merchant here, died Saturday of injuries suffered several weeks ago when attacked by a burglar.

He went alone to his store on Sunday morning before taking an automobile outing. While there, an unidentified burglar entered the store and robbed him. Mr. Peeples struggled with the robber and was pushed down. His hip was hurt and he never recovered from the injury.

The burglar escaped.

Griffin Scout Wins Heroism Medal

NEWTON CROUCH.

GRIFFIN, Ga., May 3.—Newton Crouch, Giffin Boy Scout, has been awarded the gold honor medal for unusual heroism in time of danger by the national court of honor of the Boy Scouts of America. Young Crouch was recently presented the live-saving medal by the national court of honor for his bravery when he rescued Miss Willie Childers from drowning.

Crouch's brave act occurred here on Friday, May 17, when the two young people, with other members of the freshman class of the Griffin High school, were in swimming at the Country Club lake. Miss Childers fell into an old well that is said to be near the island in the lake. She went under five times before the rescuers reached her and pulled her to safety.

Gilman Drake, president of the First National Bank of Griffin, was playing golf with three other friends and young Crouch was on the bank watching them. When they heard the girl's screams for help, both Drake and Crouch jumped into her rescue.

They both reached the girl about the same time. She was struggling in water said to be about 30 feet deep. Crouch dived down and brought her to the surface and then he and Dake carried her to the banks of the pond where D. M. Burnette, Scout executive, who was also on the golf course, had been attracted to the scene. He and young Crouch worked over her until she was fully resuscitated.

Crouch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Crouch and is now a member of the sophomore class of the Griffin High school.

Clock Taken by Federals To Be Returned to Georgia

SAINT SIMONS ISLAND, Ga., May 3.—An interesting and unusual ceremony recalling the stirring days of the Civil War will take place here next Tuesday.

Former members of Massachusetts regiments who invaded Georgia during the Civil War, together with boats of the United States navy, will again come to this historic old island but this visit is inspired by sentiments of friendship rather than the terror and devastation of war.

A delegation of prominent citizens from Attleboro, Mass., headed by Mayor Fred Briggs, Joseph W. Martin, Jr., member of congress, and Major John W. Bean, commanding officer of the G. A. R., and representatives of Attleboro civic organizations are coming to Saint Simons Island to present to the descendants of a famous Confederate chieftain a clock taken from his plantation by members of the crew of a United States gunboat while raiding the Georgia coast during the Civil War.

In the colorful, romantic years of the south before the Civil War, one of the outstanding plantations of the Georgia coast was that owned by Thomas Butler King. The King plantation was the rendezvous of much of the wealth and aristocracy of the south in those days and probably typified more closely than any other the northerners' idea of the "Old Southern Plantation" of song and story.

During the Civil War, when Yankee gunboats raided the coast of Georgia, the United States gunboat "Ethan Allen" anchored in Saint Simons sound just off the King plantation.

On January 10, 1863, officers and members of the crew landed at the plantation and confiscated various pieces of old furniture and silverware. After a few days, the gunboat returned to its base at the Boston navy yard and apparently some of those old heirlooms have been drifting around New England homes and curio shops for the past 67 years.

Some months ago, Edmond H. Gingras, a collector of antiques at 15 John street, Attleboro, Mass., in looking over an old clock in his possession found pasted on the back of the dial a slip of paper on which was carefully written in ink the following:

"This clock was taken from the Thomas Butler King plantation, Saint Simons Island, Georgia, January 10, 1863, by members of the crew of the United States gunboat Ethan Allen."

Mr. Gingras, being of a very practical frame of mind, communicated with the navy department at Washington to ascertain if the United States navy at that time had a gunboat bearing the name "Ethan Allen," also if it was off the coast of Georgia during the Civil War. Through the courtesy of the navy department, he was able to procure extracts from the "log" of the "Ethan Allen" which stated it had been on a raiding mission off the coastal islands of Georgia and had anchored in Saint Simons sound on January 10, 1863.

Through a desire to extend to their foes of other days an expression of friendship and comraderie, officers and members of the G. A. R. in Attleboro, Mr. Gingras and representatives of Governor Frank G. Allen arranged to present the clock to descendants of Thomas Butler King. They will arrive in Savannah over the Ocean Steamship line and will be met by a delegation headed by the mayor of Brunswick and the mayor of Savannah and shown the historical points of interest in Savannah and along the coastal islands of Georgia to Brunswick and Saint Simons Island.

The presentation of the clock will be made by Congressman Joseph W. Martin, of Attleboro, and Georgia's official representative at the presentation will be United States Senator Walter F. George. There will be representatives of the Confederate Veterans' Association, th United Daughters of the Confederacy and other southern societies. While the ceremony incident to the clock presentation is going on at the clubhouse, music from the bands on board the boats of the United States navy, anchored in the sound, will add a fitting touch of federal recognition.

The only building on this historic plantation now remaining is the old slave hospital, built from oyster shell (tabby), and which is now used as the clubhouse for the Sea Island Beach Golf Club. In the years to come, this old clock will look out over the forest and beach-lined course, spotted here and there with 18 brilliant grass greens where generations ago slaves of the King plantation crooned their negro melodies while picking the famous long staple sea island cotton which made these Georgia islands famous.

Georgia Man Hurt in Wreck

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 3.—(AP)—John Darus, 59, of Cairo, Ga., who was seriously injured in an automobile accident here Saturday, was said to be resting comfortably in a local hospital tonight.

Darus' car got beyond control and catapulted into a cemetery when a faulty rear axle developed. Darus received internal injuries which at first were thought would prove fatal. Hospital attendants Saturday tonight said that he may recover.

Mrs. D. R. Darus, a daughter-in-law, and her five-year-old son, Randall, also were injured while two other relatives escaped injuries. Hospital attendants said Mrs. Darus and her son were only slightly hurt.

MRS. MAGEE CONTINUES IN CRITICAL CONDITION

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 3.—Mrs. John Magee, of Charleston, S. C., who was injured in an automobile wreck on highway No. 38 Thursday, is reported Saturday night to be still in a critical condition. Mrs. Magee was hurried to Valdosta and placed in the Bird hospital and it is understood that X-rays show that she sustained a fracture of the spinal column. Her condition is now no better than when she was first brought here.

Mrs. Ruth Magee, a sister-in-law, who was injured at the same time, is reported to be slowly recovering, and it is expected that she will recover. The three children who were also in the car were not injured beyond cuts and bruises.

The Magee party was en route from Charleston to visit relatives at Pelham when their car turned over and was wrecked on a sharp curve on highway No. 38.

Best Drilled

H. Glenn Oetgen, Jr., of Savannah, winner of the Jordan F. Brooks trophy, offered to the best-drilled member of the Benedictine Cadets of Savannah.

TAMPERING CHARGED IN ELECTION PROBE

AUGUSTA, Ga., May 3.—(AP)—Proponents of a million dollar Richmond county school bond issue cast votes in the names of a number of persons out of the city on the day of balloting, William H. Fleming, attorney, charged after an examination of ballot boxes.

The boxes of the November 6, 1929, election were opened under a court order, granted at the request of persons seeking to prove the issue illegal.

In checking seventh ward lists he found a vote cast in the name of Federal Judge W. H. Barrett, Fleming said, and added that Judge Barrett was holding court in Savannah on November 6. Names of other persons who were visiting in New York and other cities on that day were also found, he declared.

No precinct returns were found in the sixth ward boxes, Fleming said.

FAKE INSECTICIDE LEADS TO 4 ARRESTS

ADEL, Ga., May 3.—Four men have been arrested here under warrants charging them with mixing and selling a fake insecticide.

Between 16,000 and 20,000 pounds of the fake insecticide were disposed of to tobacco farmers in the state. The men, it was said, operated under the firm name of the "Georgia-Carolina Chemical Company, Savannah, Georgia," and branded their product "Field Brand Arsenate of Lead."

Analysis at the department of agriculture laboratory disclosed that while such a preparation should contain 30 per cent arsenic their product contained only one-half of one per cent. It was manufactured at an estimated cost of $1.14 per 100 pounds and sold at $10 per 100 pounds to the purchasers, it was said.

The four men, it was said, had no connection with the Georgia-Carolina Chemical Company of Savannah. The plant used in mixing their preparation is said to have been found in a swamp near here.

The specific charges against them are selling insecticides not registered, failing to purchase and attach state tax tags and misbranding their product. The warrants were taken out by W. F. Hudson in the name of Eugene Talmadge, state commissioner of agriculture.

VISIT JACKSONVILLE'S BEACHES THIS SUMMER

Sea-Spiced Pleasures for the whole Southeast
HANGY ocean-breezes vital with health-giving energy . . . lacy surf tumbling against the broad, white crescent of a matchless beach . . . surf and shore sports . . . amusements . . . days brilliant with sunshine . . . nights graciously cool . . . these make every second you spend at Jacksonville's beaches alive with new and keen delights.
For vacation, holiday and week-end fun, the Southeast has no other resort to compare with these magnificent beaches. Within one day's travel range of every South-eastern city and town, they invite you and your family to come for a day, a month or the whole summer.
Generous amusement facilities provide an uninterrupted round of pleasure. Sea-bathing, surf-fishing, fresh-water fishing nearby, golf, riding, driving, dancing and a thousand and one other enjoyments make day and night vibrant with activity. Or, if you desire, remote and restful solitude may be found.
Nowhere else in the world can be found such a shore. Gently sloping it sweeps away for thirty miles to quaint St. Augustine, a hard-packed boulevard that is 600 feet wide at low tide. To drive its length is an exhilarating experience. Palm-crested guardian dunes overlook miles of tropical landscape that challenges exploration.
Not far away is Jacksonville with its cosmopolitan atmosphere, its theaters and shops. A broad concrete highway connects Jacksonville and the beach.
Decide now to bring your family to visit Jacksonville's beaches this summer. Costs are reasonable and lodgings of every sort are available at the beaches or in Jacksonville.

DX RADIO THRILLING IN S. AMERICAN WILDS

WGY Comes in as Fans Twist Dials in Andes Mountains.

BY C. E. BUTTERFIELD.
(Associated Press Radio Editor.)

Listening in hasn't lost all of its thrills by any means.

Imagine being thousands of miles away from home in the mountains of South America with a three-tube receiver, that sometimes took a cranky spell, the only link to the land of the states.

Then, with bedtime at hand, a last try at bringing in one of those high powered broadcast stations which sometimes reach across the equator.

Shh! What's that? "Illinois Loyalty" being played by Vincent Lopez and his orchestra in a New York hotel as an introduction to a guest announcer.

Faintly the first strains came over, then more volume as careful adjustment, brought in WGY, approximately 2,500 miles away. Bedtime was postponed until the hour's program ended, and then the portable typewriter to tell the originators of the program all about it.

That, in effect, puts M. G. Moksnes in a class a little different from his parting salutation, "Just another radio fan," in a letter written at Cali, Colombia.

Addressed to Mr. Lopez and his guest, the letter tells the story like this:

"It is past 12 o'clock and WGY has just signed off. We have thoroughly enjoyed your concert through a three-tube set. A Wisconsite, I was thrilled to hear 'Illinois' and your announcer, and for a moment dreamed of sitting in the bowl at Camp Randall, Madison, witnessing a football game.

"We are in the Caucau valley between the Western and Central Cordilleras of the Andes and approximately 2,300 miles from New York city. Reception this evening was exceptionally good over WGY.

Maytime Flowers In Majestic Hour

The flowers, sweets and good wishes that always fill the May baskets, when this time-honored custom is commemorated each year, will be found in riotous profusion when the Majestic hour tonight is presented over the international network of the Columbia Broadcasting system from 8 to 9 o'clock.

Drawing upon the wealth of music that has been inspired by the blossoming flowers of the world, the Majestic entertainers, Muriel LaFrance, Grace LaMar, Redferne Hollinshead, the quartet, and Arnold Johnson and his orchestra, have prepared May baskets for the entire Majestic audience of the United States and Canada.

Shy little violets will blossom forth under a soothing rain, honeysuckle will twine around the rambler roses of melody. Daisies, magnolias, tulips, orange blossoms, and the whole flower family will be present with smiling, upturned faces to greet the radio listeners. To assure the freshness of the flowers, Arnold Johnson will revive a song hit of a few years ago, "Rain," and, with the assistance of the quartet, will offer a new arrangement of the popular "Singing in the Rain."

"Roses of Picardy" will be one of the solos by Redferne Hollinshead, tenor, while Muriel LaFrance, soprano, will sing the beautiful "Only a Rose" from "The Vagabond Lover."

Slater Will Speak On Radio Credits

"How to Handle Collections for the Radio Business" is the subject of an address to be delivered by W. H. Slater, manager of the Atlanta store of the Haverty Furniture Company, before the May membership meeting of the Atlanta Radio Dealers' Association, Wednesday evening, at 6:30 with supper at the Winecoff hotel. Mr. Slater has had a wide and varied experience in handling credits and collections for the Haverty Furniture Company, and is especially well qualified to handle the subject assigned to him.

The entertainment feature for the meeting will consist of several numbers on the new Victor Theremin, by Perry Bechtel, well-known entetainer, accompanied on the piano by Forest Traylor.

T. C. Dickson, vice president of Myers-Dickson Furniture Company, is chairman in charge of arranging the program for the meeting.

The Atlanta Radio Dealers' Association was organized about a year ago, with comparatively few members, and has grown until its membership now numbers 60 leading retail and wholesale radio dealers of the city. Just recently the Atlanta association took out a membership in Trade Associations, Chicago, Ill., a national body which handles everything of interest to the radio dealers from a national standpoint.

Mather To Sponsor Program on WGST

Mather Brothers, 229-231 Peachtree street, will sponsor a daily radio program over station WGST from 8:45 to 9 o'clock in the morning beginning Monday, it is announced by Roy Mather, one of the members of the firm.

The program will feature selections played on the Wurlitzer organ at the Paramount theater and will be known as "Mather's Morning Musical." Mr. Mather says requests will have a prominent part on the program, and listeners are invited to ask for their favorite numbers.

Radio Secret Disclosed.

CINCINNATI, May 3.—(AP)—Another radio secret is hereby disclosed. Those of you who have tuned in either WLW or WOR early enough on Monday, Wednesday or Friday evening to hear the Hon. J. Ezra Butternut may have wondered who he is. Well, the judge is none other than Don Carney, using the same diction that made the character of Luke Higgins, of the WOR Main Street, more or less famous.

Tibbett in Role of Radio Fan

Lawrence Tibbett, Metropolitan opera star who was here last week, is an ardent radio fan. He is shown here in his room at the Biltmore tuning an Atwater Kent receiver which was supplied him by Hopkins Equipment Company, Atwater Kent distributor in this territory. Mr. Tibbett has often appeared as the soloist of the Sunday night Atwater Kent concerts.

Firestone To Give Message Monday

One of the most unusual and interesting messages ever sent to America's 26,000,000 motorists will be heard through the air Monday night when the Voice of Firestone celebrates its 18th month on the air with a special jubilee program.

Franklyn Baur, tenor; Vaughn De Leath, contralto, and the Firestone Symphonic orchestra, led by Hugo Mariani will share in celebrating the anniversary.

Baur will sing "The Fool Hath Said There Is No God," by Geoffrey O'Hare, and "The Hills of Home," by Fox. Miss De Leath will offer "Just A-Wearyin' for You," by Carrie Jacobs Bond, and "Gypsy Trail," by Galloway.

Broadcasts "Worst Hour."

HOUSTON, Texas, May 3.—(AP)—Broadcasting the world's "worst radio hour" is the aim of station KTUE. If someone telephones the station and says to Roy Hofheinz, "Listen, Silly," he feels good, for it is his duty as director of the "Mincemeat hour" to make the program the silliest possible. The "Mincemeat hour," a Saturday night studio feature, is purposely terrible.

Radios Installed on Planes.

FORT WORTH, Texas, May 3.—(AP)—Radio receiving sets are being installed by the Southern Air Transport division of the American Airways, Inc., in planes operated on the Dallas-Fort Worth leg of the Dallas-Cleveland passenger line. The sets will enable the pilots to receive weather reports every 30 minutes and a continuous directional signal broadcast by the government radio beacons.

ALL-NIGHT PROGRAM TO OPEN RADIO WFAA

Dixie's First 50,000-Watt Transmitter To Go on Air Next Saturday.

DALLAS, Texas, May 3.—(Special.)—The first super-power station in the south, WFAA, Dallas, will make its debut on the air at 9 p. m. Saturday, May 10, according to latest plans. The new 50,000-watt WFAA transmitter will be the most powerful broadcaster for the time being below WENR, Chicago, and west of WLW, Cincinnati.

The Dallas Power and Light Company, a public utility, will have the honor of introducing the new station to its enlarged public. All winter this organization has sponsored a series of artist concerts from WFAA designed to acquaint the listening public with the finished musical talent in the city. A symphony orchestra directed by Alexander Keese and soloists will be heard.

Other programs enlisting more than 200 singers and instrumentalists will begin at 10 p. m. and continue until 8 a. m. Sunday, May 11. There will be occasional talks and dedicatory features. The programs are under the management of Robert S. Pool.

Station WFAA was opened by the Dallas News and the Dallas Journel in the summer of 1922. The initial power was 250 watts, increased in three months to 500 watts and raised last autumn to 5,000 when the first unit of the superpower transmitter was installed.

The station plant is located 18 miles northwest of Dallas on the new northwest highway. The structure is finished in tile and stucco and has been designed as a show place along the motor trail connecting Texas with Colorado, Washington and Oregon.

Studios are housed in the Baker hotel, downtown Dallas, where the facilities include three broadcasting rooms, executive offices and a large musical library.

CLASSICAL DANCES STROMBERG FORTE

Monday Night Program To Feature Rhythms of Varied Climes.

Classical airs touched with the dance rhythm of varied times and climes abound on the Stromberg-Carlson program Monday night from 8 to 8:30 o'clock. This program is played by the Rochester Civic orchestra under Guy Fraser Harrison's direction over WSB and a nation-wide hook-up originating at Rochester and spread over the WJZ network.

The opening number will be one of Dvorak's "Slavonic Dances" which have taken on new life in orchestral versions although the distinguished Czech composer originally intended them for the piano. The "Japanese Dance Suite" by Holst will strike a more quaint and dainty note in the oriental atmosphere.

Alexander Leventon, concert master of the orchestra, will play in solo on this program "Hejre Kati," a popular Hungarian Czardas or Gypsy dance, by Hubay. Like all the Hungarian dances this number sparkles with life and fire and contrasts slow dreamy movements with rapid changes to fast and animated ones.

The complete program follows:

Slavonic Dance ..... Dvorak
Hejre Kati ..... Hubay
Violin Solo, Alexander Leventon
Rigaudon from "Dardanus"..Rameau
Japanese Dance Suite ..... Holst

Irene Dunne, John Held, Jr., On Paul Whiteman Hour

John Held Jr. Irene Dunne

Irene Dunne of "Show Boat" fame, and John Held, Jr., cartoonist extraordinary, will be gust artists Tuesday evening on the Old Gold-Paul Whiteman hour.

Miss Dunne, you'll recall, played the melodious role of Magnolia in the Florenze Zegfeld production. Now she has the lead opposite Everett Marshall—both Metropolitan Opera troupers—in RKO's picturization of "Babes in Toyland."

John Held, Jr., is known to millions as the creator of countless flapper cartoons and racoon-coated collegians appearing in newspapers and magazines everywhere. Artist, farmer, involuntary politician, and advertising genius, Held has again distinguished himself as originator of a series of Old Gold ads all dressed up in modern wood-cut style. His mike talk is sure to be well attended.

An especially brilliant radio program has been arranged, as this is the last Old Gold-Paul Whiteman hour for the present. Musical numbers include "Happy Days Are Here Again," "Under a Texas Moon," "Wouldn't It Be Wonderful," "Blue as the Night," and a fascinating medley of college songs. The entertainment begins at 7 o'clock over WGST and the Columbia Broadcasting System's nation-wide network.

Air Station Talk

Seven thousand high school students are participating in a new series of educational programs sponsored by KSTP and WLB.

WOR'S Main Street sketches, now off the air, are expected to be resumed in the fall.

The song, "Check and Double Check," a musical tribute to Amos 'n' Andy, will be sung by the Twins, WEAF and network, Friday evening, May 9.

The 125-piece band of the University of Pennsylvania Glee Club and soloists will be carried over WABC and CBS network Wednesday, May 7.

Deming Seymour, city editor of the Associated Press in New York, who inaugurated the newspaper column; "A New Yorker at Large," will speak in Bill Schudt's Going to Press on WABC and CBS chain Wednesday evening, May 7.

The Preakness race from the historic Pimlico track will be put on the air from WBAL Friday afternoon, May 9.

New Microphone Tested.

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—The "bowing microphone" is being tried out in NBC studios. Built along specifications made by O. B. Hanson, manager of plant operations, it has a box-like container for an amplification unit, with the top looking somewhat like a telephone transmitter without the mouthpiece. The top is set on a flexible "neck" permitting microphone to bow or bend backward.

Remodel WOS Studio.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., May 3.—(AP)—Studios of the Missouri state marketing bureau station WOS are being remodeled and new broadcasting equipment is being installed. Instead of one large studio, the station now will have two.

Televisor Puts Picture on Small Screen

Chicago engineers have been trying their hand at developing television. The outcome includes (left) a combination television reproducer and receiver having a screen for the image. At the right is a television reproducer only, with the young woman looking into the window where the picture is seen.

CHICAGO, May 3.—(AP)—Television has been hearing about this "experimental stage" era so long that it has decided to see if it cannot bring about a change or two.

So, with the help of some young engineers it has attired itself in coming-out clothes that give it a more dignified appearance as far as cabinets are concerned. At the same time, it has ironed out a few of the many kinks to which it is subject, although there remain a large number yet.

To show just what has been done, three types of receivers were used for demonstration purposes. Head and shoulder signals of entertainers coming from W9XOA, 142.9 meters, companion short wave transmitter of WIBO, were picked up in a hotel 40 miles away with considerable success.

Strikingly apparent was the fact that with two of the receivers pictures were thrown upon small screens mounted on pedestals placed in front of the television windows. The pictures could be enlarged up to the maximum of the screens, 8x12 inches, merely by moving back the stands.

One model contained only the television reproducer, consisting of scanning disk, neon lamp and motor. Another housed also a short wave receiver for television, while the third had a receiver for broadcast reception as well as the television set and reproducer. To see with the small model, called a "visionet," it was necessary to look into a window in the front.

The sets are the results of research work by Lloyd Garner, formerly of the faculty of the University of Illinois, who perfected the glow or neon lamp used for reception; by U. L. Sanabria, whose scanning disk and transmitter design was an important factor; by Richard Wagner, who perfected the optical system, and by William Parker, in charge of the broadcasting phase of the work.

Back of the laboratory efforts is Clem F. Wade, president of the Western Television Corporation. With him are his two brothers, Martin and Hugh, also lawyers and also from Des Moines, Iowa.

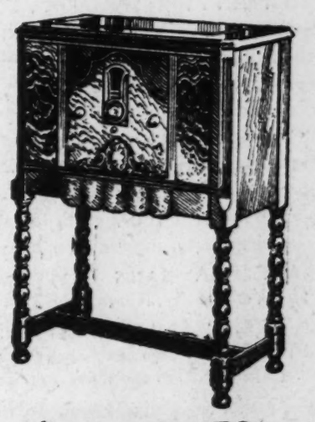

The Sanabria transmission system enables radiation of pictures with a minimum of flicker and wave band space. The photoelectric cells, which correspond to the microphone for sound, the design of Garner, are four times the size of other types.

The photocells are arranged in conjunction with amplifier mixing equipment making possible shifting of studio scenes without interrupting continuity. Flicker reduction, it was stated, is due to Sanabria's triple scanning system, which might be compared to the three-blade shutter for a moving picture projector.

The glow or neon lamp in the receiver is eight times more efficient than the average, it is asserted, making possible the use of a screen. "This higher efficiency is necessary," Sanabria said, "because the apparent brilliancy of a television picture at the present time is about a five-millionth of the apparent brilliancy of the source of light."

Besides WIBO, which has been conducting tests for some time, WMAQ here and WKRC, Cincinnati, are installing television transmitters. WENR and WCFL, Chicago, are experimenting with television broadcasts.

4TH BIENNIAL CONVENTION MEETS IN MACON MAY 6-9

Mrs. Brenner Extends Convention Greetings to Georgia Clubwomen

"Will be with you in Macon" is the heartening message that has been coming to us from state chairmen as they report having sent the latest word from Georgia on to the General Federation chairmen with whom they have enjoyed constant, helpful and friendly correspondence during the biennial period. From club presidents and district executive board meetings we have the same enthusiastic assurance of state-wide interest. And now that all have carefully read Mrs. Rambo's brilliant program I know that we will have a great gathering of visiting club members as well as the full number of accredited delegates.

But fine as the program is it is not just what our chairman had dreamed of giving you, for no program can ever be just what the chairman set out to present. Speakers desired are not always available, and so going further, she no doubt does better; but it is hard for her to believe that this is so. Our chairman candidly "hitched her wagon to a star," and early in the year asserted that the administration would go out "in a blaze of glory," as far as this program was concerned. But after a thoughtful reading it would seem that in her desire for your edification and enjoyment, she has aspired higher than a star, and sweeping aside the curtains of the night has reached out for the fuller glory of the sun. This is no easy thing to do; for life is full of practical every-day affairs and the federation deals with the draining of swamps in order to eliminate malaria, with the sordid conditions surrounding birth under unwholesome and unpromising environments, as well as with the fine arts. So it is no small task to visualize and arrange a progam to include our great balanced program of home and community improvement so as to make it pleasurable as well as profitable.

The General Federation promises that on state presidents' night in Denver, the two-minute talks made on the topic, "Your Service as Citizen," will give "a cross-section of club life and achievement in the United States, and present a really thrilling spectacle." Having been a state president on one such occasion, and having heard these two-minute presentations a number of times, one can confidently assert that district presidents' evening in Georgia will also present a "thrilling spectacle." Just one-fourth as large in numbers, but as fine and promising young women as were ever assembled as a working group in any state federation.

Every loyal Georgia woman will find special interest in visiting Wesleyan college in her beautiful new home, and the program of fine arts for Friday evening is one that cannot be surpassed. Certainly everything possible has been done by our efficient and hospitable club women of Macon to make this a memorable occasion.

Our chairman has prefaced the various sessions with appropriate and ennobling sentiments; we would do well to bear them in mind. "We have a federation whose ambition is service, not mastery; whose aim is opportunity, not privileges; whose ideal is freedom, not restraint." And again, "Be strong.

We are not here to play, to dream, to drift;
We have hard work to do and loads to lift,
Shun not the struggle, face it, 'tis God's Gift."

So come to Macon and let's "reason together" while we enjoy the many things prepared for our pleasure.

Sincerely your friend,
MRS. A. H. BRENNER, President.

Mrs. Ray Cole Issues Report On Conservation

Mrs. Ray Cole, of Newnan, president of fourth district of Georgia Federation, issues the following report on conservation, in which she says:

"Not nearly all the clubs in the fourth district have responded to the president's appeal for the number of trees, shrubs, etc., planted but you will find the following clubs have been very active (covering last two years):

Warm Springs Civic Improvement Club—Mrs. R. A. Sloan, president. Beautified a city park; bought $66 worth of shrubs.

Manchester Woman's Club—Mrs. J. Fain Johnson, president. Planted 200 crepe myrtle, 112 dogwood on highway. Warm Springs Club is joining Manchester in this planting between the two cities. Manchester also planted 9 crepe myrtles at cemetery, 2 oaks on school ground, 85 oaks on Main street and 50 at residences, making a total of 373 trees planted by Manchester Club.

Gay Woman's Club—Mrs. J. L. Estes, president. Planted 3 trees on school grounds and planted shrubs around school building.

Hogansville Woman's Club—J. E. Askew, president. Planted 100 trees on highway and beautified municipal park.

Union Improvement Club of Chipley, R. F. D.—Mrs. C. R. Browner, president. Planted 14 pecan trees on school grounds in honor of 14 boys from community going into service during World War. Also planted flowers on highway.

Chipley Woman's Club — Mrs. Frank Hopkins, president. Built park and planted $50 worth of shrubbery in it; also planted 2,000 trees and shrubs at residences of club members.

LaGrange Woman's Club—Mrs. Clifford Smith, president. Planted about 500 trees on highway and sponsored two flower shows.

West Point Woman's Club—Mrs. H. J. Hodnett, Jr., president. Planted a number of living Christmas trees; also 26 trees on city streets.

Newnan Woman's Club—Mrs. W. A. Turner, president. Sponsored planting of shrubbery around courthouse, post office and school grounds; also a number of living Christmas trees at residences.

City Federation of Columbus—Mrs. Nunnally Johnson, president. Beautified courthouse park with shrubs and flowers.

Mrs. Brenner and Mrs. Sippel Take Part On Fourth Biennial Program Tuesday Evening

Mrs. Brenner To Be Presiding Genius at Fourth Biennial

By Bessie S. Stafford, Editor.

When Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs opens the fourth biennial convention in Macon next Tuesday, the presiding genius will be Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, a veteran in federation work. She will bring to a close a successful two-year administration, and during this term Mrs. Brenner has given her energy and thought to every cause in which Georgia clubwomen are vitally concerned. She has held many offices in state work, having been president of her district, the 10th, and served as first vice president of the state organization before being elected to the presidential chair. She helped to organize the 10th district in co-operation with Mrs. L. H. Arrington, was president of Augusta federation and Augusta Woman's Club, and the Philharmonic Club of Augusta. Mrs. Brenner also held the office of corresponding secretary to the state body. She stood behind every constructive movement with a sort of inspiring zeal, and co-operated with every undertaking of Georgia clubwomen, seeking to aid, rather than direct, always supplying encouragement for others.

Outstanding Work.

When the work of the business session of the federation begins Wednesday morning in the convention hall of the Hotel Dempsey, it will be seen that the present administration has two years of splendid and outstanding work to its credit. Each officer, district president and state chairman has cause for congratulation in the achievements that have been accomplished. Mrs. Brenner has been a tireless worker and has made the departments and committees to conform to the general federation and by constant contact with the general federation has brought about a close relation between the state and general federation. Clubs, state chairmen and leaders have come to a better understanding, the result of years of work by past faithful leaders and the constant and alert attention of this administration. Despite the unfavorable financial condition, the Wey memorial has gone forward and has a substantial showing. New clubhouses have been built, libraries established, and the general federation endowment favorably received for consideration and funds already raised by several clubs.

34th Annual Meeting.

Tuesday evening's session marks the fourth biennial and the 34th annual meeting of Georgia federation, and takes place in the historic chapel of Wesleyan college conservatory. Seated on the stage with the officers of the Georgia federation will be: Mrs. L. I. Waxelbaum, president of the hostess club; Mrs. Walter D. Lamar, general chairman of arrangements; Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the general federation; Mrs. Clifford Adams, president of Alabama state federation; the state presidents of other women's organizations; the 12 district presidents of the Georgia federation; Dr. T. Franklin County Federation Has Seven Clubs on Roster

Franklin County Federation of Women's Clubs was entertained at Canon Club rooms last Friday, with the Canon Woman's Club as hostess. Mrs. J. C. Gaines, president, welcomed the guests and Mrs. S. D. Brown, Royston, president of the federation, presided. Reports of officers, presidents of the seven clubs represented, and chairman of standing committees show that all activities of the clubs have an increased interest and accomplishments. The clubs to respond to roll call were: Ashland, Canon, Carnesville, Lavonia, Fairview, Royston and Line. In commenting on the splendid work of the federation the two visitors present, Mrs. Cunyers, of Cartersville, and Professor Hubert Owens, teacher of landscape architecture at the University of Georgia, said they had no idea that so much could be accomplished in a county federation as the reports of the different clubs indicate. Of special interest was the reports of the rural clubs. The nominating committee presented the following names as officers: Mrs. J. A. Dyar, president, Royston; Mrs. Belle Carmichale, first vice president, Carnesville; Mrs. E. N. Bowers, second vice president, Royston; Mrs. Ward Canon, recording secretary, Lavonia; Mrs. B. F. Cheek, corresponding secretary, Lavonia; Mrs. L. E. Banister, treasurer, Canon; Mrs. J. C. Bowers, historian, Canon. Mrs. Swift Gilmer, parliamentarian, Lavonia; Mrs. S. D. Brown, reporter, Royston.

Mrs. S. D. Brown was given rising vote of thanks for her unselfish work as president the past year. In her message to the members she expressed her very deep appreciation of the loyalty of each member in carrying out the plans of the officers. Mrs. Phil Davis gave as current topic, the appointment of Mrs. Corra Harris as professor of "Evil" at Rollins college in Florida by Professor Holt, president of this college. This appointment has occasioned world-wide comment by leading professors. Professor Holt says the first lesson taught by Mrs. Harris proved so instructive that he is more than pleased that Mrs. Harris is one of his faculty in Rollins college. Rev. Mrs. Opdale, pastor of the Universalist church at Canon, gave an inspirational talk on the achievements of the clubs and plead for each one present to see the work near at hand and not to look for big things to accomplish and leave the little things undone. Professor Hubert Owens, of the University of Georgia, gave an interesting outline of the work of a landscape architect.

Canon Club members gave several musical numbers and Mrs. H. B. Cunyus, of Cartersville, told of a rock garden that has just been made at her home, and sang "In the Garden." Lavonia Woman's Club will be hostess to the federation in October. A picnic will be held at Lake Franklin in July.

Mrs. Cunningham Heads Lexington Woman's Club

Mrs. W. T. Cunningham was elected president of Lexington Woman's Club at the April meeting held at the home of Mrs. G. A. Barron. The corps of officers elected to serve with her include: First vice president, Mrs. E. J. Maxwell; second vice president, Mrs. E. H. Roberts; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. C. Paul; recording secretary, Mrs. W. H. Maxwell; treasurer, Mrs. E. C. Maxwell; publicity chairman, Mrs. G. A. Barron, and parliamentarian, Mrs. T. W. Crawford.

The meeting was presided over by the president, Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter, and opened by Mrs. F. C. Reids. Mrs. S. Avery was welcomed as a new member and names of Mesdames E. P. Shull, Allan Rice, G. W. Cunningham, Jr., were handed in as new members.

Mrs. T. W. Crawford, public welfare chairman, requested the assistance of the club in the physical examination of the school children. Mrs. R. C. Paul, May Day chairman, gave plans for celebration of May Health Day to be held at the school on the 2d of May. The club offered cash prizes amounting to $5 for athletic contests. Mrs. F. F. Brooks gave a brief report of the eighth district executive board meeting with our club as hostess. She offered the efforts of the club members, and their successful results as a work of appreciation and love for our president's faithful and efficient service. The treasurer reported $9 collected on dues and was instructed to send in one subscription for the Federation News to be used by the newly made program chairman.

Mrs. G. A. Barron reported a case to be looked into to social service committee. Mrs. W. T. Cunningham and Mrs. E. Smith are to represent the club at the state convention to be in Macon. Mesdames E. J. Maxwell, G. A. Barron, E. C. Maxwell and Allan Rice were requested to act as clean-up committee for Clean-Up Week. Mrs. Hamilton McWhorter expressed her deep appreciation for the loyal support that has been given her during her four years of service as president and asked for the nominating committee's report. Mrs. W. K. Howard, chairman, gave the following names as nominations: President, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham. The gavel was turned over to the new president who responded with expressions of appreciation for the honor as well as the responsibility she felt was hers. She then asked Mrs. E. J. Maxwell, American home chairman, to take charge of the program. "A Cottage by the Sea" was sung by Miss Mary Alexander. Four phases of the American home were well presented with fitting readings.

Mrs. E. J. Maxwell gave to each member flower seeds gathered from her own garden. The hostess, assisted by her niece, Miss Sydney McWhorter, and daughter, Miss Esther Barron, served refreshments.

Mrs. Bailey Issues District Information.

Mrs. E. W. Bailey, of Acworth, president of seventh district G. F. W. C., issues the following information to clubwomen: Division of highways and memorial tree planting, gardens, Mrs. Mary Turner, of Marietta; division rural, consolidated and vocation schools, Mrs. Irby Sheats, of Kingston; division of law observance, Mrs. Claude Irby, of Rome.

Milner Woman's Club Re-elects Mrs. Childers

At its monthly meeting the Milner Woman's Club voted to participate in Lamar county history that is being compiled by a committee from the Barnesville U. D. C. chapter, with Mrs. Augusta Lambdin, editor, and Mrs. E. A. Fish business manager. A committee on health reported a clinic would be held the first week in May, thus observing health week. The club planned to aid with the Memorial Day observances and to have local cemetery put in order for that day. A committee composed of Mesdames T. G. Bell, J. W. Graham and J. C. Martin was appointed to arrange for Clean-Up week. A report from the Lamar county federation meeting held in Barnesville was made by Mrs. G. R. Brown. Mrs. Bert Cauthen was appointed scrap book chairman. Mrs. S. J. Childers and Mrs. George Godard were elected delegates to the state federation to be held in Macon in May.

The following officers were re-elected to serve another term: Mrs. Jack Childers, president; Mrs. John Woodall, recording secretary; Mrs. G. C. Crowder, treasurer; Mrs. F. E. Joy, vice president; Mrs. Estelle Carmichael, corresponding secretary; Mrs. George Goddard, secretary and treasurer. Cemetery association and press reporter, Mrs. John Woodall. A program on "Child Welfare" was presented by Mrs. G. C. Swint. Mesdames T. G. Bell and W. N. Ethridge were hostesses at the social hour.

College Park Juniors Motor To Tallulah

Junior Club of College Park, with Miss Alberta Palmour, president, drove to Tallulah Falls school Saturday, May 3, to spend the day with the students and visit the handcrafts shops which are justly famous for the beauty of their products. They carried with them for presentation their annual "Help Chest" contribution which, in this case, consisted of pillowcases, towels, tray cloths and other linen items to replenish the Guest House supplies. The College Park junior girls specialize in handwork and a number of their Help Chest gifts showed evidence of their skill. The party was received by Miss Ann Carrington Davis, principal, and her faculty and students and Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, vice president, board of trustees Tallulah Falls school.

Lavonia Club Elects Delegates To Biennial

Mesdames B. F. Cheek, Swift Gilmer and Miss Loys Fisher were elected delegate and alternate to the fourth biennial convention to be held in Macon May 6 to 9, representing the Lavonia club.

The April meeting featuring "Music and Art" was held at the Carnegie library in the community rooms with Mrs. E. H. Holland and Mrs. Seab Thomas, hostesses. Many things of interest were carried out. Clean-up Week to be observed this month, also a program is being arranged to carry out Health Week the first week in May.

The election of officers for the following year was as follows: Mrs. J. H. Burton, president; Mrs. S. E. Vandiver, first vice president; Mrs. O. S. Cannon, second vice president; Mrs. A. P. Haley, recording secretary; Mrs. L. E. Fisher, treasurer; Mrs. Swift Gilmer, parliamentarian; Mrs. B. F. Cheek, press and publicity. The president, Mrs. J. H. Burton, and Mesdames S. E. Vandiver, Swift Gilmer and B. F. Cheek gave inspiring reports on the recent district executive board meeting attended by them in Lexington.

Mrs. Henry Reeves Heads LaGrange Woman's Club

Mrs. Henry Reeves, prominent LaGrange woman and civic leader, was elected president of the LaGrange Woman's club at the elections held Thursday at the business session. Mrs. Neil Glass was elected first vice president; Mr. Wilbur Freeman, second vice president; Mrs. J. Render Terrell, Jr., secretary; and Mrs. Tom Arnett, treasurer. Section leaders will be elected by the various sections. Mrs. Clifford Smith, retiring president, has been the guiding influence of the club since its organization and it is largely through her efforts that the magnificent club house and the LaGrange Memorial library have been built and financed. Mrs. Smith will devote the majority of her time to the library work.

The executive board met before the general meeting and along with the board of directors passed two important resolutions which were later ratified by the club members.

The first resolution was that in the next club year there be only four general meetings of the club, and that each section be organized with officers, and that these sections meet monthly or semi-monthly. Each section is to have a chairman, vice chairman, secretary and treasurer and the sections are to carry out a program of work for the year. This change will make the club work of more genuine interest to the members and will give the sections added interest and time to specialize in their work.

The second resolution ratified by the club was to invite the fourth district convention to meet in LaGrange in October. This convention is made up of clubs from the entire district and the one-day session in October is being planned as a gala day by the LaGrange Club.

Junior American home section of the LaGrange Woman's club entertained the club at the clubrooms Thursday, and April 10. W. Phillips Brown, of Rich's, in Atlanta, addressed the clubwomen on color harmony and draperies, illustrating his lecture with fabrics. The LaGrange Woman's Club will sponsor the chautauqua here in June, the first performance being given on June 17. Mrs. Clifford Smith, president of the LaGrange Woman's Club, has been asked to preside at the president's luncheon at the State Federation meeting in Macon in May.

Second District Clubs Report Many Activities

Pelham Woman's Club met in the clubrooms Wednesday with Mrs. Tom Barrow, the president, presiding. The park committee reported $10 from the sale of roses the past week. J. J. Harris' voluntary contribution of $12.50 to the club was received with sincere thanks. Mrs. Barrow appointed Mrs. Billy Ryan as chairman of the playground for the summer. Mrs. Ryan to have complete authority to operate the playground and pool as she sees fit. A motion was made and carried that the club year run from September to September, suspending three months in summer, and the president appointed a nominating committee to nominate officers for the coming year.

Camilla Woman's Club met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. B. E. Carlisle leader of a "home beautification" program, and discussed the value of the individual touch in the beautification of the home. Important details of interior arrangement were then discussed. Mrs. T. B. Twitty told of the arrangement of the mantel; Mrs. D. G. Borom discussed the hanging of pictures. Mrs. P. E. Bailey gave a talk on the bathroom. Mrs. J. R. Adams spoke of first aids to scarred or damaged furniture. Miss Ella Fo Foy discussed selection of colors. A piano solo by Miss Morris Whitworth was rendered in a pleasing manner. The club was delighted to have Mrs. John Monaghan, of Pelham, president of the second district, as their guest. Mrs. Monaghan discussed the program of work fostered by the state federation, laying particular stress on the Tallulah Falls school and the Students' Aid fund. During the business session Miss Foy asked the co-operation of the club in her plans to send girls to the 4-H Club camp at Athens. The club voted to assist Miss Foy. It was decided to combine the May and June meetings. The May meeting will therefore be the last meeting of the club year. Mrs. E. M. Davis and Mrs. O. J. Glausier were elected delegates to the state convention in Macon in May. Mrs. J. D. Ledbetter and Mrs. J. W. Butler, alternates. At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Floy Stevens, Mrs. G. B. Crochran, Mrs. Atwood Cochran, Mrs. E. G. Blackwell, Mrs. G. J. Joiner, Mrs. R. T. Cochran, Mrs. Virgil Holton and Mrs. B. L. Holton.

Bainbridge Woman's Club held the April meeting at the home of Mrs. John Reid, Mrs. H. B. Funderburke, vice president, presided in the absence of the president. At the suggestion of Mrs. Otis Bell, the club voted to send cards to members absent on account of illness. The club voted to present the prize of $5 offered through the club, by Miss Mildred Hicks for the best letter written by a local school child to Senator George suggesting the best way for the London parley to secure world peace, on graduation night of the 1930 class of the Bainbridge High school. Mrs. Otis Bell read a letter from the president of the second district, Mrs. Monaghan, of Pelham, regretting her inability to meet with the club at this time. The nominating committee presented the following names for election: Vice president, Mrs. Otis Bell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Catherine Wimberley; recording secretary, Mrs. O. M. Tarver; press reporter, Miss Eugenia Garrett; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. M. Simmons; messengers, Mrs. H. H. Donalson, Mrs. J. C. Hooton, Mrs. J. E. Reid, Mrs. J. C. Hale. The full ticket was elected. Mrs. J. C. Lane and Mrs. H. G. Hale were elected delegate and alternate for the convention in Macon. The social service committee was in charge of the program and presented Dr. M. A. Fort, who gave a very interesting talk. Guests of the club were Mrs. Pattie Custer, of Washington, D. C.; Mrs. W. M. Harrell, of Quitman; Mrs. Livingstone, of Albany. Social hour hostesses were Misses Mildred Hicks, Olive Morgan, Mesdames H. B. Funderburke, B. F. Lewis, J. E. Reid.

Winder Club Elects Biennial Delegates.

Mesdames H. A. Carithers and W. L. DeLaperriere will represent Winder Woman's Club at the fourth biennial convention to be held in Macon, May 6 to 9. Mrs. George Fortson was elected president of the club and the following corps of officers will serve with her: First vice president, Mrs. R. H. Kimball; second vice president, Mrs. Carter Daniel; treasurer, Mrs. George DeLaperriere; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Charles Perry; recording secretary, Mrs. W. L. DeLaperriere; assistant treasurer, Mrs. H. H. Colvard; auditor, Mrs. Wyley Bush. Mrs. T. A. Maynard was chairman of the nominating committee.

Winder Woman's Club held its April meeting Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. A. D. McCurry presiding. The public welfare department, Mrs. John Wood, co-chairman, announced that hospital day would be observed on May 10, and a shower given to the local hospital. Miss Gertrude Rogers, chairman of junior club, reported that a handkerchief shower will be given to the graduating class of Tallulah Falls school by the juniors, the package being ready to send. Garden division, Mrs. Joseph Broome, chairman, reported on flower show held April 16 and awarded prizes to the following winners: For finest pink tulips, Mrs. C. B. Almand; finest red tulips, Mrs. J. F. Broome; finest mixed tulips, Mrs. W. J. Burch; most artistic basket, Mrs. C. B. Almand; finest iris, Mrs. J. P. Tanner; second prizes awarded were: pink tulips, Mrs. A. T. Harrison; red tulips, Mrs. C. B. Almand; mixed tulips, Mrs. T. M. Wise; iris, Mrs. Herchel Smith; artistic basket, Mrs. Herschel Smith.

Zebulon Clubs Hold Tallulah Tag Day

In response to the suggestion of Mrs. Hartford L. Green, president sixth district clubs, and Mrs. F. L. Adams, Tallulah Falls chairman, that federated clubs of the district put on a community tag day for Tallulah Falls school, Zebulon Woman's Club and Zebulon Music Club, assisted by the members of the Junior Garden Club of Zebulon, recently observed Tallulah Falls school tag day. Although rain fell practically all day, it did not dampen the ardor of the women and young girls organized for their work, who worked on despite weather conditions, thereby realizing quite a substantial amount for the school.

Much excellent preliminary work was done to familiarize the citizens of Zebulon with the work and purpose of the school, which is owned and operated by the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Eight large attractive posters showing the mountain children at work and play were placed in prominent places in the business district several days before the sale. Splendid publicity giving the history and aim of the school, together with notices of the tag day, were given by the editor of the Pike County Journal and the tags were contributed by another interested friend of the cause. This helpful assistance and co-operation did much to stimulate interest in the campaign and the women of the sixth district are planning to make tag day an annual club event as a means of raising money for the maintenance of their school at Tallulah Falls.

Especial mention is made of the splendid work of the little girls of the Junior Garden Club whose enthusiastic efforts in helping to sell the tags was a real inspiration to the women in charge. Thoroughly imbued with the spirit and purpose of the day they worked faithfully in the pouring rain, thus setting an example of interest and fidelity to their elders. Complete reports from other clubs of the district observing this day have not all come in but there is an indication that many of the clubs observed this day and will also have a nice sum to report.

Bainbridge Club Re-elects Officers.

Bainbridge Woman's Club met Thursday at the home of Mrs. John Reid. Mrs. H. B. Funderdurke, the vice president, in the absence of the president, presided. The club voted to present the prize of $5 offered through the club by Miss Mildred Hicks for the best letter written by a local school child suggesting the best way for the London parley to secure world peace, on graduation night of the class of 1930 of the Bainbridge High school, the letter to be written to Senator Walter George.

Mrs. Otis Bell, acting for the corresponding secretary, Mrs. Catherin Wimberley, read a letter from Mrs. John Monaghan, the second district president, regretting her inability to attend Mrs. Reid's meeting of the club on account of the nearness of the Macon convention.

The nominating committee presented the following names for election: Vice president, Mrs. Otis Bell; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Catherine Wimberley; recording secretary, Mrs. O. M. Tarver; press reporter, Miss Eugenia Garrett; parliamentarian, Mrs. J. M. Simmons; messengers, Mesdames H. H. Donaldson, J. C. Hooton; J. E. Reid, J. C. Hale. The full ticket was elected.

Mrs. J. C. Lane and Mrs. H. G. Bell were elected delegate and alternate, respectively, for the Macon convention in May. The social service committee was in charge of the program and presented Dr. M. A. Fort, who gave an instructive talk. Mesdames Pattie Custer, of Washington, D. C.; W. M. Harrell, of Quitman, and A. B. Livingstone, of Albany, were visitors. The hostess, Mesdames J. E. Reid, B. F. Lewis, Harry Legette, H. B. Funderburke and Misses Olive Morgan and Mildred Hicks served refreshments.

Drama Workshop Will Present Plays at Egleston Memorial Hall

The Drama Workshop of Atlanta announces the presentation of its final playbill of the season Wednesday evening, May 21, at Egleston Memorial hall. The program will be presented under the auspices of St. Mary's guild of St. Philip's cathedral. This is the third playbill the workship has presented during the season of 1929-1930. As has been the custom, the program includes three one-act plays, all written by members of the workshop. The authors of the present group are Emily Vandiver Ramage, Mary Martin Ramage, Caroline Pierce Dillard.

The three plays were written in the play writing class conducted by Nan Bagby Stephens, a playwright of national reputation.

These three plays promise an interesting and varied evening for those interested in the development of a local theater. "Papa," the first play, is by Emily Vandiver Ramage. It is a charming comedy, with interesting character development and clever dialogue. "Momma," a strong-minded woman, dominates everyone around her, but in the end "Papa" triumphs in his own quiet way. Miss Ramage will be remembered as the author of "Moonshine," a mountain play, which received favorable criticism when it was presented on the March playbill.

The second play is "Wanted," by Mary Martin Ramage. It is a more serious play, depicting a phase of life in New York city. The characters, clearly portrayed and varied in type, are a hard-boiled New York working girl, a pretty little southern girl, an appealing little old Scotch lady. The setting is interesting also, as it is a decided departure from the conventional drawing room set. Miss Ramage is the author of "Steve," a play depicting mill life, which was included in the workshop's fall program of plays.

"Thinking Makes It So," by Carolyn Pierce Dillard, is an unusually clever comedy centering around the character of Mrs. Nellie Lee Pratt-Thomas, whose dominant emotion is ancestor worship. What happens when a debunking biographer gets his clutches on her idol makes an interesting situation. Mrs. Dillard is the author of "Achilles' Heel," which was presented on a program at Agnes Scott College and was published in the March issue of the Journal of Expression. All of these plays are under the direction of Mary Ben Wright, who is well known as a competent director.

The Drama Workshop is the only dramatic group in Atlanta which writes, directs and produces its own plays. The group hopes to fulfill a definite need in Atlanta and contribute to the development of a local theater.

Bridge Corner Merry Addition To Modern Home

A merry little nook, frequently dubbed "the bridge corner" has recently come into being in many a smart American home. Gayly audacious in decoration, delightfully intimate in furnishing, the room invites acquaintance in that pleasant half-hour 'twixt teatime and dinner when the cares of the day are pushed aside by friendly chatter and tired business men relax.

It's a room of infinite possibilities, an intimate room, a personal room, the very heart and soul of the home's hospitality. For the occasional home of dignity and charm, where dining remains a leisurely art, what a gracious, tranquil room it may be—a deep blue floor, a Chinese rug, a hearthfire inviting placid reverie.

But as a rule the bridge corner is keyed to a different tempo. Smart, amusing, daring—its skyscraper furniture, commercial texture—leather, metal, cork—its linoleum floor, every decorative detail bespeaks an age of action.

One popular young hostess, famous for her amusing parties, has created for her bridge corner a novel and significant floor. It is dotted with fitting colorful insets. There are card spots and a flame-tipped cigarette placed about in casual disorder in a gray background. Each one of them was cut from linoleum, and inset, at the owner's direction. The floor sets a vivid keynote for the decoration of the room, and her friends find it highly diverting.

Practical reasons dictate the adoption of linoleum as a floor for game room, smoking room, or card room. The constant attack of dripping ashes are an easily-managed part of the day's operations when floors are of smooth surfaced, easy-to-clean linoleum. There are plain colors—vivid orange, deep blue, coppery red—or interesting tile designs equally well suited to the less pretentious bridge corner or game room as a specially designed floor.

Linoleum, cork, metal, glass—there are new textures to deal with in modern decoration, new mediums for expression of the spirit of the day. And there is no better way of stepping up yesterday's house to tomorrow's demands than to use these new materials in the decoration of a "playroom" for the grown-ups of the family.

W. S. Plans Recital Series.

Washington seminary plans a series of recitals in observance of National Music Week. Tuesday, May 6, at the chapel exercises, a trio, composed of violin, Miss Margaret Cooper; piano, Mrs. Rebecca Cooper, and 'cello, Tom Hutcheson, will play a program of delightful ensemble music. Wednesday, May 7, a program of piano and violin numbers played by pupils from the classes of Mrs. Elizabeth Barlow, Miss Margaret Cooper and Miss Julia Oliver Eckford, will be given in the intermediate department of the school. Those playing will include Houston Miller, Margaret Clark, Eleanor Swanson, Marianna Adair, Anne Johnson, Helen Johnson, Nellie Camp and Betty Barlow. Friday morning, May 9, an interesting recital of two piano numbers will be given in the high school auditorium of the school by pupils of Miss Julia Eckford. This program includes the Paderewski Minuet, Turkish Rondo by Mozart, "La Sevillane," by Chaminade, and "Polonaise" from the Arensky suite for two pianos. Those taking part will be Misses Emily Mathews, Virginia Cleveland, Helen Cornwall, Jane Brooks and Mary Cushman.

DeKalb County Council Holds Final Meeting of School Year

DeKalb County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations held the final meeting of the school year at Druid Hills school Friday, the Druid Hills P.-T. A. acting as hostess. Miss Fidelle Miller, newly elected president of the council, presided. Mr. Haddock, principal of Druid Hills school, was introduced, and welcomed the associations. Dr. Rufus Evans, chairman of DeKalb county health board, called attention to health education week, beginning May 5. He said that he and his assistants would be at any school in the county during that week to examine pre-school children, and urged all principals and P.-T. A. presidents to call on him. Sixteen schools have already set dates.

Miss Strong, chairman of committee which inspected schools for "clean-up week," made a most interesting report. Of the 41 school buildings in DeKalb county, 40 entered the contest. She recited many instances of improvement; windows washed; walls tinted; woodwork scrubbed; floors scraped and oiled; yards swept; flowers planted; curtains hung; steps repaired; new equipment purchased; flag poles set; lunch rooms refreshed, etc. She stated, also, that the committee found a number of schools in such attractive condition that it was hard to imagine any improvement; yet, these same schools added touches that brought their well-nigh perfect scores even higher. Her committee decided that it would be impossible to award the two $5 prizes, since all schools had worked so untiringly; so the names of all frame school buildings were put in one hat; the names of all brick school buildings in another hat, and names were drawn by Superintendent Rainey and Superintendent Ferguson. The Panthersville Primary school and Clarkston High school were the lucky winners. The consensus of opinion was that this project, participated in by more than 6,000 school children, was a forceful lesson in broad citizenship. The prizes of $2 for killing the greatest number of flies, were awarded to Mountain View school and Southwest DeKalb. Odell Stanfield, of the Southwest DeKalb school, received $1 offered to the individual who killed the largest number of flies.

Report Adopted.

A report from the committee on "standards of excellence" was adopted. This new standard in no way interferes with the standards sent out by state and national, but sets a goal that the smaller, younger associations can attain.

Reports showed that seven associations have been organized since the beginning of the present school year. They are: Klondike, Rock Chapel, Tilly, Salem, Midway, Bethel and Rockland. Only five schools in the county are without Parent-Teacher Associations. Two of these five were represented by teachers and mothers.

Mrs. C. E. Pattillo, first vice president, presented the program for the afternoon. Superintendent Rainey, of the county, read an interesting paper on "Teaching Citizenship in the Grammar Grades." This was followed by an equally helpful paper on "Citizenship in High Schools," by Superintendent Ferguson, of Decatur. Mrs. Z. W. Jones, principal of Brookhaven school, gave a report on the recent G. E. A. meeting in Macon. Two selections of music were rendered by the double quartet of Decatur Junior High school. Teachers and parents were present.

Rev. N. R. H. Moor will be speaker at the last meeting of Spring Street P.-T. A. in the school auditorium Tuesday at 3 o'clock. Officers for the fall scholastic year will be announced during the business session following Dr. Moor's talk. Mrs. Ralph Clement, general chairman of the school P.-T. A. festival to be held Friday, May 9, from 3 to 5 o'clock, at McClatchey park, invites parents of children in other schools and in other neighborhoods to have their children attend the festival and enjoy it with the Spring Street school pupils. Mrs. Harry Malone will be in charge of the ice cream booth; Mrs. J. W. Hawk will have the lemonade stand; Mrs. Graham Williams, the grab bag; Mrs. Dan MacIntyre will sell popcycles; Mrs. A. C. Troutman will have the cake booth; Mrs. Lee Davidson and Mrs. I. C. Humphries will be in charge of the fortune telling booth; the fish pond will be managed by Mrs. F. O. Johnson; Mrs. Hughes Roberts will sell Dixie cups; Mrs. F. W. Alcorn will have the candy booth; the country store will be run by Mrs. Fred Scanling and the general chairman; Mrs. Ralph Clement will also be in charge of a candy booth.

The teachers whose grades will be represented by their foregoing grade chairmen are Miss Jo Berman, principal of the Spring Street school; Miss Margaret Webster, kindergarten and the grade teachers, Miss Elsie Tripp, Miss Ada Camp, Miss Bessie Dunwoody, Miss Elise Wall, Mrs. S. R. Rayfield, Mrs. Eunice Kilgore, Mrs. M. E. Souder, Miss Mary Penick and Miss Mary Adamson and Miss Adelaide Setze.

Whitefoord Meet Featured by Committee Reports

Whitefoord P.-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon at the schoolhouse with the president, Mrs. Fred Boring, presiding. Mrs. P. E. Shulhafer, speaker of the afternoon, urged the mothers to register and vote. Miss Page Tucker, of League of Women Voters, and Mrs. H. Hyman gave a practical demonstration of registering and voting. Mrs. Fred Lawshe, ways and means chairman, announced a picture show and stunt night for May 9 and the "Womanless Wedding" for May 23. Mrs. Fred Boring gave the highlights of the P.-T. A. convention held in Macon recently.

Miss Maude A. Rhodes, principal, announced that May 8 would be registration day for children entering kindergarten in September and February.

Mrs. William Corley, pre-school chairman, gave plans for reorganizing the pre-school circle into groups.

Low 4 won the attendance prize. Mrs. G. L. Tarrant received the grade mothers prize. The lucky chair prize went to Mrs. R. L. Sills.

George W. Adair Daddies' Meeting Is Well Attended

An interesting meeting was held Wednesday evening at the George W. Adair school. It was a daddies' meeting and a large number were present. The kitchen orchestra gave several selections they had given in Macon. The president, Mrs. J. D. Wootan, gave some interesting comments about the state meeting. Adair received a standard of excellence, also a seal for mother's magazine. Several children from the first, second and third grades gave a dance which they will present at the May dance at the Wren's Nest. The count of the parents gave the prizes to Miss Josephine Jones' second grade, and Miss Anna Senkbeil, fifth grade.

Grove Park Features Program On Better Homes

Grove Park P.-T. A. met Wednesday in the assembly room with the president, Mrs. S. H. Ransbotham, presiding. "A Better Homes Program" was carried out, Mrs. Jason Tuggle, chairman. An additional feature was the program rendered by the three second grades. Mrs. S. H. Ransbotham made an interesting report on the P.-T. A. convention held recently in Macon. A nominating committee was named to elect officers for the ensuing year, including Mrs. R. B. Brown, Mrs. Callie Willis Litchtenwalter, Mrs. George Hubbard, Mrs. G. W. Bartow and Mrs. Jason Tuggle. A vote of thanks was given Miss Frances Scott for her splendid work on the beautiful scrap book and to Mrs. Jason Tuggle for the attractive decorations. The auditorium was suggestive of a lovely home, with singing canaries, fancy pigeons, goldfish and many garden flowers.

Two-A won the dollar for having the highest percentage of mothers present. At 3 o'clock all visited the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. B. Bernard, on Edwin place. This home is finished with rare and elegant antiques that have been collected from many countries. Mr. Bernard entertained more than 100 guests with interesting stories of his travels and collections. During the afternoon an iced course was served by Mrs. Bernard.

John B. Gordon Meeting Attended By Large Number

A large number of mothers were present at the John B. Gordon P.-T. A. Tuesday afternoon, at which time the April meeting was held. Mrs. Z. V. Peterson, president, presided. Miss Barker, principal of the school, read the financial report. Readings were given by Dorothy Williams, Hilda Keen and others. Miss Barker announced the health program which is to be held in the four junior high schools and asked the P.-T. A. to cooperate in this work. She also expressed a wish that they attend the game at Lee Street school next week, and that they attend the colonial art meeting. The kindergarten registration was also announced by Miss Barker. Mrs. Peterson talked of the May Day program and asked that Mrs. Taylor present a May Day greeting at the governor's mansion on this occasion. The grade chairmen, Mrs. S. Knight, Mrs. Rufus Williams, Miss Ray, Mrs. R. C. Powell, Mrs. J. C. Vincent, were called in a special meeting Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Peterson told of the very instructive convention which she attended in Macon and of the devoted and successful business attractions of the convention.

Mrs. Peterson introduced Mrs. George Slappey, speaker of the afternoon. Mrs. Slappey is the president of the home service department of the P.-T. A. Her subjects were in the interest of the summer recreation of the organization of grade groups for reading clubs. Mrs. Slappey's baby, George, Jr., is the mascot of this district P.-T. A. The count of mothers gave the prize to Miss Paulin's grade and Mrs. Pailsey won the draw prize.

Mrs. S. B. Naff Opens Gardens.

Mrs. S. B. Naff will open her beautiful gardens to the public Wednesday, May 7, from 3 to 6 o'clock. The occasion is to be celebrated by a silver tea for the benefit of the R. L. Hope P.-T. A., of which Mrs. L. C. McKinney is president. Mrs. Hugh Russey is in charge of arrangements. The lure of these gardens will attract all lovers of flowers.

State President Emphasizes Health and Citizenship

"It is significant that this, our first message to the Parent-Teacher Association of Georgia, other than a formal greeting, should be mailed on child health day. The health of the children should be the matter of first concern to all parent-teacher organizations. The fact that the national chairman of health, Mrs. Bruce Carr Jones—is a Georgian, should add to our interest and activity.

"But health needs more than a day. With the close co-operation of the state board of health, the entire week is being celebrated throughout the state. The summer round-up, that prepares children through physical and dental examination for their next year's work, is under way. Associations should participate 100 per cent. Health determines happiness and success. Parents are anxious to contribute to these ends if a medium is offered, and they know how to use that medium for their children's welfare. Local extension in membership has its greatest opportunity at this same time. Parents are willing to be members when they see a definite contribution to their family welfare. Associations should be governed accordingly. We have 45,527 members today in Georgia. Our membership should be numbered only by the number of parents in the state. This goal of health to which we climb is not one for May Day or health week. It is a continuing program for all time. It is to represent us when we have passed on. It is a challenge to our organization. We must answer worthily that challenge.

"Our second matter for consideration at this time is one of active participation in the responsibilities of citizenship. The Georgia congress of Parent-Teacher Associations is strictly non-political and non-partisan organization, so far as persons or parties are concerned. But if the men who aspire to high political office in the state realized that every member of the Georgia congress of Parent-Teacher Associations is a potential voter, and may be influenced in his or her choice of a candidate by the aspirant's attitude to the welfare of Georgia's children, it might, and in all probability will, contribute to the success of salutary legislation."

The question of woman suffrage has passed. It is no longer an issue but an accomplished fact. The only question that remains now is whether or not the women of Georgia will exercise the suffrage for the accomplishment of the things that are dear to their hearts and that will redound to the building of a greater and a better Georgia.

"Every man and woman of voting age in the state should be in a position to express his or her preference at the polls when voting time comes. And to this end we urge that every member of the Georgia congress of Parent-Teacher Associations consider the advisability of registering some time within the next two days before the time limit expires. I am asking that each association make this a feature of the association report this year. We want to know just what proportion of our members are fulfilling their duty in this respect.

"One of the vital needs of every association is trained leaders. False steps not only injure or kill associations concerned, but seriously hamper the progress or the general movement. Failure to back up the projects of those legally qualified to carry on school affairs meddling with discipline, the curriculum or selection of teachers and similar well-intentioned but fatal errors, are the result of lack of proper P.-T. A. ideals and information. Meeting regularly will not supply the knowledge that is necessary to carry on a properly functioning association.

"Because this is true a parent-teacher course is offered at the summer school at Athens and credit is given for the course. Teachers attending summer school at Athens and holding membership in Parent-Teacher associations, should be encouraged to take this course, and in some manner present it next year to the associations they serve. Associations thus served should be mindful to compensate when opportunity offers for the courtesy.

"In addition to this Dr. Stewart, in conjunction with the P.-T. A. board, has arranged for an institute to be held in Athens on July 2, 3 and 4 for the benefit of mothers who want to know how to measure up to their responsibilities to their children and yet cannot be absent from home for a long period. This institute will offer intensive training along the seven lines of P.-T. A. activity. A teacher of national reputation will be in charge.

"Associations are urged to raise a fund between now and the above mentioned date and send at least one member to Athens to take advantage of the instruction offered. The railroad fare is the largest item and any association will be more than repaid for such participation. The president respectfully requests that all associations willing to do this will communicate with her at once, and that all individual members who will go on their own responsibility will likewise communicate the fact to her.

"The Georgia library commission, in conjunction with the P.-T. A., is making an effort to supply books to the children for vacation reading. It is their desire to place 100 or more books in each P.-T. A. community for a three months' loan in charge of the local Parent-Teacher Association. To each child who reads 10 books and writes a short sketch of the books read, submitting the sketches to the secretary of the Georgia library commission, a certificate will be awarded. Gold star certificates will be awarded to those reading 25. This is an opportunity that should not be overlooked. The summer may mean much for good in the lives of the children if a fair portion of the leisure time is spent in the reading of carefully selected books.

"Strange as it may seem the summer is also the proper time for the organization of new associations. It is the best time in the world for the raising of funds to carry on the work. It gives opportunity for 'social, money-raising affairs' such as ice cream festivals, entertainments and the like, unhampered by weather conditions or school demands. It permits participation by school children in a way unknown during the school session. And it provides an organization waiting at the steps ready to enter and with funds in hand with which to work when the school opens in the fall.

"At the P.-T. A. board meeting in Macon I learned that every association is to receive free for one year a subscription to Child Welfare magazine. Organization now will avoid loss of any issue, and make the work easier and more effective because of the information this magazine provides.

"It is the policy now to have all officers, state, district, county and local, elected in the spring. To bring this about many are holding over until next spring instead of vacating the office this fall. Will you send me by postcard as soon as you read this and as an evidence that you have read it a list of your officers and chairmen, 10 in all, together with the name of your associations? I want to compile a complete, up-to-date roster.

"In closing may I ask your continued loyalty to the P.-T. A. food book that we may go forward in our work unhampered in any way?

"Very sincerely yours,
"MRS. R. H. HANKINSON,
"President Georgia Congress, P.-T. A."

P.-T. A. Council Discusses Revision of Constitution and By-Laws At Meeting

The meeting of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council Thursday morning, held in Rich's school room, was devoted to a discussion of a revision of the constitution and to a talk on "The Necessity of Regular Physical Examinations," by Dr. Zach S. Cowan.

Mrs. C. J. Foster, chairman of the revision of constitution and by-laws committee that was appointed by the council president, Mrs. H. G. Parks, at the April meeting, announced that her committee had requested that they be relieved of their appointment by the executive board of council but the request had been denied whereupon Mrs. Foster at Thursday's meeting stated that it was the opinion of the executive board that the meeting be turned into an open forum, giving all council members the privilege of assisting in the revision. After the present constitution had been read, with changes and non-changes having been voted upon, owing to the lateness of the session, many members had left, leaving those present without a quorum. The revision was carried over to a future meeting.

As a forerunner of health week, Dr. Cowan's talk was timely. He urged the importance of annual physical examinations for children as well as adults. Dr. Cowan stated that in the high tension life of today everything is organized and that women go to meetings more than they did in by-gone days; they live in a greater nervous strain, giving diseases a chance to creep upon them. Adults over 40 should have physical examinations twice a year according to Dr. Cowan and adults under 40 should be examined once a year.

Peeples Street Daddies' Meeting Features Program

A P.-T. A. prayer sung softly by members, opened the meeting held at Peeples Street school Tuesday evening, when R. L. Ramsey, vice president, presided. Full co-operation during State Health Week, May 4-9, was requested and for a continuance through the year, as scholarship efficiency depends wholly on good health. The annual May festival was announced for the week, when Lester Wilson will be crowned queen, and numbers of interesting features to follow the exercises. Mrs. J. M. Griffith drew the cook book and I. Hester the handmade pillow. A program of entertainment was given in honor of the daddies of the school.

Dan Scarborough gave two humorous readings, Mrs. William Modena, accompanied by Miss Helen Schaid, sang two numbers, and Mrs. P. H. Jeter, state vice president, talked on "Our Business as a Parent," and gave some inspiring and helpful suggestions regarding healthy children, home atmosphere, social and educational understanding, a standard home, friendly sympathy for teachers, co-operation with the school system and the importance of voting. The awards for the highest attendance were given to Miss Powell's and Miss Ramey's classes.

Chattahoochee Daddies' Meeting Is of Interest

Chattahoochee P.-T. A. held a daddies' meeting recently in the school auditorium with Mrs. R. N. Reynolds, president, presiding.

Mrs. Jere A. Wells, wife of Fulton county's superintendent of schools, spoke on "Appreciation of Beauty; How It May Be Taught in Home and School." Mrs. Wells stressed the beauty of nature, and of art, and of poetry, but particularly beauty of character. A reading entitled "I Used to Know Your Ma," was given by the principal, Robert H. Lamkin. A group of sixth grade pupils recited in concert a poem, the subject of which is "My Desire." The school song, "Chattahoochee," was sung by the seventh grade girls, accompanied by Mary Frances Connell and the mandolin club of the school.

One of the most interesting features of the meeting was the exhibit of the handwork done by the pupils during the year. This exhibit included drawing, painting, sewing, wood carving, vase making and many other objects.

Roy Smith, a pupil in Miss Ethel Smith's room, was awarded a prize for having made the second best humane poster in Fulton county. During the evening Jere A. Wells, superintendent of schools, and Miss Kathleen Mitchell, primary supervisor, made interesting talks.

Center Hill Pre-School Meets.

Center Hill P.-T. A. will present a three-act comedy, "Apple Blossom Time," at the school house Friday evening, May 9, at 7:30 o'clock. A full cast of local talent is being used in the play, which is being directed by Mrs. Glenn Harrison and Mrs. Herman Miller. The cast includes: Leila Whitmire, Alcine Brown, Thelma and Dorothy Parker, Clara Ogletree, Louise Moore, Isabel Baird, Ross Parker, Bill Sumlin, Jack Camp, Willie McGriff and Edwin Bartlett.

Miss Van Hook To Be Honored At Reception

The Mothers' Club and the pre-school study group of the Misses Van Hook studios will close the season with a lecture and social meeting Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Paul Ackerly, 30 Inman circle. The talk upon the beginning of art with pre-kindergarten children will complete a series on the teaching of fine arts given each week by Miss Van Hook.

The pre-school study group is composed of mothers of small children and teachers who expect to use the information in their work. The Mothers' Club is made up of mothers of children attending the Misses Van Hook studios.

Following the lecture and business meeting of the organizations a tea and reception in honor of Miss Lane Van Hook will be given by Mrs. Ackerly. Forty members of the groups who will be present are: Mesdames J. S. Budd, George Eckford, Stuart Broeman, Ewing Dean, L. P. Dickie, H. K. Garges, Theodore Butler, Jake Johnson, Carleton Chambers, Charles Hammond, Everett R. Burt, C. F. Nelson, Sam Smith, James Starnes, Errett Van Hook, Henry McGehee, J. M. Almand, Jack Sutter, R. M. Bush, Robert Wall, Elwood Matthews, E. F. Gunter, L. S. Turner, J. W. Davis, Paul Ackerly and Miss Lane Van Hook.

Fifth District Celebrates May Day This Afternoon

May Day, dedicated to childhood and tying up the old with the new, will be observed in Atlanta today when at 3 o'clock this afternoon the children of the fifth district will call at the executive mansion and present May baskets to Georgia's first lady, Mrs. L. G. Hardman. Congress has designated May Day as Child Health Day as peculiarly fitting to represent with the return of spring the budding and growth of childhood and the presentation this afternoon will mark the opening of Health Education Week for Atlanta.

Mrs. George Slappey, chairman of child health for the Fifth District Georgia Congress Parents and Teachers, has sponsored the presentation of the May baskets, a revival of the beautiful old English custom, as a dramatization of the health program and has been assisted by chairmen in the district who represent allied features in child welfare work. Those who have assisted Mrs. Slappey are Mrs. John W. Lloyd, third vice president, and Mrs. J. C. Malone, manager of bureau of pre-school groups, Georgia Congress, Parents and Teachers; Mrs. Charles Center, president of fifth district, P.-T. A.; Mrs. A. D. McClennan, chairman of health, DeKalb county council; Mrs. C. K. Trowbridge, president; Mrs. Hollis Hope, chairman of health, and Mrs. R. H. Lummux, chairman of children's reading, Fulton county council; Mrs. Jerome Levy, recreation, and Mrs. W. J. Warren, chairman of pre-school groups, Atlanta council; Mrs. A. A. Williams, president of McLendon P.-T. A.

Parent-Teacher Meetings

All parents and teachers of Bass Junior High school and contributing schools are requested to be present at the auditorium Tuesday evening, May 6, at 7:30 o'clock. Dr. A. M. Dimmock, Dr. W. B. Childs and Dr. William Howard Hailey will speak on the prevention of disease and the penalties of indifference. Dr. Willis A. Sutton will speak on "The Relation of Good Health to Education."

Executive board of Georgia Avenue P.-T. A. meets Tuesday morning, May 7, at 10:30 o'clock.

Luckie Street school P.-T. A. meets Tuesday, May 6, at 2:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium. The election of officers and other important business will be transacted.

I. N. Ragsdale P.-T. A. meets Tuesday, May 6, at 3 o'clock, in the auditorium.

Milton Avenue P.-T. A. meets Tuesday, May 6. This is the date for election of officers and all members are urged to be present.

Pre-School Association of Glenwood school, Decatur, meets Wednesday afternoon in the school auditorium at 2:30 o'clock. Mrs. H. G. Parks will give an inspirational talk, after which Mrs. Floyd Fields will talk on the "Spiritual Development of the Child." Camp Fire Girls will, as usual, take care of the children who accompany their parents.

Executive board of the E. Rivers P.-T. A. meets Tuesday morning, May 6, at 10 o'clock in the school auditorium.

Pryor Street P.-T. A. meets Tuesday, May 6, at 2:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. Installation of the new officers and yearly reports from the committees will feature the meeting.

At 1 o'clock May 9 the P.-T. A. of Davis Street school meets. The school children will present a health pageant which is being directed by the principal, Miss Annie Chapman. A lawn party will follow the regular program. All patrons and friends are urged to be present.

Center Hill To Sponsor Play.

Pre-School circle of Center Hill met at the schoolhouse Friday. Mrs. W. W. McGriff, chairman of the circle, opened the meeting. After the reading of reports, Mrs. J. G. Harrison read a chapter on "How to Care for Children at Church." Refreshments were served in the cafeteria by Mrs. W. W. Wallace and Mrs. J. H. Jen-

Central Park Reports Meeting.

Central Park P.-T. A. met in the assembly hall Thursday with Mrs. J. C. Stanley presiding. The entire meeting was given over to business, during which reports were made by the chairmen and by the Macon delegates. Two committees were appointed, including a nominating committee and the committee for the purchase of a victrola for the primary department. Children to represent the school at the May Day fete were selected as follows: Elsie Blackstone, from the seventh grade, and Caro Studdard, from the first grade.

O'Keefe To Hold Final Paper Sale.

The final paper sale for O'Keefe Junior High school will be held Monday, May 5. Mrs. Maloney, chairman, urges the O'Keefe children to give her four tons of paper on this day so that the final bonus may be collected. Either newspapers or magagines will help. A prize will be given to the home room sending in the greatest amount of paper. An appeal is being sent out for cars to be used on this day. Mrs. Mahoney will be on the school grounds Monday, or phone Hemlock 1936.

A "Beauty Shampoo in 10 minutes

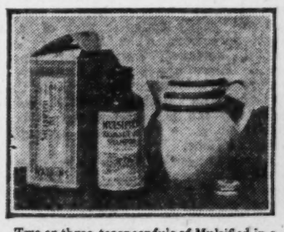

Leaves Your Hair Lovely and Alluring

Quickly, Easily, at a few cents cost—you can have a Real "Beauty Shampoo" that will give Your Hair a Loveliness, quite unobtainable by Ordinary Washing.

YOU CAN SAVE TIME, expense and inconvenience, by adopting this simple method of "beauty shampooing" which gives truly professional results at home.

The beauty of your hair, its sparkle . . . its gloss and lustre . . . depends, almost entirely, upon the way you shampoo it.

A thin, oily film, or coating, is constantly forming on the hair. If allowed to remain, it catches the dust and dirt—hides the life and lustre—and the hair then becomes dull and unattractive.

Two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a glass or pitcher with a little warm water added, makes an abundance of . . . soft, rich, creamy lather . . . which cleanses thoroughly and rinses out easily, removing with it every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Only thorough shampooing will . . . remove this film . . . and let the sparkle, and rich, natural . . . color tones . . . of the hair show.

Ordinary washing fails to satisfactorily remove this film, because—it does not clean the hair properly.

Besides—the hair cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali, in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why women, by the thousands, who value beautiful hair, are using Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. It cleanses so thoroughly; is so mild and so pure, that it cannot possibly injure, no matter how often you use it.

You will notice the difference in the appearance of your hair the very first time you use Mulsified, for it will feel so delightfully clean, and be so soft, silky, and fresh-looking.

Try a Mulsified "Beauty Shampoo" and just see how quickly it is done. See how easy your hair is to manage, and how lovely and alluring it will look. See it sparkle—with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store, or toilet goods counter, . . . anywhere in the world.

IMPORTANT!

It is essential that candidates have a thorough understanding regarding new contract subscriptions; also, what is considered an "old" or "new" subscriber, and the following rules explain this fully:

When a new contract order is secured for "six" or "twelve" months, it must be clearly and definitely explained to the subscriber that contracts must be adhered to, that they will be verified by The Constution, and that if the subscriber does not meet the acid test, it will not be accepted.

No contract subscriptions will be accepted from minors, transients or those persons not holding responsible positions.

No contract subscription will be accepted unless signed by the subscriber, business address stated, occupation stated, phone number stated and where the paper is to be delivered.

No contract subscription will be accepted for a period less than six months or more than twelve months. Subscribers are not permitted to sign contracts for more than twelve months.

Once turned in by a candidate, for twelve months, the subscriber will not be permitted to give another contestant a new contract subscription; however, if signed for six months, the subscriber will be allowed to increase it to one year.

A new subscriber is any person not receiving The Atlanta Constitution by mail or authorized carrier on March 9, 1930.

Changing the name from one member of the household to another will not be credited as a new subscriber. A new subscriber must constitute a gain in circulation. All new subscriptions will be carefully verified. Making a subscription "new" when it is "old" will result in a disappointment. This rule is imperative and will be strictly adhered to.

The Atlanta Constitution aims to deliver its papers promptly, and it can do so only with the co-operation of candidates.

Careful observance of the foregoing rules and suggestions will be appreciated.

Regular Credit Schedule

New Leading Lady at Erlanger This Week in 'Smilin' Through'

Miss Margaret Brayton, new leading lady for the Erlanger Theater Players, will make her Atlanta debut tomorrow night in the role made famous by Jane Cowl in "Smilin' Through."

Perhaps it should better be said that it was the role that made Jane Cowl famous. Certainly it was this play that lifted her, a few years ago, to the heights of international stardom.

Miss Brayton, who comes to the Erlanger Theater Players from Hollywood, Cal., bears the reputation of the most gifted leading lady in stage production work today. She is very similar to Miss Cowl in appearance and those who have seen her play the "Smilin' Through" role declare that her performance compares favorably with that of the world-famous star.

Director Harry McKee, of the Players, declares that it was a stroke of the rarest good fortune that made Miss Brayton available just as the eight-week contract with Helen Louise Lewis ended. For 130 of the 169 weeks that Mr. McKee and his Players stayed in Montreal Miss Brayton was his leading lady and he declares, without qualification, that she is the best leading lady in every respect he ever worked with.

"I know," he said Saturday, "Atlanta is going to fall in love with Margaret Brayton. She has ability, appearance and personality and it is a safe prediction that, soon after her initial meeting with local audiences, she will be the most popular production player ever to stay in this city."

"Smilin' Through," for the sake of those who do not remember it when Miss Cowl played it a few years ago, is one of the most wistfully sweet plays ever written. It moves rapidly through the development of its story, with plenty of brilliant humor and a lovable quality to its characterizations and plot that endear it to every audience.

Presented in a prologue and three acts, it deals with a girl who, 50 years ago, was shot to death by a disappointed suitor on the night of her marriage to the man she loved. She vows, as she dies, that she will come back, "smilin' through" the mists that separate this life from the next. How she does so, 50 years later, to untangle the skeins of unhappiness that threaten two young lovers of her line, forms the moving theme and gripping climax of the play.

With such a play and with a new player of the caliber of Miss Brayton to see for the first time, Atlanta should, and undoubtedly will, set a new record for the week at the Erlanger box office. Seats for all performances of the week are on sale at the theater box office or at Phillips & Crew Piano Company, on Peachtree between Harris and Baker streets. There will be the usual six night performances at 8:30 and bargain matinees on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday at 2:30.

"Cuckoo Is Calling To Me" Wins Contest on Song Titles

Mary Frances Sampler, of 327 Moreland avenue, N. E., wins the prize of two loge seats to the Capitol theater for the best song title for Buster Keaton.

Miss Sampler suggested "The Cuckoo Is Calling to Me" as a suitable sentiment to fit the pose and expression of Buster in the picture published of him in this section of The Constitution one week ago.

If Miss Sampler will call at the fourth floor of The Constitution and ask either for Ralph T. Jones, theater editor, or for the city editor, any time after noon on Monday she will receive her tickets, good for any performance except Saturday, of "Free and Easy" at the Capitol all next week.

"Free and Easy" is the newest Keaton comedy and is said to be funnier than any of his past triumphs of humor, though this seems almost impossible.

There were hundreds of entrants in the song title contest and many sent in clever and excellent suggestions. Perhaps some of them were even better than Miss Sampler's, but if so they didn't appeal that way to Mr. Jones, judge of the contest. He admits, however, that it was hard to decide the winner and there were so many "near winners" that another contest will be started next Sunday to give those who came so near to winning this time another chance.

Special mention is made, at Mr. Jones' request, of a few who sent in splendid suggestions, including:

Miss Gladys Pattillo, 1013 Pulliam street; Billie King, 116 West John Calvin avenue, College Park; Mrs. G. A. Mitchell, 617 Simpson street, N. W.; Manning Goldsmith, 92 Georgia avenue; Marvin S. Reaves, 361 Glenwood avenue, S. E.; Mrs. Miriam W. Bishop, 120 Marietta street; Christine Lawrence, 507 West Howard avenue, Decatur; Eudora Bates, 541 St. Charles avenue, N. E.; George A. Wilson, Route 7, Atlanta, and H. Konigsmark, P. O. Box 1748, Atlanta.

'Puttin' on the Ritz' Feature At Paramount

"Puttin' on the Ritz," which will be the feature attraction at the Paramount during the current week, boasts an exceptionally strong cast, headed by Harry Richman, famous as a New York night club entertainer and as a star of George White's "Scandals" for three years.

Joan Bennett will be seen in the leading feminine role, this being her fifth talking picture success within a year. James Gleason, noted both as a stage and picture star and playwright, plays a role of much color and humor.

In the role of Gleason's wife is Lilyan Tashman, whose work in this picture has been lauded by eastern critics. Aileen Pringle also turns in an admirable performance as a New York society matron. Richard Tucker and Eddie Kane also have prominent parts in the extravaganza.

The picture is replete with lavish scenes, some of them beautifully done in natural colors, and with songs from the versatile Irving Berlin. The featured song of the show is "With You," which already has won wide popularity among radio fans.

Fortunately, however, the producers of the picture realized that a substantial motion picture could not be made simply upon lavish settings and songs—not even songs written by Berlin and sung by Richman.

Consequently, a story of definite dramatic value and suspense was selected, and its popularity with movie fans already has been established by box-office records of the picture in other cities.

On the same program with "Puttin' on the Ritz" will be Lloyd Hamilton's new talking comedy, "Polished Ivory," in which this slap-stick favorite will be seen to splendid advantage. There also will be a new release of the "Silly Symphony" cartoon series, this one entitled "Cannibal Capers," and a special recorded overture of Russian selections played by the New York Paramount orchestra of 50, as well as the latest release of Paramount Sound News.

Maids of Melody Top Capitol Bill

With Alex Hyde, perhaps most popular of all conductors of jazz orchestras appearing before the public today, wielding the baton, and with a round dozen of the most beautiful girl musicians ever gathered together forming his orchestra, there is lots of allure in the headline act of the Loew vaudeville program billed at the Capitol theater this week.

Add to the stage show the fact that Buster Keaton is coming on the screen in his latest and funniest feature length talking comedy, "Free and Easy," and it is easy to predict capacity business for the Capitol through the week.

Alex Hyde describes his group of girls "adorable maids of melody," and calls his act "a cyclone of versatility." Advance reports from other cities where he has played go so far as to say that his description is mighty close to the truth—which is sufficiently rare in vodevil to be remarkable. Two of the featured performers among his group are Toma Genaro and Frankie Booth. Also, adding interest to this act, is the fact that it carries a gorgeous stage setting of its own.

Two of the cleverest comedians in vaudeville today, Walter (Boob) McManus and Eddie Hickey, occupy second place in this week's billing. They present a hilariously funny farce entitled, "Speakeasy," which contains all kinds of possibilities today.

John R. Walsh, the American lyric baritone, with Ruth Johnson, one of the most accomplished woman pianists before the public, will present a classy program and semi-classical songs.

An exceptionally clever singing and comedy pantomime act, on bicycles, with one male and two female performers, will be presented by George Downey and the Claridge Sisters, to complete what has every indication of being one of the exceptional vaudeville programs of the season.

Half a Dozen Big Ones Talk on Local Screens This Week

Excellent entertainment looms on Atlanta's talking and singing screens this week. The evidence is submitted above. First, in upper left, we catch a glimpse of a tense moment in "Mamba," technicolor thriller, made in Africa of war days, which is the feature of the screen entertainment at the Fox. The man and woman clinging together in the picture above are Eleanor Boardman and Ralph Forbes. The lady in the cunning pajamas in the upper center oval is Billie Dove, her own lovely, alluring self. This is how she appears in "A Notorious Affair," her star offering at Keith's Georgia. Under the umbrella, singing "Frowning in the Rain," are Buster Keaton and Anita Page. Keaton heads a long list of famous stars in his latest comedy talkie, "Free and Easy," booked at the Capitol. Stepping down stairs we find, at lower left, that "Puttin' On the Ritz," long looked forward to, has at last reached the Paramount screen. The star is Harry Richman and, above, he's pinching the chin of Joan Bennett. Lower center shows a crucial moment in "Alias French Gertie," which is the Metropolitan feature. And, lower right, is a scene from what promises to be one of the most interesting features of recent date. It is the newest talking feature directed by F. W. Murnau, called "City Girl." The stars are Charles Farrell and Mary Duncan and it will be shown all week at the Rialto.

S. R. O.

by Ralph T. Jones

Beyond doubt the most important theater event in Atlanta Monday night is the local debut of Miss Margaret Brayton, new leading lady for the Erlanger Theater Players. Miss Brayton is a gorgeously attractive brunette and comes with a reputation for ability that should quickly make her the most popular resident production actress the city has ever known.

Adding to the Brayton debut to make the Erlanger theater the mecca of wise amusement seekers this week, is the fact that "Smilin' Through" is the play selected by Manager Haase and Director McKee for production. Maybe you recall what a marvelous thing this was a few years ago when Jane Cowl achieved her greatest glory in the role of "Moonyeen"—which will be filled here by Miss Brayton. It is an exquisitely lovely and wistful story, beautifully written. And, going by past precedent, the stage production given it this week is certain to rival that of the original New York premiere in color and completeness.

At the Paramount this week, "Puttin' on the Ritz" is the feature offering. This department has been waiting eagerly, ever since seeing a preview of this picture about a month ago, to hear other peoples' reaction. Personally, we enjoyed it immensely—particularly the song numbers "Puttin' on the Ritz" and "Alice." Go round and see it and let us hear how your judgment on the entertainment value of the picture agrees with ours.

In another column you will find announcement of the winner in the song title contest we ran last Sunday, concerning Buster Keaton and his new feature comedy which opens Monday at Loew's Capitol for a week. Lots of you sent in good titles and we only wish every entrant could have gotten a prize. However, if they did, it wouldn't be any contest and all the fun would be lost. We'll run another contest—probably next Sunday—and maybe one of the many near-winners this time will be actual-winner next time. Look for the big contest announcement a week from today.

"Mamba," technicolor drama of Africa during World War days, should prove immense at the Fox. It got all kinds of praise from New York critics a few weeks ago, we recall, and should likewise click in Atlanta.

Didn't get to the preview of "City Girl," that Lillian Wade is offering her patrons at the Rialto this week. But we'll be sure to take a look in during the week. For it was directed by F. W. Murnau, who made "Last Laugh" and "Sunrise," two of the most original and surprising pictures of a few short years ago. And with Charles Farrell playing a highly dramatic role instead of his usual ukulele twanging juvenile, there is added interest to the offering.

Don't you want to see all the little Chinese chorus girls who will be at Keith's Georgia this week? The title of the act in which they headline the RKO vaudeville program is "Honorable Mr. Wu and Chinese Showboat." We are tempted to slip behind the honorable scenes and meet some of the honorable ladies of the honorable ensemble.

Manager Mike Minday of Loew's Grand had so many entrants in his old newspaper contest that it took two days to sort 'em all out and select the oldest paper of the lot. Mike started more than he suspected when he gave birth to this idea.

Speaking of ideas, isn't that a lallapaloosa of Lillian Wade's? She wants to start the girls taking the boy friends out for the evening, instead of vice versa. So she's offering inducements every Thursday night. Look into it, girls. Its a good proposition and, if you lack the boy friend, well, Thursday isn't a very busy night in this office and—oh, well.

PAPER PRINTED IN 1712 WINS GRAND CONTEST

Manager Mike Mindy, of Loew's Grand theater, announced Saturday that the winner of a pair of season passes to his popular house for the oldest newspaper submitted in his "old paper" contest, is C. L. Hayni, of 50 Spring street, N. W., who sent in a London Spectator published in 1712.

In addition to winner of the grand prize, four additional special prizes are awarded by Mr. Mindy to the owners of four other papers out of the several score submitted. The four additional prizes are based not only on age of the paper, but on the interest of its contents, etc.

There was a time when A. D. was in the money, as the saying goes on Broadway. He did not boast the exaggerated and inflated salaries purported to be paid to the film luminaries, but for almost a score of years he was never paid less than $500 weekly, and frequently he passed the $1,000 mark. His services as a singing comic and dancer were always in demand. Instead of salvaging a portion of his salary each week, D. squandered his earnings with all that reckless abandonment ascribed to sailors. He awoke too late to mend his ways. He was no longer funny, nor could he sing, nor were his feet so agile. In short, the producers would have no more of him. Today he's just a little old man, selling neckwear to street pedestrians.

Patsy THE Hollywood Stenog

"Dear Eloise:

"Ain't it a grand and glorious feeling when your boss orders you on a week-end vacash. That's my luck, dearie . . . the slavedriver, noticing I looked worse than usual, suggested a long journey before I broke his heart. So I'm simply spanking the tin keys now to rush out your weekly ration.

"Here's the pace that caused the downfall. Mon: Spoiled my canoe taste forever by going aboard the million $ yacht, where Norma Shearer and Conrad Nagel were shooting 'Divorcee.' Norma was intriguing in gob trousers. I was different in 'em too . . . only looking more like my aunt minnie in longies. After bogling their camera clinches, I learned what's meant by the freedom of the seas.

"Tues.: Delivered costumes on the set for 'She Couldn't Say No,' and lingered around, adoring Winnie Lightner, the warbling blimph with the cute lil' ways. A riot broke loose when Chester Morris' opera hat didn't turn out to be the collapsible kind. My error!! But I got away without scars—though not before Chester personally snarled right in my face . . . a secret desire I've had for months.

"Wed.: Had to report to Lawrence Tibbett for mail, but got mixed up on 'The Rogue Song' stage with a flock of horses, opera singers and some guys who talk english. Catherine Dale Owen noticed my grief and led me straight to the metropolitan opera sheik. Tibbett's a honey, no foolin'. Not attal like the hairy-chested tenor I imagined. I mean he was too considerate for words all day to me and the other dumb animals on the set.

"Thurs.: Gobbled thru an order of ham and . . . with Mary Brian, who was fluttering over her date to emosh with Richard Arlen that p. m. in 'The Border Legion.' Having been Dick's o. a. o. in flickers so often, Mary confessed it felt almost like cheating when she bunny-hugged Gary Cooper in 'The Virginian.' Tho t'aint serious mating, cause off screen the kid pals with three other fellers. Tough, Loisey, isn't it, when a jane can coo with Gary and Dick for wages and then have Arthur Lake, Bob Montgomery and Larry Gray camping on her doormat after school.

"Fri.: Dashed over to Greta Garbo with a telegram advising that 'Anna Christie' was wowing 'em so in Manhattan, the broadwayites had to sell the isle back to the indians to pay for ducats. Garbo took the news with such a Buster Ketaton pan, I suspected the swede didn't understand english. 'Til Lewis Stone explained Greta was just working herself into an artistic coma for her next shot in 'Romance,' which promises to be plenty oompah!

"Sat.: Helped the script girl on a dance shot for 'Montana Moon,' the answer to the extra girls' prayer for work and buckwheats. Cliff Edwards gave me his studio chair, being a gentleman and mostly because he'd been coupled with an unfriendly mustang in the big outdoor shots. Joan Crawford broke into a tango with Richard Cortez . . . when (but hold everything, Loisey . . . Loretta Young and Grant Withers, week-end bound for Arrowhead Lake, are tooting the horn outside. If I leap, there's a chance of cuddling in the toolbox with the monkey wrenches for a free hitch) so . . .

"Cheerio . . . Patsy, the Hollywood Stenog."

Broadway has come to the aid of the clergy. The pastor of the Manhattan Congregational church and his board of vestrymen were seeking some means to attract the younger generation in large numbers. Finally they alit upon a jazz band to supplant the church's choir on Sunday nights. They have engaged Paul Specht and his orchestra to render jazz music with all the trappings of a symphonic orchestra.

"Mamba" at Fox Promises New Screen Thrill

If ever a picture combined all it takes to make complete and perfect entertainment, that picture is "Mamba," the feature attraction at the Fox theater during the coming week, beginning Monday. Besides being produced entirely in technicolor, "Mamba" is one of the most unusual and different stories ever to come to the audible screen.

"Mamba" makes many bids to fame as an outstanding picture of the year. It is a spectacular production; tells a powerful story; is perfectly cast and ably directed. The greatly abused word, "sensational," is applicable to "Mamba" a full 100 per cent.

For the first time in a screen drama, the strange situation that sprang up between the English and German soldiers and civilians who had lived for years as friends and neighbors in the African colonies when they found themselves facing each other as enemies by reason of the outbreak of the great war in far-away Europe is told in this dramatic story.

From the viewpoint of the spectacular, "Mamba" sets a new high point. It presents limitless jungles, the veldt and impenetrable forests. We see a native village with its hundreds of blacks, a never-ending menace to the whites, regardless of nationality. We see the savages in their picturesque and often terrifying tribal dances. We see the burning of the native village and, finally the attack by the horde of black savages on the little settlement, defended by only a handful of men under the command of a gallant German officer, who has determined to die fighting. Then the shrill note of a bugle signals the arrival of a hard-riding force of British cavalry, which saves the day.

The dramatic burden is carried capably by Jean Hersholt, Eleanor Boardman and Ralph Forbes. Hersholt plays, undoubtedly, the greatest role of his career. Miss Boardman is perfect in her part of a gentle German girl and Ralph Forbes as her lover, is superb. The title, "Mamba," is the name of the deadly snake of the African country and symbolizes the character portrayed by Hersholt.

MIDNIGHT SHOW OPENS EMPIRE'S GALA WEEK

Spring Carnival Week at the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, will be ushered in tonight in gala style, with a midnight show, the doors of that popular community theater scheduled to be thrown open at one minute after midnight.

The screen attractions are to be several Vitaphone talking acts, and the first showing on an Atlanta screen of that sparkling girl-music revue, "Tanned Legs." A new slant on the younger generation that will cause many an American parent to ponder and smile is presented amid dazzling beauty in "Tanned Legs." This effervescent drama features Ann Pennington, Arthur Lake, Dorothy Revier, Sally Blane, Albert Gran and June Clyde. Songs, dances, bathing suits and girls are the elements out of which Director Marshall Neilan builds his just-serious-enough drama.

Buster Keaton "Free and Easy" Star at Capitol

Famous "Solemn Comedian" Has Excruciatingly Funny Role in Feature Comedy.

A burlesque comedy on the taking of motion pictures themselves, "Free and Easy," is presented at the Capitol theater this week, with the inimitable Buster Keaton as the star. Any picture with Keaton is bound to be a smashing success. With Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd he is accounted one of the three greatest comedians the screen, talking or silent, has given to the entertainment world.

In this all-talking feature comedy, Keaton plays a part particularly well adapted to his type of fun making. He is a small town garage keeper who goes to Hollywood with the beauty prize winner of his native town, as her manager, in behalf of the chamber of commerce. How the girl falls in love, how Keaton unwittingly stumbles into fame as a screen comedian and how a half-hearted villain and an ambitious mother achieve their final happiness, all form part of an unusually funny and laughter-provoking talkie.

Not only does the cast of "Free and Easy" include the largest collection of screen celebrities ever used in a talking comedy, a list headed, after Keaton, by Anita Page, Trixie Friganza, Robert Montgomery, Karl Dane, Dorothy Sebastian and a score of other famous folk, but MGM's famous directors, even, appear in the picture. Cecil B. DeMille, Lionel Barrymore, Fred Niblo and David Burton are all seen and heard on the screen.

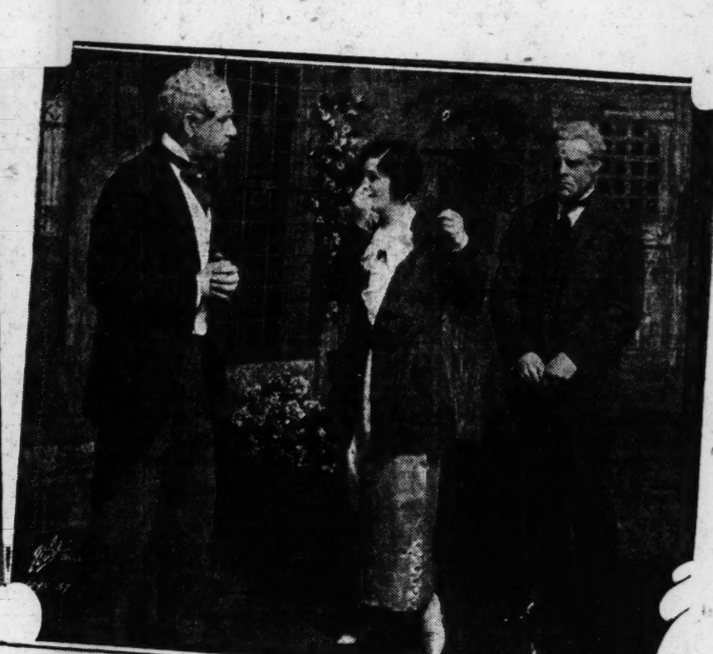

Musical numbers in the production include "Free and Easy," "Down in Arkansas," "Oh King, Oh Queen" and "It Must Be You," the work of Roy Turk and Fred E. Ahlert. Keaton, Miss Friganza, Montgomery and Miss Howell and a large chorus do the singing. Accompanying several of the songs are ballets staged by Sammy Lee, former Ziegfeld dance coach.

In 1904 a member of the faculty of the University of Maine composed a stirring march tune to words by a senior in the same college. It was titled the "Maine Stein Song," and dedicated, of course, to the true sons of that institution of learning. The manuscript was despatched to a music publisherd in New York who specialized in the printing of classical and semi-classical music, and who was, as yet, unsullied by contact with the wiles of Tin Pan Alley. The result was that the "Maine Stein Song" remained dormant for 26 years. But recently the publisher became a subsidiary of the largest broadcasting chain. The broadcasters, wishing to test the theory that the radio could commercially exploit a song, selected the musty old "Maine Stein Song," which had never been "plugged," and, so far as the public was concerned, was a new song, and had it played and crooned over the air three or four times by a well-known jazz orchestra. It became popular almost immediately and put Maine on the collegiate map.

This goes to prove that colleges have no need of press agents. They don't even need a winning football team. All that is required is a lively march song, and the boys who croon through megaphones will do the rest.

Superb Stage Offering for Theatergoers This Week

There are some superb offerings for the delectation of Atlanta theatergoers on the flesh and blood stages of the local theaters this week. First, at upper right above, we see a scene from "Smilin' Through," that lovely and enthralling play that will be given by the Erlanger Theater Players all week, with Margaret Brayton, beautiful new leading lady, in the role of "Moonyeen," a part that lifted Jane Cowl to world stardom a few years ago. At the upper left the bunch of jolly looking girls with the sailor outfits and the berets are Alex Hyde's "Maids of Melody," who, led by Mr. Hyde's baton from orchestra pit and stage, will headline at the Capitol. The acrobatic dancers at lower left are a couple of stars from "Far East Idea," the Fanchon and Marco offering on the stage at the Fox. And the bashful maids from old China, shown smilingly at lower right, are part of the ensemble from "Honorable Wu and Chinese Showboat," top act on the RKO vaudeville bill at Keith's Georgia.

'Gold Diggers of Broadway' At Alamo No. 2

In "Gold Diggers of Broadway," Warner Bros.' 100 per cent natural color, singing, talking, dancing Vitaphone comedy special in technicolor which comes to the Alamo No. 2 Monday and Tuesday, a huge musical revue, which beside the all-star cast includes a dazzling beauty chorus of 100, is presented as part of the colorful background of the story.

One of the song hits of the musical revue is "The Song of the Gold Diggers." Ann Pennington, famous Broadway dancing and singing star, sings the number, "The Song of the Gold Diggers," and eight others, were written especially for this Vitaphone production by Al Dubin and Joe Burke, well-known composers of popular melodies.

In addition to Miss Pennington, the all-star cast of "Gold Diggers of Broadway," includes Lilyan Tashman, Conway Tearle, Nick Lucas, Albert Gran, Nancy Wellford, William Bakewell, Helen Foster, Winnie Lightner, Julia Swayne Gordon, Gertrude Short and others. Robert Lord adapted the story from Avery Hopwood's successful stage play. The stage presentation is by Larry Ceballos. Roy Del Ruth directed.

Lawrence Tibbett, the world's most famous baritone who was acclaimed once more in Atlanta the past week during grand opera, will grace the screen at Loew's Grand theater this week in his glorious picture, "The Rogue Song."

The thousands who saw and heard the talented artist last week will be doubly impressed with the stupendous cinema, a romantic, glittering tale of gypsy love. Tibbett is given more opportunities in "The Rogue Song," for acting as well as singing.

It is an odd feature of the brilliant singer's life that his days on the legitimate stage have never been so duly acclaimed as have his actions before the camera. His whole-hearted, laughing personality fairly springs from the multi-colored scenes of the picture, and his golden voice reaches the furthest ends of every theater.

There is a great story behind "The Rogue Song." It deals with a band of marauders who prey upon rich caravans that move across the snowy wastes of the wild Russian country. Tibbett, the rogue, is the leader of these desperadoes. Songs aplenty and costumes go to make up the background.

The comedy in the picture is supplied by those two excellent comedians, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy. Hardy, it might be added, is a graduate of the University of Georgia Law School, and it was at this institution that he gained his first experience as an actor. As two members of Tibbett's troupe, these Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer clowns perform their best bits of laugh making.

Deep, rich colors, carefully designed costumes and the beautiful Catherine Dale Owen add to the effectiveness of "The Rogue Song," lauded by New York and Atlanta alike as the most perfect of the romantic operettas.

With the approach of the balmy weather Saturday afternoons for the husky structural ironworkers are usually given over to the pleasures of gambling. On such afternoons these daredevils who skip so nimbly from beam to beam hundreds of feet above the street level, participate in friendly games of chance with their week's wages as stakes. A few planks placed conveniently over the beams serve the players, who safe from the meddling law in their uppermost haven, bet on the turn of the dice.

What has become of the concert violinists who wore sashes, the wooden cigar store Indians, the singing quartets in variety, the swinging doors of the drink emporiums, the old-fashioned jazz bands that muted their cornets with derbies?"

'Far East' To Live Upon Fox Stage

Fanchon & Marco's "Far East" idea, which opens at the Fox Monday for a week's engagement, will bring to Atlanta theater-goers a wealth of entertainment, colorful atmosphere and specialty dancing. Nothing quite as elaborate as the three Oriental sequences included in this presentation has been seen in Atlanta in months.

"Far East" idea opens with a Mongolian set, wherein is revealed a jewel theft in a religious temple. A golden statue is brought to life and the thief captured. Following certain specialties, the Korean atmosphere is revealed in the second setting and, in the finale, all the beauties of Japanese characteristics are brought out.

Much of the "Far East" idea is not only authentic in setting, but is presented by a cast of personalities who are real Orientals. There is Masa Sanami and company, for instance. This rather wierd presentation of an Oriental dance is beyond question both original and different. Then there is Ruth Kadomatsu, a real Japanese jazz singer, who renders American songs with a real far east twist.

Others among the headliners are the "Three Jacks and Two Queens," an adagio quintette; Cowan and Gray, comedy acrobats; Frank Stever, baritone songster; Helen Pachaud and Joan Hardcastle, dancers, and, of course, the adorable Sunkist Beauties.

Frank Stever has been heard on numerous occasions by Atlantans when he was vocalizing over the National Broadcasting Company hook-up. He sings "Java Moon" and other tuneful melodies in "Far East."

The "Three Jacks and Two Queens" present about the fastest adagio effort in Atlanta to date. Their dance is both dazzling and thrilling and the way they hurl and toss the girls about stamps them as top notch performers.

The Fox Grand orchestra, under the baton of Enrico Leide, will present a "Southern Rhapsody" for the orchestral part of the program. This is founded on songs of the old south and includes "My Old Kentucky Home," "Dixie" and "The Arkansas Traveler." For the finale Director Leide will combine portions of all three tunes. Don Wilkins will spring another surprise with his stage band.

For 30 years Joe Smith and Charles Dale have been stage partners in vaudeville. Those who follow the fortunes of variety will recall that Smith and Dale were half of that famous Avon Comedy Four. Smith and Dale were possessed of a burning ambition to be featured in a legitimate production which would permit them sufficient scope to display their latent histrionic powers. For some reason or other, every stage foil takes it for granted that drama must have its nucleus in comedy.

Finally the two comedians secured leading roles in a production and hoped to realize their ambitions. The play brought no rush of paying customers to the boxoffice, despite favorable reviews. Each week brings a deficit which the comedians meet our of their own pockets, always in the hope that it will prosper. Others in their place would have called quits long ago. This is all the more remarkable, since Smith and Dale can always rate salaries in four figures for their appearance in variety.

Brook and Brent Co-Star In Big Cameo Feature

In "The Love Racket," Dorothy Mackaill has one of the most dramatic roles of her entire career. This film, a 100 per cent all-talking production, is the feature for Wednesday and Thursday. "The Love Racket" is adapted from the play, "The Woman On the Jury." Sidney Blackmer, an Atlanta favorite, is seen opposite Miss Mackaill, and the splendid supporting cast includes Myrtle Stedman, Alice Day, Edmund Burns, Edward Davis, Clarence Burton and Edith York.

Hoot Gibson again lives up to his title of "The Flying Cowboy," in "Trailing Trouble," the stirring action, all-talking feature to be shown Friday and Saturday of this week. Hoot stows away in an airplane and climaxes his adventures with a thrilling parachute jump. Gibson covers the range of excitement from horses to airplanes in this picture, which is also especially rich in romance and humor.

Talk About Your Talkies.

"Seeing Is Believing" but hearing the talk makes the movie more convincing.

Chinese Troupe Tops Keith Bill

Coming to Keith's Georgia next week, the Honorable Wu, Cantonese entertainer, brings a troupe of 20 Chinese-American performers, 10 of whom are the most beautiful of Chinese girls. Each and every one of these talented and facinating youngsters has hair as black as Poe's raven.

This group of Orientals offer a most diversified program; they have absorbed the Anglo-Saxon understanding of showmanship without losing any of their native charm.

Besides his Chinese maidens, Wu is also assisted by men entertainers who offer him excellent support, and Wu himself gives his inimitable impersonations of Eddie Cantor, Charles King, George Arliss and Joe Frisco in manner which stamps him as a first-class mimic. In addition he has many other exceptional talents.

Other acts on the bill include Miller and Wilson, knockabout comedians, two brilliant entertainers. The two Daveys, novelty comedy jugglers, a clever pair of artists with a breezy patter that is mirth-provoking, are also on the bill.

Beautiful Billy Dove, in "Notorious Affair," is the feature picture.

Since sound films have brought bands to the screen there is no demand for the old-time three-piece orchestra—piano, stool and cover.

Slang is often based on slight excuse.

NEWS of STAGE and SCREEN

EDITED by RALPH T. JONES

"City Girl," Drama of Tense Power, Comes to Rialto

Charles Farrell Stars in Moving Story of Wheat Fields, Directed by Murnau.

A Fox Movietone talking picture, carrying the most intensely enthralling story ever put on the talking screen, has been secured for the Rialto theater this week in "City Girl." This dramatic triumph, directed by F. W. Murnau, and starring Charles Farrell and Mary Duncan, tells a story of young love and its struggle against woeful odds, with it ultimate triumph, in sweeping sequences that carry the audience spellbound from climax to climax until the final denouement.

Murnau, director of "Last Laugh," "Sunrise," "4 Devils" and other sensational successes of the screen has exceeded his own best effort of the past in this moving story of the great American wheat fields. And Charles Farrell, great star of "Sunny Side Up," and "High Society Blues," has an opportunity in "City Girl" to show the magnificent dramatic ability he possesses.

It is the story of a fanatic father who worships the wheat he grows upon his 1,000-acre ranch. He sends his son to the city to sell the year's crop and the boy returns with a wife, (played by Mary Duncan) a young waitress he met in a humble restaurant where he ate in the city. The father (played by David Torrance) classes "city girls" and "bad girls" as synonymous and his treatment of his son and the young wife is bitter in its unreason and its cruelty.

How the crisis is precipitated, how the young husband rises in defense of his wife and throws off, at last, the oppressive yoke his father has for long held upon his shoulders, forms the engrossing drama of the picture. There is the most realistic fight between two men ever shown on the screen. It takes place on a careening farm wagon as the frightened team of horses run away. There is a tremendous hail storm that utterly ruins the father's crop and, in the end, leads him to repentence and a humble plea for forgiveness from the son and daughter-in-law he has wronged.

It is a truly great picture and will undoubtedly make theater history in Atlanta before the week is out.

Lillian Wade, manager of the Rialto, announced Saturday that she would repeat, next Thursday, the special "bring your beaux" offer she extended to the girls of Atlanta last Thursday. On that night each girl bringing her boy friend will be admitted for one regular ticket and 10 cents extra for the companion.

Erlanger Theater Has New Leading Lady for This Week

The Erlanger Theater Players offer "Smilin' Through," one of the most famous and beautiful plays of the past decade in the American theater, this week. Featuring the magnificent production awaiting Atlanta playgoers, is the initial local appearance of Miss Margaret Brayton, lovely new leading lady for the Players, who is shown above. Everyone who has seen Miss Brayton since her arrival in the city one week ago agrees that, if she is as fine an actress as she is a beautiful woman, Atlanta has secured the greatest leading woman of the day. And Director Harry McKee, with whom she worked for many weeks in Montreal prior to his transplanting onto Atlanta soil, swears that she is just that good.

THE NEW YORK THEATER

BY PERCY HAMMOND

NEW YORK, May 3.—All the New York drama critics felt complimented last week when they heard that Miss Barrymore had labeled them "rock men." The name, suggesting strength, stability, grandeur and permanence, indicated that Miss Barrymore had reversed her former opinion of the local actuaries and was recognizing them as what they are, "Rock man!" How solid it sounded—an object to cling to in time of peril, or a steadfast foundation in a neighborhood of shifting sands. At last, we thought, Miss Barrymore has discovered that we are impregnable, immutable, unscalable and prudential, topped by warning lighthouses and fortified with heavy guns. Dangerous only when dashed against, sat upon or fallen off of, and as protective to the drama as Gibraltar to the Motherland, we were pleased that Miss Barrymore had given us her accolade as such.

But Miss Barrymore did not mean the term "rock men" in the way we had hoped. In an alum interview with the clever Mr. Sifton, of "The World," she said with "a smooth loathing" that New York is "infested with a lot of terrible men who write." "No one used to pay any attention to them," she continued, "but now you pick them up in dentists' offices. I call them 'rock men'—you know what I mean—the things that creep out from under the rocks, after dark. But managers listen to them and their impertinent wisecracks. One or two of them ought to be shot at dawn!"

Why, as Miss Nora Bayes used to say, why wait till dawn? We had an opportunity to excuse our existence last year by appreciating Miss Barrymore's plays, "The Love Duel" and "The Kingdom of God," but so lost were we in admiration of her acting that her drama seemed false by contrast. So they did not get along. In Detroit, Newark, Chicago, Washington and other capitals uninfested by N. Y. rock men the entertainment prospered. They were performed eighty-four weeks from coast to coast to receipts ranging upward from tidy sums to large amounts. What are known as the box-office "takings" made new heavyweight records in show business. It is not surprising, therefore, that Miss Barrymore refers to New York's drama critics as noisome nondescripts that lurk in dark places until some one uncovers them and they scamper or waddle out into the night. They bit and nibbled at "Abie's Irish Rose" and Mr. Skinner's "A Hundred Years Old," as well as at "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel," all of which made both money and pleasure.

But some times, Miss Barrymore, we are the other kind of "rock men." The theater's magic makes it possible for us to lead what has been referred to as the dual existence, to be now the Colossi, then the lizards. We are "rock men" of the bigger type when we like "Journey's End," "The Green Pastures" or the performances of Miss Barrymore, but our objections to "The Love Duel" and "The Kingdom of God" are verminous. In my capacity as an insect I still claim that both of Miss Barrymore's last year's plays were shoddy. "They liked them in Washington," she says. One can see Senators Dill, Brookhart, Heflin, Smoot, Caraway and other giant intellects reveling in "The Love Duel" and "The Kingdom of God." Miss Cornell, I think, and Miss Lynn Fontanne would prefer not to have their approval.

Years ago, when Mr. George White was beginning his career as a rival to Mr. Ziegfeld, he worried me by his affrontery. Where Mr. Ziegfeld whispered it, Mr. White said it out loud; and a Ziegfeld suggestion became a fact in a White revue. If the ladies were nude in the Follies, they were naked in the Scandals, and it seemed that they would go on and on until the city hall or the federal government would be forced to interfere. The theater is now triumphant over law and order. No restrictions are put upon the taste and conduct of the stage, and 'a clown can tell your girl a soiled joke in public and make you like it. Mr. White's new show is called "Flying High." It is one of the best things of its musical comedy kind in Broadway—brash, beautiful, hick, urban, dirty and popular. The girls who dance in it are the prettiest of the coryphees, young, agile and more than usually melodious. They are dressed, of course, in Mr. White's most expensive method, which, they tell me, disregards cost and is amenable to taste.

Though I have seen a thousand "Flying Highs" in my time, I liked this one of Mr. White's as well as any. Its story is just another scissor-and-glue thing, pasted up and put together in a way that must make Harry H. Smith and the better old-timers writhe. But it has Oscar Shaw as its grinning hero, Bert Lahr as its clown and a chorus which is the best that Broadway can provide. The heroine, Miss Nell Brinkley, and the villainess, Miss Dorothy Hall, are all that, as Frank Sullivan might say, could be desired. The show is a bang—a rich, swift, dauntless performance, planned cunningly for Mr. White's Broadway.

One of the scenes in "Flying High" made me wish for a moment that I had gone somewhere else. That was where Mr. Lahr, undergoing a physical examination, resorted to details too ugly for me to report. Being but one of Miss Barrymore's "rock men," I am not competent to determine whether it is coarse or otherwise. I wonder, however, what Mr. Ochs, of The Times, thinks of it; Mr. Speed, of The Sun; Mr. Pulitzer, of The World; Mr. Mason, of The Evening Post, and Mr. Reid, of the Herald-Tribune. Well, even if they like it, I don't and I believe that Mr. White spoils a smart, wicked and beautiful show with at least one inexcusably revolting act. However, "Flying High" is the capital's biggest public entertainment, and, so far as I know, it should be, containing as it does, enough cheap romance and a lot of indifferent tunes, interspersed with almanac humor. Mr. Lahr, they say, makes "Flying High," a stupendous hit, simply by his irresistible grimaces. Mr. Lahr, no doubt, is a funny man, but if he can make you laugh, so can Will Mahoney.

Newest Picture of Billie Dove Is Georgia Bill

"A Notorious Affair," Billie Dove's new picture now showing at the Georgia, adds still another type of role to the varied ones Miss Dove has brought to the screen in the last two years.

In "The Other Tomorrow," Billie, you will recall, played the role of a Dixie belle. In "The Painted Angel" she sang and danced as a Broadway night-club owner. Previously she appeared in stories with foreign locales. "A Notorious Affair" is her first role as a lady of England.

It tells the story of a talented but poor genius of the violin who wins the daughter of an English nobleman. Later, when his music has brought him fame—and feminine admirers, he deserts his wife. However, her pride prompts her to fight her rivals for his possession, which she does with an effort that ohly true love could inspire.

Kay Francis, Basil Rathbone, Montagu Love and Kenneth Thomson are others of the cast who do outstanding work. Miss Francis is the "other woman," Basil Rathbone is the violin genius, Montagu Love plays Billie's father.

Dramatic Story At Metropolitan Has Bebe Daniels

A treat, as well as a thrill, awaits Atlanta theater-goers next week when Bebe Daniels plays at the Metropolitan in her latest Radio production, "Alias French Gertie," having as her leading man Ben Lyon. For the first time in talking pictures this, the most talked of couple of Hollywood, appears on the screen in opposite leading roles. Never, critics acclaim, has Miss Daniels appeared to greater advantage than in this opus, nor, as a matter of fact, has Ben Lyon done himself the credit which he can rightfully claim.

"Alias French Gertie" is a thriller in every respect. Glamorous Bebe is seen as a clever, adroit female "racketeer," which offers her an opportunity for dramatic forcefulness as great as the astonishing power she wielded as the star of "Rio Rita" and "Love Comes Along."

The story deals with an expose of the smooth methods of high society crooks, brimming with thrills and romance. The underworld atmosphere is startlingly real and much of it is due to the splendid acting of the leading performers. The man in the story is Jimmy Hartigan, well played by Ben Lyon.

Gertie, so the plot unfolds, is a "French" maid, always scheming and planning successful coups on the rich with the aid of her accomplice; then, suddenly realizing, after he is caught and sentenced to jail, that the price is too high for the rewards, takes things in her own hands in a dramatic and spectacular fashion.

"Alias French Gertie" is based on the stage play, "The Chatterbox," from the pen of Bayard Veiller and has been transcribed for the silversheet intact. An excellent supporting cast includes, Betty Pierce, the Tondeleyo of the famous stage production, "White Cargo;" John Ince, Nella Walker and others. George Archainbaud, one of the master directors, has to his credit an extraordinarily fine production.

'Rogue Song' and 'Slightly Scarlet' Return

Lawrence Tibbett, who thrilled all Atlanta at the auditorium on Saturday night, in the flesh, as he sang the immortal prologue from "Pagliacci," is back on the singing screen for the first half of this week at Loew's Grand in "The Rogue Song," magnificent screen operetta in technicolor that was such a sensation a few weeks ago at the Capitol. A scene from the play, showing Tibbett and Catherine Dale Owen, the lovely leading lady, is seen at left above. The cuddlesome couple at the right is Clive Brook and Evelyn Brent, in one of their outstanding talkie successes, "Slightly Scarlet," which will be seen at the Cameo on Monday and Tuesday.

Neighborhood Theaters

Many Stars Billed At Ponce de Leon

On Monday and Tuesday charming Norma Shearer and Robert Montgomery will be seen in the all-talking picture, "Their Own Desire," at the Ponce de Leon. This production is dramatic, spectacular and vital. The searchlight of truth is thrown on the divorce problem. A great lesson for both young and old is vividly portrayed. Belle Bennett adds materially to the cast.

Thousands of movie fans in the United States believe Corinne Griffith, the most beautiful woman on the screen. She will be seen and heard in her first all-talking Vitaphone picture, "Lilies of the Field," at the Ponce de Leon on Wednesday and Thursday. Ralph Forbes plays opposite Miss Griffith.

Friday brings the sweetest and prettiest story ever conceived by mortal mind, "Peter Pan." Beautiful Betty Bronson takes the lead, and she handles it wonderfully. Saturday will be featured by a big return engagement of "Sunny Side Up" with Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell.

DeKalb Opens Week With 'Sunny Side Up'

"Sunny Side Up," the all-talking, all-singing and all-laughing Fox movietone feature, will open the week's program at the DeKalb theater in Decatur Monday. Charles Farrell and Janet Gaynor are the featured stars in what is termed the screen's most entertaining picture. Both Miss Gaynor and Farrell sing and dance in this great production, which is literally filled with the season's most catching tunes.

Thursday and Friday, Richard Dix delivers the master stroke of his career as the two-fisted hero of George M. Cohen's long-run Broadway sensation, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Here's where Dix comes into his own as a talking screen star in the funniest thrill show ever brought to the stage or screen.

Saturday, William Boyd puts on the uniform once again and does his stuff in "His First Command." Here's a typical picture for Boyd and he plays the part as he has never done before, chuck full of action, drama and fun.

West End Presents "Hot for Paris" Hit

"Hot For Paris," with Victor McLaglen, Fifi Dorsay and El Brendel starts the week at the West End theater playing Monday and Tuesday. A sizzling comedy of hot times and hot tunes—of sailors in hot water with their hot mamas in gay Paree—by the same writers who wrote "The Cockeyed World." This all-talking movietone picture has its moments of suspense but its greatest moments are filled with laughs.

On Wednesday, Robert Armstrong and Carol Lombard will be seen in "The Racketeer." A tremendous picture of compelling human interest. A remarkable theme dealing with life in the dark haunts of crime in a great city, superbly presented, every character artistically drawn, every scene a thrill.

Thursday and Friday—"The Kibitzer." The newest kind of funny-bone tickler. Harry Green in the role of screendom's supreme wise guy! There's romance too—furnished by Mary Brian and Neil Hamilton.

For Saturday — "The Forward Pass," with Loretta Young as the campus flirt and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., the gridiron hero. A triple-threat love story with action and tender love scenes. See the University of Southern California's football squad perform in the Rose bowl.

Madison Theater Adopts Sound Policy

With installation of Western Electric sound equipment completed, the Madison theater will open with talking pictures for the first time Monday. "They Had to See Paris," the sensationally successful comedy feature with Will Rogers in the main role, will be offered on Monday and Tuesday.

Ken Maynard will be starred Wednesday in "Parade of the West," another talkie, while on Thursday and Friday "Show Boat," with Laura LaPlante, will be the talking, singing and dancing attraction. Saturday brings "Oh, Yeah!" one of the cleverest comedies of the year, with Richard Gleason and Robert Armstrong.

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" At Lakewood Heights

The south of old, with its charming gallantry and beautiful women, is colorfully transported to the screen in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the stupendous Universal-Pollard production which will open at the Lakewood Heights theater on Thursday for a two-day engagement. It is almost possible to inhale the sweet scent of the magnolias and hear the soft voices of the crooning darkies at the hour of dust. Harry Pollard's superb direction is reflected in every foot of this great screen epic. The all-star cast includes such names as Margarita Fischer, Arthur Edmund Carew, John Roche, Gertrude Astor, Lucien Littlefield, George Siegmann, Mona Ray, Virginia Grey.

This theater will show also this week "Skinner Steps Out" on Monday and Tuesday; "Hard to Get" on Wednesday, and "The Viking" on Saturday.

Big Carnival Week Program Empire

Spring Carnival Week, featuring a different talkie each day and backed up by a big Amateur Night contest, Vitaphone acts, comedies, news reels, all at popular prices, is the program for the Empire theater, corner of Georgia avenue and Crew street, this week. Monday will find Manager Alpha Fowler offering his patrons a first-run talkie in Atlanta, with the showing on the silver screen of that sparkling girl-music revue, "Tanned Legs," with Ann Pennington, Arthur Lake, June Clyde, Dorothy Revier and other noted stars.

The Fox Movietone all-talking picture "Salute," played against the romantic backgrounds of Annapolis and West Point and starring George O'Brien and Helen Chandler, will be Tuesday's attraction. "Street of Chance," with William Powell, will be the talking picture for Wednesday. "The Cock-Eyed World," starring Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Lily Damita, will be shown on Thursday, while that dramatic thriller, "Night Parade," with Aileen Pringle and other stars, will be the screen feature for Friday, with an Amateur Night contest as an added attraction at 8 o'clock in the evening.

"Land of the Silver Fox," a drama of the frozen north, with Rin-Tin-Tin, will head the screen attractions for Saturday.

'Romance of the Rio Grande' at Tenth St.

"Romance of the Rio Grande," with Warner Baxter, Mary Duncan, Antonio Moreno and Mona Maris, opens the week of hits at the Tenth Street theater. "Romance of the Rio Grande is a thrilling story of life and love in old California and along the Mexican border. Warner Baxter, as the son of an old Spanish don, plays the greatest role of his career, while Mona Maris, a newcomer to the screen, thrills you with her beautiful songs.

"Sailors Holiday," a ship load of mirth, with Alen Hale, Sally Eilers and George Cooper, is the feature for Wednesday.

William Boyd in "His First Command" is the attraction for Saturday. Also on this program you will find another chapter of "Tarzan the Tiger."

"Cock-Eyed World" Palace Offering

On Monday and Tuesday the all-talking, singing comedy, "The Cock-eyed World," with Victor McLaglen, Edmund Lowe and Lily Damita, comes to the Palace theater. It is a story replete with human drama, the underlying note being the eternal battle of a man for a maid.

On Wednesday, Loretta Young, Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Chester Morris will be seen in the sure-fire hit, "Fast Life." These youthful players triumph in this thrilling drama of the new jazz generation. Youthful marriage kept secret by the lovers nearly carries them to their doom.

Thursday and Friday, Ramon Navarro, greatest of screen lovers, with Dorothy Jordan, in the great musical all-talking romance, "Devil May Care." The story is a delightful romance of old France, centering around the activities of Armand, who is the exiled Napoleon's beloved lieutenant. Hear Navarro sing with Marion Harris, greatest of "blues" singers.

On Saturday, "Parade of the West," with Ken Maynard, snapping with action, humming with the old west and filled with romance and adventure, is the feature. Gladys McConnell and Jackie Hanlon play opposite Maynard.

Chalk up Marcelle Miller, one of the pretty ingenues appearing in a current musical comedy success, as a very truthful person. She once walked out of a play for the most unusual reason. Cast as an angel against her wishes in a musical extravaganza, she promptly handed in her notice.

"Is that a reason to quit?" inquired her employer.

"Yes," she snapped. "I'm no hypocrite!"

GENERAL MOTORS STARTS PRODUCTION AT PLANT IN GERMANY

Small Car Model Is Built To Put on European Market

Gasoline Consumption Estimated at Not Less Than 40 Miles to Gallon of Fuel.

BY E. Y. WATSON.

DETROIT, Mich., May 3.—News from overseas conveys the information that General Motors Corporation has produced from its Opel plant at Ruesselsheim, Germany, the new small car model that G. M. C. will market in Europe.

This is the car the general specifications of which were forecast by James D. Mooney, president of the General Motors Export Company, in a paper read before the Society of Automotive Engineers two years ago. In it Mr. Mooney pointed out that economic and living conditions in Europe demanded individual transportation scaled down from the order on which it is used in America.

Plan of Construction.

The Opel car is the result. It has been built on the plan on which European makers have designed the "baby" cars used abroad. The experimental models are said to have been tested at the General Motors proving ground at Milford, Mich., before being put into production in the German factory. This plant, by the way, is under the management of I. J. Reuter, president of the Olds Motor works at Lansing, who assumed the overseas post some months ago.

In design, the new car is said to be a make-over of a former Opel model to which certain American characteristics have been given. In appearance it suggests Buick body lines. The chassis weighs only 925 pounds and the complete car between 1,417 1,600 pounds, according to body type.

The engine is the L-head type and has four cylinders. Bore of 2 3-8 inches and stroke of 3 9-16 inches place it in the one-litre class with a displacement approximating 62 cubic inches. Neither wheelbase nor tread dimensions are given, but it is assumed that the tread is narrower than the 54 inches common in this country.

3,600 R. P. M. Engine.

Maximum engine speed is 3,600 revolutions. On high gear ratio of 5.56 to 1, the shaft turns at 2,930 revolutions. No claims of speed or gasoline consumption are made but the car is believed capable of at least 40 miles on one gallon of fuel.

Other features incorporated in the car are a thermo-syphon cooling system, battery ignition, two-bearing crankshaft, pressure feed lubrication, single dry-plate clutch, tubular propeller shaft with double universal, four-wheel brakes, semi-elliptic springs in front and quarter elliptics in rear, and three-speed transmission.

Five Models in Line.

There are five models in the range. The types and prices follow: Chassis $440; roadster $490; touring car $570; two-passenger collapsible coupe with rumble seat $610; four-passenger sedan $650.

The Fleetwood Body Corporation, long known as one of the foremost custom body builders in the country, has moved its manufacturing operations to Detroit from Fleetwood, Pa. According to Ernest Schebera, its president, the new plant here, which is one formerly used by the Fisher Body Corporation, will be the largest of its kind in the world.

Fleetwood for some time has been a unit of General Motors Corporation, and as such has supplied bodies and coach work for Cadillac and La Salle cars. Certain custom-built creations included in the Cadillac line bear the Fleetwood name.

An encouraging note for the automobile trade has been sounded from the Detroit factory of the United States Rubber Company. According to Joseph F. O'Shaughnessy, who now heads the tire division of the company, the plant is operating at full capacity and running seven days a week on three eight-hour shifts each day.

The daily output of tires is said to be at the highest point for many years. Schedules call for the present rate to be maintained until well into the summer.

According to a recent survey of the department of commerce, the outlook for the trade throughout the country is favored by the fact that stocks in the hands of dealers are lower than at this time last year.

Gulf Refining Adds 100 Whites To Record Fleet

An order for nearly a half million dollars' worth of motor trucks—100 Whites of various models—has been placed with the White Company, of Cleveland, Ohio, by the Gulf refining Company, of Pittsburgh, Pa. The order, which sets an industry record for 1930, will increase the Gulf Refining Company's truck fleet, already the world's largest standardized fleet, to 2,336 Whites.

The Gulf Refining Company's fleet is the outgrowth of an order for one White truck placed in 1911. It has increased steadily during every year since, and is the outstanding example of standardization of motor equipment. In this fleet there are 416 Whites that have run over 100,000 miles and many are performing efficiently after from 12 to 14 years of service.

Graham Engineers Eliminate Side-Sway of Car

Through the use of rubber spring shackles of a type just recently developed, Graham engineers believe they have eliminated practically all sidesway which has been common to all types of rubber spring mountings previously used.

These shackles not only lessen the impact of shocks incurred on the road but by their design they reduce all tendency toward lateral motion. Besides adding considerably to operation and riding ease, they eliminate the necessity for shackle lubrication, the engineers say.

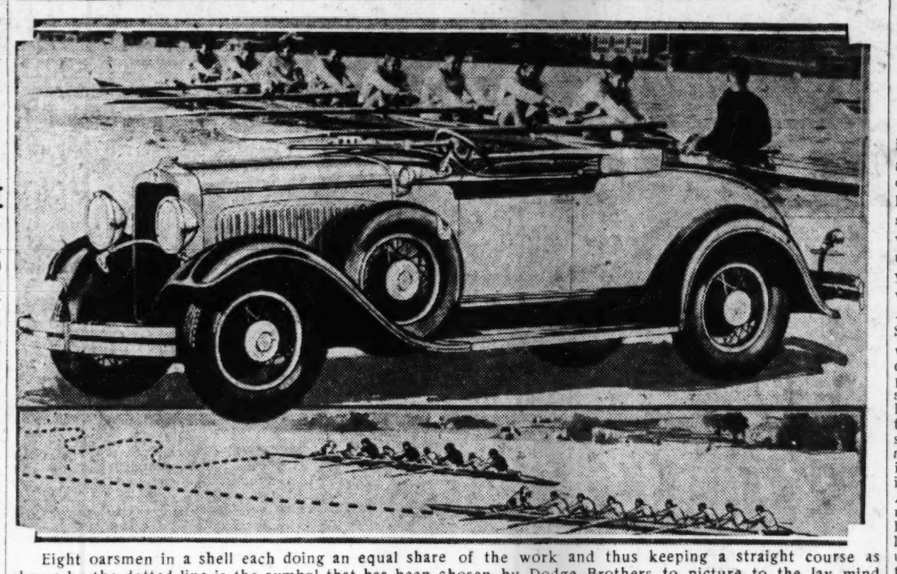

Each shackle bolt runs through two cylindrical blocks of live rubber which fit within metal cups pressed into the spring eyes. When assembled, the rubber is compressed by an outer housing at the front of the springs and by the shackle links at the rear. As the rubber is under compression, it firmly grips all contacting surfaces. The required rotary action is permitted only by the flow of the rubber. There is no metal to metal contact. All parts are completely enclosed in metal, protected from moisture or grit.

On the Graham eights, the shackles have been placed at the front and rear ends of both the front and rear springs. On the six-cylinder models, they have been applied to the forward ends of the front springs. Rubber bushings have also been applied to the shock absorbers so that every point between the wheels and chassis, which is subjected to load, is rubber insulated.

Tests have shown, the engineers say, that these shackles show practically no wear, even after many thousands of miles of use. Their greatest benefit is evident in the improved riding quality of the car, for there is no metal to metal contact between the running gear and the chassis frame. Noise and minute vibrations cannot be transmitted from the running gear to the frame.

The engineers also point out that, with spring shackle lubricating eliminated, there remains on the front of the car only the clutch throwout shaft bearing, the clutch release bearing, and the king pins and tie rods to be lubricated.

Rowing Crew Symbol of Straight-Eight Power

Eight oarsmen in a shell each doing an equal share of the work and thus keeping a straight course as shown by the dotted line is the symbol that has been chosen by Dodge Brothers to picture to the lay mind that in the new Dodge Eight-in-Line engine each cylinder does an equal share of the job of generating power. The zig-zag course illustrates what would result if men of unequal strength were to compose the crew of a shell. Similarly, if each cylinder in an engine does not produce an equal amount of power, the operation is rough and inefficient.

Previous Marmon Owners Praise New Big Eight

Speaking from the experience of long familiarity with Marmon automobiles, scores of motorists throughout the country, many of them having owned five or more Marmons consecutively, have written the factory to praise the new Marmon Big Eight, the company's new product in the fine car field.

The new Big Eight was introduced less than six months ago, following an insistent demand on the part of the public for a large fine car of the type which gained for the Marmon its long-standing reputation for quality manufacturing. The return of Marmon to the large car field was coincident with the offering of straight-eight automobiles in all of the major price fields from the class of the Big Eight to the $1,000 market represented by the new Marmon-Roosevelt.

In commenting on the outstanding performance given by the Big Eight, practically all of the letters received at the factory lay particular stress on the effectiveness of the double-dome combustion chamber which was developed by Marmon engineers and for which a patent has been applied. Through an unusual design of the combustion chamber an increased power output of 10 per cent is made possible, according to actual tests conducted at the Marmon factory.

Other new features of the Marmon Big Eight include the use of a four-range transmission, which has come in for a full share of praise from owners; an entirely new system of cable brake linkage, and improved riding qualities further enhanced by the use of two-way hydraulic shock absorbers. In the Marmon-type four-range transmission the use of an internal third gear gives silent and speedy acceleration, and the fourth gear is a direct drive from the 125-horsepower Marmon straight-eight engine.

Flexible steel cables, sheathed in steel conduits, provide uniform brake operation regardless of road conditions or position of the car or wheels, and at the same time eliminate 50 parts which were necessary under conventional hook-ups.

The Marmon Big Eight line was determined with a view to meeting the needs of every fine car owner and includes a new custom-built seven-passenger touring, a seven-passenger sedan, seven-passenger limousine, five-passenger sedan, four-door brougham, four-door club sedan and a two-passenger coupe with rumble seat.

Plants do no harm in sleeping rooms at night, says a plant expert of the United States department of agriculture, for "a whole greenhouse full of plants would not give off enough carbon dioxide to injuriously affect the composition of the air."

New Alloy Developed By A. C. Plug Co.

A motorist may think he is traveling fast when he gets in his car and goes whizzing over a piece of splendid pavement at the rate of 75 miles an hour. But figuratively he is standing still when such speed is compared with that of an instrument of almost unbelievable accuracy and refinement, which was used recently in connection with automotive development work. According to engineers of the AC Spark Plug Company, this instrument, which bears the high sounding name of oscillograph, played an important part in the recent discovery of a new and improved spark plug electrode alloy enabling engineers to better study the characteristics of the electric spark. It traced a line one inch long across an exposed photographic plate in one millionth of a second, which is equivalent to 144,100 miles an hour. At this rate of speed a trip to the moon would require less than two hours. Current as small as one billionth of an ampere was also measured. As only one ampere is required to light both parking lamps, a billionth part of this force seems fantastic.

These phenomenal measurements were made by engineers of the department of engineering research, University of Michigan, in collaboration with engineers of the AC company.

Discovery of the new spark plug electrode alloy, it is said, means that much engine missing will be eliminated; that starting in cold weather will be greatly improved, and that the spark gap will need less readjusting.

Horsepower Measure Shows Increase in Trucks on Farm

done on farms in the United States during 1929 was performed by trucks and tractors, according to a statement issued today by Howard E. Sneathen, manager of truck sales for the Dodge Brothers Corporation.

"This compares with 18 per cent of farm work performed by trucks and tractors in 1924," Mr. Sneathen continued. "In other words, the use of trucks and tractors on American farms during the last five years has increased 100 per cent.

"It is interesting to view the motorization of the modern farm in terms of horsepower hours rather than by the number of motor power units. The trend towards power equipment for farm work is plainly shown in figures produced by the American Research foundation survey recording that in 1924 trucks and tractors performed 2,950,000,000 horsepower hours as compared with 6,700,000,000 in 1929. The sales of Dodge Brothers trucks for use on farms in the same period would tend to substantiate these figures. The steadily increasing versatility of the truck and tractor and the ability of these two units to do more of the farm work is indicated by the fact that in 1924 power equipment other than trucks and tractors performed 4,030,000,000 horsepower hours while in 1929 this figure had dropped to 3,680,000,000.

"Automobiles, trucks and tractors have had a profound effect on farming and rural life. They are building a higher standard of living for the farmer—a type of living that has placed the people of the United States in a class by themselves. They are making the farmer an efficiency engineer. Today he gets far more efficient work out of his equipment than he did five years ago because he has become a closer student of automotive problems.

"For instance, it has been generally discovered by farmers that the lubrication of trucks and tractors is a far different problem from that of the passenger automobile. Oil in the former, for the best results, should as a general rule be changed more frequently and at a mileage of from 7,000 to 9,000 a heavier grade of oil is used. The farmer has profited by many other similarly well-learned lessons.

"Figuring on the basis of horsepower hours, the east-north-central states, composed of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin lead in the use of trucks and tractors. The American Research Foundation figures show that 51 per cent of the total horsepower work on farms is performed with this kind of equipment.

"The South Atlantic states rank second with 49 per cent; the New England states come next with 46 per cent, although the actual work done on farms is smaller than any other section of the United States. The Pacific coast states of Washington, Oregon and California, according to this method of computing, rank fourth with 44 per cent and the Middle Atlantic states rank fifth with 43 per cent."

When the agricultural census is taken, a special survey will be made of the fruit and nut industries of five southern states—Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, and Texas.

A million gallons of sea water are being shipped from the Florida Keys to an aquarium in Chicago to provide fish from tropical waters with the organic matter they need.

ART AND AD CLASSES FINISH YEAR'S WORK

The art and advertising classes, sponsored by the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce completed their course the past week. Those graduating from the advanced advertising class were: Edith Ivey, Emily Ramage, Sara Piem, LaRue Barnes and Mrs. Allan V. Gray. Graduating from the first course was David Cohen.

The graduating class of the first course in art included: Martha Jordan, Miss Louise C. S. Blanton, Mrs. Richard Daly, Mrs. A. Brunner, Miss Louise Jones, Miss Virginia Sewell, Miss Elizabeth White, Miss Evelyn Titus, David Cohen and Julian de Ovies. Those completing the advanced course in art were: Verona Longino, Sara Landrum, Grace Mince and Irma Parks.

These classes are taught by Leonora Anderson, advertising manager for J. P. Allen & Company, and Mrs. Claire Lang, artist for Norris Candy Company. Both the theory and the practical side of each subject have been taught.

Three of the pupils have been placed through the school. Classes will open again in October.

Niuafou Island, in the South Pacific, from which astronomers will observe a total eclipse of the sun next October, is known at "Tincan Island" because mail for its inhabitants is sealed in a tin can and thrown overboard by the monthly interisland steamer, a native swimming out and rescuing it.

New Willys Eight Introduced In Medium Priced Class

After many months of intensive experimental work in laboratories and gruelling road tests over thousands of miles of monutainous and level highways, the new Willys Eight, with a wheelbase of 120 inches, is presented by Willys-Overland, bringing higher standards of performance and car beauty to the field of medium-priced eight-cylinder cars. The new product of Willys-Overland conforms to the most advanced engineering practices which have been proved sound in principle under every motoring condition.

The new Willys Eight is the senior companion car to the popular lower-priced Willys Six, which has been so widelly accepted by the public. The eight is presented in four body styles, consisting of a de luxe sedan, $1,395; a standard sedan, $1,295; a de luxe coupe, $1,345, and a standard coupe, $1,245. The sedan models accommodate five passengers, while the coupe is designed to comfortably seat four. A commodious baggage compartment is provided in the rear of the coupe.

Powered with a straight eight engine that develops 80 horsepower and produces a speed of more than 75 miles an hour in high and 48 miles an hour in second gear, the Willys-Eight engine is designed to fully meet every speed and power demand of modern motoring.

Beauty and Comfort Are Features

A careful inspection of the car reveals unusual attention paid to every detail of style, luxury, comfort and smooth-riding qualities. Both interiors and exteriors are characterized by modish design and quality. The 120-inch wheelbase and the overall chassis length of 166 5-8 inches have given the designers unusual freedom in providing a car of graceful, sweeping lines with maximum roominess for drivers and passengers in the spacious interiors. The style note is also carried out in the carefully blended color combinations of the exterior and the rich upholstery and fittings of the interiors.

Flexible padded arm rests at each side of the wide, deep seats in the rear, smart toggle straps for hand grips, and foot rail are noticeable features of comfort. The front seat of the sedan and the driver's seat in the coupe are adjustable by means of a handy turn screw which is within easy reach and may be operated while driver is seated. This seat adjustment assures driving convenience for a tall or short person and is especially pleasing to women drivers who sometimes are handicapped by the distance from seat to clutch and brake pedals. Steering posts in all models also are adjustable.

Wire Wheels and Smartness.

Ths de luxe models are al that the name implies, the six wire wheels imparting an air of smartness. This general smart effect is further enhanced by placing the two spare wire wheels in front fender wells. The standard models are equipped with wood wheels, a spare rim being mounted at the rear. The de luxe models are also equipped with a large trunk rack at the rear.

Viewed from any angle, the new Willys Eight bespeaks quality. The trim, high narrow radiator, the graceful lines of the hood, the artistic mounting of the chromium parking lights on the cowl and the wide sweep to the gracefully curved rear section of the car are a tribute to modern craftsmanship.

The power and speed performance of the car is further enhanced by the exceptional riding comfort which is assuerd by the generous spring length of 92 inches on each side and the use of Monroe double-acting shock eliminators at front and rear.

Willys-Overland dealers are now exhibiting the new Willys Eight in their showrooms and are prepared to demonstrate its new high standard of performance in the eight-cylinder class.

HUDSON'S Great 8

A Car for You to Try Will Be Sent to Your Door

Only by riding in or driving Hudson's Great 8 will you appreciate its delightful operation. You are invited to take a trial car and test it for smoothness, speed, acceleration, power, easy handling, comfort and economy. A telephone call will bring Hudson's Great 8 to your door.

Is Easy to Buy and Inexpensive to Operate

No car we have ever offered has so quickly won the enthusiasm of all who drive it.

For Hudson is an entirely new type. It is new in smoothness and easy handling. It is new in brilliant, fast get-away that makes drivers of other cars gasp as it darts ahead of them.

So alert and quiet is the action of Hudson's Great Eight that sixty miles an hour seems no greater than thirty to driver and passengers. It will roll smoothly along as slowly as a man walks. Then a mere touch on the throttle will as silently and smoothly jump you to express train speed.

It is as nimble as a fine polo pony.

Hudson's Great Eight will please you. Its first cost is way below any car of similar quality or performance. Its economy is impressive.

Such smartness and driving enjoyment at so low a cost and at so low an operating expense are exclusively its own.

Any dealer will gladly let you drive a Hudson Great Eight. You will be so enthusiastic that you can't help telling your friends it is the most delightful car you have ever driven.

Nash Reports Unusual Activity On West Coast

KENOSHA, Wis., April 3.—The first fifteen days in April brought a decided upward trend in the national demand for Nash "400" cars and a marked improvement in April business at the Nash factories, it was announced today by C. H. Bliss, sales manager of the Nash Motors Company.

"During this 15-day period our orders for April shipment of Nash '400' cars to distributors and dealers increased 43.8 per cent," he said today in commenting on the steady improvement of business. "From March 1 to March 15 the increase in orders was 24 per cent, indicating the healthy beginning of the improving spring demand. The April figures show a greater increase in these shipment orders than occurred during the entire month of March.

"The Nash shipment reports are further proof that aggressive selling organizations need have no fear of success in the spring campaign; that business is better and is steadily improving."

Nash Reports April Sales On Upward Trend

KENOSHA, Wis., May 3.—(Special.)—The morning alarm clock has sounded for spring activity in America's vast western coast territory, and business is beginning to wake up all along the line, in the opinion of C. W. Nash, president of the Nash Motors Company, who has returned to resume command of his big factory forces after a characteristic month's "vacation" trip in which he visited Nash distributor and dealer organizations all the way from Denver west and north to Seattle.

"My observation in a trip which pretty well covered the west and northwest was that business in general is improving steadily after its extensive nap, induced by the stock deflation of 1929," he said after inspecting the big home plant and conferring with the many expert executive heads of the organization which have sent the great Nash manufacturing machine smoothly forward during his absence.

"The east is already fully conscious. Business in the west, although I do not believe that its reaction to the market depression was as widespread, feels the changing cycles of business about 60 days later. It is unquestionably looking up in the west. There is nothing wrong with the country. Money is plentiful and values are up.

"Improvement in California business conditions is particularly gratifying to the businessman who seldom enjoys an opportunity of visiting the great Pacific coast empire. Too many of us think of that state as dependent upon its citrus fruits and its annual crop of tourists and retired citizens for its prosperity. As a matter of fact, the state is fast becoming a center for small but prosperous manufacturing, and for extensive branch manufacturing developments on the part of the largest American industrials. I found Los Angeles, for example, thriving on its numerous factories, and learned that it is the second American city in furniture manufacture. Some of the biggest manufacturers in the country are operating large branch plants there and in other California points. Labor conditions are improving rapidly, and the whole situation is a healthy one."

The dynamic motor leader's "wake-up" trip began in Salt Lake, where he inspected big Nash merchandising organizations and spoke at a series of luncheon and dinner meetings. The first week out found him visiting Nash dealer establishments from 8 a. m. until closing time and then attending meetings and conferences until well after midnight. Three days were consumed thus in Los Angeles with a side "pleasure trip" to visit the Nash organization in Phoenix, Ariz. The same program continued through San Francisco, Oakland and up and down the coast with Portland, Seattle and the cities of the northwest included in the swing back home.

When one of the Nash executives remarked that the usual vacation does not include quite so many hours of hard work, Mr. Nash smilingly considered this angle.

"That may be true," he said, "but I find relaxation and interest in traveling around the country and learning actual conditions at first hand. I think that the man who feels that work is a drudge and who can't find pleasure in his occupation is unfortunate. The real pleasure in life lies in making a success of the job."

Goodyear Makes Moderately Priced Heavy Duty Tire

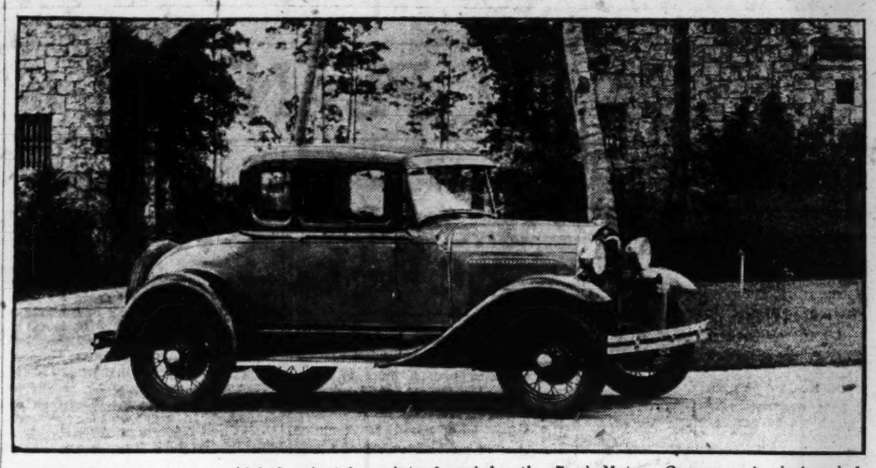

"Thousands of car owners have felt the need of a tire of heavier than average construction at a moderate price," says C. C. Mason, Jr., manager of the Dobbs-Consolidated Tire Company.

"For the requirements of those doing a lot of hard driving over rough and rutty roads, where the added security of extra plies is essential, but where moderate price is likewise essential, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company has developed a real 'big brother' to its popular 'Pathfinder,' which has met with unanimous approval of the users demanding quality at popular prices.

"This new line of genuine heavy duty six-ply tires is heavier, huskier, finer in appearance, with extra mileage, and bears the name 'Heavy Duty Goodyear Pathfinder.'

"This new product," concluded Mr. Mason, "is backed by the experience of the largest rubber company in the industry which has built more tires—millions more—than any other manufacturer."

Ford De Luxe Coupe Shown Here

The De Luxe Coupe, which has just been introduced by the Ford Motor Company, is designed for those who desire a personal car with a more select interior appearance than that of the standard coupe. Upholstery may be had in either mohair or Bedford cord. Other refinements include cowl lights and mahogany garnish mouldings on the doors and windows. This car is being shown all this week in the display rooms of the Atlanta Ford dealers.

Dignity Marks Choosing New Colors for Your Car

BY HOWARD KETCHAM,
Director Duco Color Advisory Service.

Subdued, rich, dignified colors continue to predominate in outstanding closed car color schemes to be seen on the streets of our principal cities today. Of all the available colors for automotive use, dark blues seem to be most generally approved for formal and semi-formal body styles.

Stygian, a strong, pure blue, is one of this year's favorites and looks particularly effective when accented with a bluish-grey stripe. Wire wheels can also be finished in blue grey. Black combines nicely with this blue for moulding and fender treatment.

Colors of the same hue but varying in value or strength or both are in chromatic sequence. Colors of the same hue sequence blend perfectly. Attractive secondary colors in perfect sequence to blend with Stygian blue in combination are standard blue, light or Cayuga blue.

Brown continues as a color of great importance from the popularity standpoint in the automotive industry. Although not a beautiful color in itself, brown softens the appearance of angular surfaces and gracefully enhances contours in addition to being a color suggestive of rugged stability and worth.

In striping the brown car, it is well to remember the varying contrast effectiveness of certain colors against brown. Due to the strong contrast of orange with brown, it is not essential to employ so wide a stripe of this color as would be required with white, pale gold bronze or vermillion on brown.

Certain tints of yellow-green are soft and very effective as a stripe on brown or tan. The width of a stripe can interfere with the balance of a motor car color scheme, particularly where the striping color is of high chroma and of a hue that contrasts with the base colors.

It is best to experiment with varicolored stripes of different widths on a small metal panel, finished in the base color in order to determine just which color and in what width the stripe color will look best.

Interesting brown color schemes for the closed car are: Upper, moulding and fenders in deep, rich Zircon brown with body and wheels in chateau brown. Both of these brown values have a greenish cast that makes them particularly distinctive. A greenish yellow stripe will make a very effective accent color. Upper, moulding and fenders in dark, neutral hazelwood brown, with body and wheels in Sumatra beige. In view of the fact that hazelwood brown has maroon content and bleeds through light striping material, white or cream stripes should be avoided. Nassau orange, gold or silver bronze will prove effective as striping mediums.

There are very few greys available in motor car finishing material that have any degree of sophistication in their color value. Bon Soir grey, dark for upper, moulding and fender treatment, supplies a touch of suave grandeur, especially with the lower body and wheels in Bon Soir grey, light. A silver bronze stripe will engender an additional sparkle to the ensemble.

No range of color schemes for motor car use would be complete without a combination in the green color family. Greens of the same general hue but widely separated chromas provide interesting contrast and desirable harmony. Upper, moulding and fenders in dark, lustrous Glen Eagle green, with body and wheels in English grey, a soft, light greenish grey, provides just such a color harmony.

Black as an integral part of a color scheme in many cases interrupts the harmony of color and contributes little or nothing to the unity of the car's silhouette.

By all means specify fenders colored in the same shade as the upper and moulding structure as this will enhance the harmony of the whole and refinishing shops everywhere carry a stock of any of the colors listed herewith, so that dented fenders can be promptly renewed in the original color.

Heads Synagogue.

Joel Dorfan, recently elected as president of the Ahavath Achim Synagogue, was instrumental in erecting the first Orthodox Synagogue in Atlanta and served as its first president. Jake Jacobs, who with Mr. Dorfan is an active member of the Montefiere Relief Association, was named vice president.

Novel Race Is Won By New Buick

HALIFAX, N. S., May 3.—What amounts to the automobile speed record of the Atlantic ocean was won this year by a stock model Buick car, driven by Dick Logue, famous Canadian speed star.

The race over the ice of Sydney Harbor, Nova Scotia, is an annual event and one of the most thrilling sporting contests on the continent. Logue, driving a Buick six roadster, set a new world's record for salt water speed trials. He was timed over the two and a half mile course in 1 minute and 25 seconds, an averaa egof 105.88 miles per hour, and after cvoering a mile and three-quarters of the course, was clocked at 110.2 miles per hour.

This is the fourth time Logue has taken the trophy. He has used a standard Buick model on each occasion. Logue added a wedge-shaped wind breaker to the radiator front of his car and altered the gear ratio for the trials, but his record-breaking machine was a stock model, not a special job.

Spectators at the event were puzzled as to how the speeding cars gripped the ice until they discovered that wide-headed stove nails had been driven through the tire casings from the inside at frequent intervals, and filed to sharp points.

The frozen surface of Sydney harbor, a speedway which offers the probability of occasional rough spots and water, provides a racing course that offers the drivers and spectators a measure of excitement which Daytona Beach would find hard to rival.

School Girls Look Over Nash

"Popularity of the famous Nash twin-ignition eight and six models is by no means confined to campuses of the United States, where the younger set has given the new-type cars complete approval. Down in Honolulu recently these attractive students of the University of Hawaii and the fashionable Kamehameha school used their semi-military experience in illustrating the advantages of the new twin-ignition six. There's plenty of pep in the twin-six feminine groups and in the Nash sedan they frame.

New Hupmobile Sixes Establish Driveaway Record

CHICAGO, Ill., May 3.—A trip of 40,000 miles in which 102 new six-cylinder Hupmobile cars averaged slightly more than 15.3 miles to the gallon of gasoline—such was the record hung up here a little more than a week ago by dealers and salesmen of the Gambill Motor Company, Hupmobile distributors for this territory.

The occasion was the drive-away of 102 Hupmobile sixes from the Cleveland plants of the Hupp Motor Car Corporation to Chicago. The trip from Chicago to Cleveland was made on a special train. The following day, after extensive trips through the company's factories in Cleveland, the return trip was started. An overnight stop was made in Toledo, the party reaching Chicago on the second day out.

Not a single accident marred the return trip. Based on the number of cars in the drive-away, approximately 40,000 new car miles were recorded.

Touring Service Routes Vacation Motor Trips Free

This is the time of year when the whole family begins to look forward in eager anticipation to the summer vacation. Whether to go to the mountains, the seashore, the west, the lakes of Wisconsin, Canada, New England, or the many splendid resorts of the south.

The annual family argument over "where to go" has to a large extent been obviated by the automobile and America's splendid net work of good roads. Many motorists solve the problem by making a round trip, taking in the mountains, the seashore, some of the large metropolitan cities, and in this way pleasing all the family.

Since last summer hundreds of millions of dollars have been spent on the construction of new concrete and asphalt highways, making it possible for the motorist to vacation where he will, with the assurance of excellent roads.

No country has as many or varied resorts to serve as summer playgrounds for its people as has the United States, nor as excellent facilities for reaching them. The south itself has many excellent beaches along the Atlantic seaboard and the gulf coast, beautiful mountain resorts in western North Carolina, north Georgia and many points of national interest in Kentucky.

For those who wish to take a longer and more extended motor trip there is the beautiful Pacific coast, the wonders of Yellowstone park and the other national parks of the great west; the sapphire lakes of Canada, Wisconsin and Minnesota; New England with its beaches, mountains and many points of historical interest; New York with its myriad entertainments; Atlantic City, Niagara Falls and other points too numerous to mention.

Wherever you plan to motor, the Standard Oil touring service will be glad to route the trip for you, sending you maps and up-to-date information on the best roads and shortest route to take. Through state highway departments and other reliable sources of information the Standard Oil touring service secures weekly reports on road conditions throughout the country, so that its road information is accurate and up to date.

Address a card or letter to Standard Oil Touring Service, 426 W. Bloom street, Louisville, Ky., stating destination of trip you plan to make and routing will be sent you at once. There is no charge for this service.

Antiquated Fords, Chevrolets Sought for Lakewood Show

Antiquated Model T Fords and Chevrolets which date back in history will have a day all their own at Lakewood park on Saturday, May 17, when the first annual "flivver frolic" and motor marathon will be held at the popular amusement resort to the south of the city.

Flaming youth may then have its fling, for those collegiates who sport highly-painted and humorously-lettered collegiate flivvers will have a chance to compete for several types of prizes.

First of all, there will be motor marathons for Model T "varsity flivvers," in which Georgia Tech, Georgia, Oglethorpe, Emory, Chattanooga, Mercer, Auburn and Georgia Military College will be eligible in races from the campus to the Lakewood race track, and, besides, there will be classifications for high schools and for academies and private schools.

Each school winner in the marathon to the park will compete for the grand prize of each the varsity, academic and interscholastic classifications, and then the grand champs or "chumps," as the case may be, will go out in a race of their own.

Non-winners in the marathon will not be disqualified by any means, for they may compete for the funniest Ford, the oldest Ford, the most unique Ford, the Ford of greatest capacity and smoothest running Ford.

The general public class of Model T Ford owners will also have a chance to compete in similar classifications as will those who drive to Lakewood behind the wheels of Chevrolets dating back to the 1926 regime. The oldest driver of a Ford or Chevrolet, the driver boasting the largest family, the Ford or Chevrolet which is driven the greatest distance to the park and the cars which have run up exceptional tire mileage will all come in for awards and prizes.

"Flivver Frolic" Day at Lakewood, while not an entirely original idea, gives promise of being one of great activity at the amusement park. Several years ago a marathon from Mount Vernon, Iowa, to the Drake relays stirred national attention, and a race from Tech to Athens at one time added zip to an athletic contest. The funny Ford collegiate contest was originated by Harold Hagen, while a student at St. Olaf's college in Minnesota. Hagen is now an editor at Crookston, Minn.

The "mad" motor day at Lakewood will be free to the public.

New York motorists are blase.

So naturally one would not expect a chorus of "ohs" and "ahs" from New Yorkers who write about automobiles for the metropolitan press.

All of which is by way of introducing a few comments recently printed by the automobile editors of New York after they had been passenger-guests at a special demonstration of Oakland eights on several of the most severe "test hills" in that city.

"It is estimated that each of the Oaklands carried a passenger weight of 1,026 pounds," states the New York Sun. "Every 'tough hill' in the city was conquered in high gear with ease, several of them being made to look quite ordinary as power killers. Among those who got the greatest thrill from the performance were the motorcycle policemen assigned to the demonstration, who with full power on could not keep ahead of the flying Oakland squadron which, from almost a standing start, swept over the top of Fort George Hill at better than 40 miles an hour. One of them said: 'You must be using dynamite for fuel in those babies.'"

The New York American was equally complimentary. "Under police escort the Oaklands made the trip to Fort George Hill, the accepted proving grounds for the metropolitan district," said the American. "There a number of feats were performed which convinced every rider, without exception, of the speed, hill-climbing ability and flexibility of the new Oakland eight. The cars, with five passengers aboard, were given an almost standing start at the bottom of the hill and roared over the top at from 40 to 50 miles per hour. The difficult feat of starting in the middle of the hill in high gear was also accomplished successfully."

And the New York World dryly announced that the automobile editors of New York had been "taken for a ride." It said "The Oaklands, each loaded with five passengers, from practically a standing start at the foot of the exceptionally tough Fort George Hill grade, continuously gathered speed until 40 miles an hour was registered near the top. Motorists familiar with this hill will appreciate the brilliance of this performance. A further demonstration then was given on the steep grade which meanders from Broadway for one block up 193d street, then right one block on Broadway terrace, then a particularly stiff ascent left up Wadsworth terrace for two blocks and a sharp right turn up Wadsworth avenue to the top of Fort George hill. The cars were slowed at some of these narrow turns to show the instant pick-up on the grades while others were negotiated at fair speed to show the cars' fine roadability."

The New York Telegram points out that the Oaklands, "from virtually a standing start, sped in high gear up the quarter-mile grade, considered the most severe test within the city limits."

The Bronx Home News asserted that the driver "negotiated curves on steep hills at high speed, permitted the car to slow down and then 'gave it the gas' while still on the incline to demonstrate the 'pickup' power of the new Oakland which is said to be the speediest and sturdiest line ever introduced by the factory."

ATLANTA MERCHANTS ISSUE THRIFT BOOK

Working in co-operation with a number of Atlanta merchants and institutions, the Atlanta Advertising Company has issued a thrift book entitling the holders to substantial reductions on purchases of every-day requirements from establishments participating in the plan.

The thrift books contain coupons which are equivalent to cash when used in exchange for certain merchandise or service dispensed by 18 well-known business houses of Atlanta. The plan has been tried successfully in a number of other cities, it is said, and people were quick to take advantage of the opportunity.

Among the articles procurable through use of the book are: Theater tickets, toilet goods, household remedies, stationery, soda fountain drinks, sandwiches, bakery products, meals, hosiery, beauty parlor service, photographs, automobile tires and tubes, parking privilege, and motor oil.

Establishments participating in the plan include: Fox theater, Jacobs' pharmacies, Dutch Oven bakeries, Biltmore coffee shop, Peacock Alley, Subway restaurant, Reeves cafeteria, Mystyle Hosiery shoppe, Leonard & Company, Rudolph Walker, Maison Adolphe, Gallaher, Broadnax, Cottongim's Tire & Supply Company, Ivy street garage, and Chain Oil Company.

C. W. Green Named Southern Manager

The International Business Machines Corporation announces the appointment of C. W. Green to the position of southern district manager of the Dayton scale division of the company. The district is comprised of zones centered around Dayton, Ohio, Greensboro, N. C., Atlanta, Ga., and Houston, Texas. Mr. Green has been identified with the Dayton scale division of the International Business Machines Corporation since 1920.

Three Advertising Firms Consolidate

Announcement has been made of the consolidation of the three advertising agencies of Moser & Cotins, Utica, N. Y.; Picard, Bradner & Brown, Inc., and the Lyon Advertising Agency, Inc., of New York city. The new corporation will be known as "Moser & Cotins, Brown & Lyon, Inc." The officers will be Theodore E. Moser, president; Arthur S. Cottins, vice president and treasurer; Lee D. Brown, vice president; James B. Lyon, vice president and secretary.

The two New York agencies are combined in the offices in the Graybar building to form a completely equipped New York agency and are under the management of Messrs. Brown and Lyon. The present agency of Moser & Cotins will be continued under Messrs. Moser & Cotins, in Utica, N. Y., in the three-story building the agency owns at 10 Hopper street.

The new corporation maintains the combined personnel of about 40 experienced persons.

European Car Builder Follows Franklin's Lead

The introduction in Germany of the new Maybach 12-cylinder car, powered by the same type of engine as those used in the Graf Zeppelin, finds that noted European automobile manufacturer following the lead set by the Franklin Automobile Company of Syracuse, the first car builder to employ an engine of aircraft type in motor cars.

The fact that the Maybach company has virtually taken its new motor from the skies is seen in European motor circles as a significant move and is being watched with unusual interest by other leading car builders.

This action on the part of the German motor car company is comparable to the striking move made by Franklin. The presentation of the 1930 Franklin car featuring its 95-horsepower air-cooled airplane engine early in January, created a sensation in American automobile circles and immediately struck the fancy of the motoring public.

But Franklin was in a strategical position to accomplish such a marked advance since it had always employed air-cooling, a feature which dominates the entire aviation industry. The introduction of the new Franklin engine was closely studied by aviation engineers and because of various new engineering features, many airplane experts declared it as prophetic of future engine development in the aviation field.

Among the aviation engine features in the air-cooled Franklin power plant are side-blast air cooling, aluminum cylinder heads, cylinders with integral cast fins, overhead aviation type valves, unusually high compression, steel backed bearings and numerous other design details.

The road performance of the airplane powered Franklin likewise has set a new high standard for smoothness and comfort in addition to its sustained speed and power development.

Council Is Sought By Presbyterians On Home Missions

Creation of "a permanent home mission council that shall work in conjunction with the executive committee of home missions and that when sitting together shall be known as the Joint Home Mission Body" will be recommended at the general assembly of the Presbyterian church, U. S., when it meets at Charlottesville, Va., on May 22, it was announced here Saturday.

The recommendation will be made by the ad interim committee appointed by the church at its last assembly meeting, to investigate the organization, correlation and policy for home mission and country church work.

The committee will also recommend that the country church work be discontinued as a separate department, and be made a part of the work of the executive committee of home missions.

Other recommendations will be: That the home mission council be elected annually by the synods; that the council shall consist of one representative for each synod; that vacancies in the executive committee of home missions shall be filled by election from the council; the recognition of three divisions of home missions, namely presbyteries, synods and assemblies; joint meetings of the council and home missions committees in synods and presbyteries and annual consideration of budgets and finances in presbyteries by the joint home missions body composed of the executive committee and council.

Presbyterian Body Meets Here Tuesday

The committee on the assembly's work of the Presbyterian church in the United States, composed of 44 leaders from the 17 southern and southwestern states in which that church operates, will meet in this city in semi-annual session beginning at 8 o'clock Tuesday night.

The Rev. Ernest Thompson, D. D., of Charleston, W. Va., is chairman; Willis M. Everett, of Atlanta, vice chairman; John W. Friend, Petersburg, Va., secretary, and Az S. Johnstone, Richmond, Va., treasurer of the committee. This body, popularly known as the "44" is made up of 33 men and 11 women and came into existence by action of the assembly, the highest church court of the Presbyterian church for the purpose of stimulating co-operation among the agencies of the church, plan advanced work and promote aggressive and economical administration of the church's affairs.

The meeting here Tuesday will review the work of foreign missions, home missions, education, relief, stewardship, women's work, men's work and make out a report to be submitted for each of these agencies at the meeting of the general assembly of the church to be held at Charlottesville, Va., May 22. The executive and promotional secretaries expected to attend the meeting include Dr. Egbert W. Smith, Nashville, Tenn.; Drs. Homer MacMillan and S. L. Morris, Atlanta; Dr. H. H. Sweets, Louisville, Ky.; R. E. Magill and Dr. J. L. Fairly, Richmond, Va.; Dr. R. C. Long and J. E. Purcell, Atlanta; Miss Janie McGaughey, St. Louis, Mo., and Dr. H. W. McLaughlin, Richmond, Va.

Sessions will be held at the Henry Grady hotel and will continue through Thursday.

$25 Is Offered By Placement Office for Name

Twenty-five dollars for a name.

The organization founded by Cator Woolford in 1924 and which has been increasingly filling the gap between college and business in Georgia wants the name. And they will pay the person, man, woman or child, who suggests the one the judges pick $25.

"We need a name. We must have a name and one that typifies the work we're doing," explains the organization, which now is known as the Georgia College Placement Service. Offices are in the Mortgage Guarantee building.

This organization finds college men and women for employers and it finds employers for college men and women. It supplies information to students about loan funds and self-help opportunities and about the colleges over the country.

Miss Mary Wylie Jones, secretary in charge of the division of information on colleges, is now on a tour of New England and northern states.

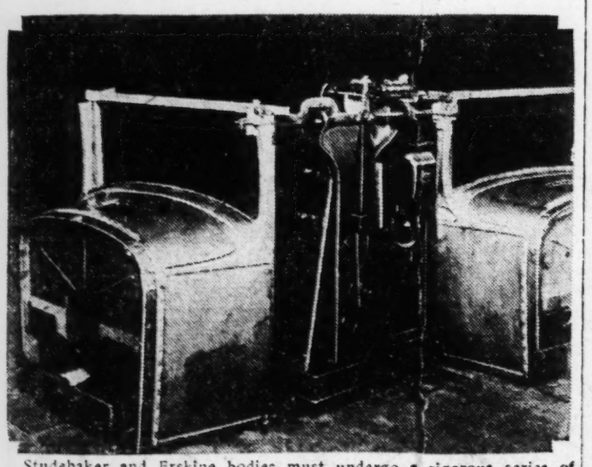

The contest closes May 8. Judges will be Francis W. Clarke, of The Constitution; Dr. J. R. McCain, president of Agnes Scott college; James B. Nevin, of The Georgian; John Paschall, of The Journal, and R. J. Thiesen, president of the Georgia College Placement Service.

Twenty-five dollars for a name—before May 8.

Baby Health Centers For Week Announced

Baby health centers for this week, as announced Saturday by Dr. J. P. Kennedy, city health officer, will be held at Adair school, Tuesday, May 6; John Barclay Nursery, Wednesday, May 7; Forrest Avenue school, Thursday, May 8, and J. L. Key school, Friday, May 9. Centers open at 1:30 and mothers are invited to bring children up to four years of age.

Endurance Test of Studebaker

Studebaker and Erskine bodies must undergo a rigorous series of tests of construction and durability before they are approved by engineers. The above, although quite prosaic in appearance, proves the stamina of what engineers call the cowl assembly. The cowl is securely bolted to the floor with the top of the pillar affixed to a movable arm of the machine. This arm oscillates forward, backward and sideways hundreds of thousands of times before a fracture will occur in the metal.

First Showing of the new Willys Eight

De Luxe Sedan (illustrated), $1395

IN the new Willys Eight, 120-inch wheelbase, Willys-Overland brings to the motoring public a car which combines external beauty, interior roominess and luxury new to its price class, with advanced eight-cylinder performance capabilities. The new Willys Eight is presented only after long months of painstaking experiments and exhaustive tests, and represents the finest result of the most advanced artistic and engineering thought. These tests have proved Willys superiority over other eights in speed, pick-up, hill climbing and gas economy. See the new Willys Eight, and arrange for a demonstration.

AS TO EXECUTIVE POWER.

Senator George does well to call to public attention the great and progressive growth of executive power in our government. Commissions and boards are extending and expanding presidential power and prerogatives undoubtedly until President Hoover is now charged, even within a year, of having largely turned the administration into a "commission form of government."

Although Senator George decries the process of locating government power in commissions under presidential supervision, he is timely and earnest in making the exposition before the North Carolina Bar Association and the public.

But the senator and all informed persons know that the president cannot create functional commissons, endowed with actual powers of regulation and administration, without the "aid and consent" of the congress. He can only provide himself with advisory commissions, with no substantive authority, and with no right to billet them permanently upon the administrative establishment and the public funds.

It is congress that is responsible for the amplifying of presidential powers beyond the purview of the constitution and the thoughts of the framers of it. It would be illuminating, perhaps, to many congressmen to read what Calhoun and Buchanan said upon the subject in the senate debate on the veto power back in 1842.

The plain remedy for over-expansion of executive power is clearly in the hands of congress and for whatever evils may come from such overgrown power congress must be justly chargeable.

TIGHTENING THE BONDS.

The past week again saw the peoples of North and South America brought closer together, so far as physical bonds are concerned, when letters mailed in New York were started on a journey of only seven days to Buenos Aires.

Atlantans should be especially interested in this flight, on one leg of which Colonel Lindbergh piloted the mail plane, as this city is the most important stop on this great international mail route. Mail not only from Atlanta but from the west and middle west will be taken on here and then proceed on its distance eliminating flight.

This shortening to a week of a journey which once took months, can but result in a tightening of the commercial and industrial bonds between South America and North America. Indeed the businessmen of the United States are already hailing the new service as the beginning of an era of new relations between the peoples of the two continents.

No city is in a position to profit so much by these new bonds as is Atlanta. Already the great distributing center of the southeast, the fact that it is the air center through which mails from every other section of the country must go in order to travel on to the fertile commercial field offered by South America, will bring her to a place of undisputed importance in the developing of closer business relations with our fellow Americans to the south of us.

There can be no reasonable doubt that the great bulk of South American business which has heretofore been going to European ports which were, so far as the time limit is concerned, practically as accessible as our north Atlantic ports, will gradually be transferred to the United States as this one-week service between the two great American continents is perfected.

The new air route presents an opportunity which our manufacturers and industrialists are not going to be slow to grasp and Atlanta as the airways crossroads of the south is going to profit thereby in ever increasing and diverse ways. It has been predicted by officials of the department of commerce at Washington that the great American cities of the future will be those which become the centers of air travel, commercial as well as passenger, and Atlanta's peculiar situation as the crossroads through which the air lines from every section of the country must converge for the shortest and safest route to South America, makes it a practical certainty that this city will be one of those key cities which will dominate the commerce of the future.

A striking example of the practical use to which the airplane can be put in the building up and sustaining of business relations was contained in a recent interview with Russell L. Putnam, vice president of A. W. Shaw & Company, and one of Chicago's most successful businessmen. Mr. Russell traveled nearly 60,000 miles in 1929 on business trips and in talking of his experience with the airplane as a business attribute said:

"The fundamental value to us was in making twice the number of personal contacts we would have been able to make by the ordinary methods of travel. Then, too, the quiet and shelter of a plane's cabin make it an ideal place to think and plan. I believe it is going to be the usual thing in the future for planes to have desks as part of their equipment.

"A great deal of spontaneous publicity inevitably will come as a result of the use of a plane for business purposes, but that will be 'velvet.'"

Commenting along the same line William G. McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, who has his own plane and flies frequently between his Los Angeles and Washington offices, declared:

"It is an ideal way to travel. Clean, away from crowds, and with plenty of time to think. More businessmen will take it up as soon as they realize its advantages."

With this growth in the use of the air by business men; with Atlanta so situated as to make it the only logical point for the south's air center, and with the growth of business between North and South America as a result of the reduction in time in communications between the two continents, no man of foresight can deny the tremendous importance to the city of the perfected air travel of the future.

IS THE PANIC ENDED?

President Hoover has told the United States Chamber of Commerce and the people at large over a nation-wide radio broadcast that the business "depression," which is the polite republican name for his "silent panic" emanating from Wall Street, is "about over." It is much to be hoped that he knows what he was talking about.

But it must remain doubtful a while whether the slowed-down manufacturers of the country who listened in to his address tuned out for time to smile and dance. And the storekeepers of the nation, who have had to shrink their orders and clamp down their stock inventories, sent up three cheers over what he told them. Also, it is questionable whether the several millions of idle workers over the land lit bonfires of jubilation after listening to the loud-speakers booming out the sonorous paragraphs of his optimistic oration.

The true facts of the situation seems to be that "big money" for loans is plenty and comparatively cheap, but credit, collaterals and small spending money in the hands of the people at large are scarce and hardly cometable. President Hoover needs to speak more specifically to the great mass of those who have to buy and consume rather than to the far fewer men who make and distribute current goods.

Every one will be glad to have better evidence that the panic is over than a mere speech by the president. He must always be heard respectfully, but the old adage still holds good with the people that "the proof of the pudding is in chewing the bag!"

THIS IS MUSIC WEEK.

Following the curtailed season of grand opera just over the present week invites the lovers of music to co-operate with all musical organizations in promoting taste for and the culture of the superior forms of music.

Whoever first essayed to translate the harmonious sounds of nature into an art contributed immensely to the mental and emotional nature of man. In his cave era he was doubtless a guttural, raucous ballyhooer, or if indeed he was evoluted from a monkey forebear he was as much of a chatterer as a new-fledged politician.

It was only when sounds were drilled to become co-ordinated and confluent that the voice was reinforced with wind and string and thumping instruments to swell the stream of harmony and fascinate the human ear and spirit.

Now music is one of the supreme and most intriguing of all the arts and exerts power of untold ramifications in the business of civilization. Ignoring the abortion of it in jazz and barbaric syncopation, it starts with the lullaby at the cradle and soars through all the levels of harmony through thrilling opera to the soul-lifting spiritual oratorios of the cathedral choir.

Atlanta holds an envirable record as a center of musical culture and radiation and her part in Music Week should be signalized with ardent efforts to promote the appreciation of the people in the high and the holy offices of music.

MAKES HIS RECORD RIGHT.

In another column we gladly print a protest from Dudley Field Malone, distinguished national and international lawyer. He repudiates an attitude toward the communists which The Constitution attributed to him in February when it found his name bracketed in public prints with those of other persons known to be sympathetic with communist propaganda.

The Constitution is sincerely pleased to learn directly from Mr. Malone that he has "never had any sympathy with the communist movement here or anywhere else." That comes straight and welcome from one bearing in part the name of David Dudley Field, one of the most celebrated lawyers, code-makers and patriots of the republic.

We can understand, of course, that Mr. Malone stands for "the right of petition, free speech and free assembly." We stand four-square for those unalienable and indefeasible rights also and can understand how Mr. Malone's stand for them was expanded into an assumed sympathy with the communist paraders and propagandists.

The Constitution has already stated its attitude toward such persons who are not assembled "to petition government for a redress of grivances," but to foment revolutionary movements against the government. We take it that Mr. Malone himself differentiates between assemblies peaceably petitioning for redress of a real grievance and those arguing for the forcible overthrow of the government extant. So we embrace him as a brother rather than an enemy.

A RELIGION MOST NEEDED.

The evangelical church organizations of the United States, most of them, are to hold their general conventions of whatever particular title in the present month. Some of the larger of the bodies promise to be made notable by discussions and actions that will affect sensibly their future relations to the religious and spiritual life of the people of the nation.

Quite properly the selected leaders and delegates of the ecclesiastical bodies must be let alone to find their own ways and determine their denominational policies. But intelligent and observant laymen, in daily contact with life as it is lived, are able to sense emotions and objectives in popular psychology more plainly than bishops, and moderators, and preachers who are engrossed with their professional programs.

One outstanding fact of the times present is a very obvious conviction by leaders in active life that the people need vitalizing, humanizing, spiritualizing religion more than in many generations past. From many high sources, business, educational, social, industrial and political, there are voiced pleas for that sort of religion that can be mixed in with and leaven with moral power the life that is now swirling around us.

The religion of Jesus was mostly for now and here than for after death and an envisioned heaven. He applied more of it to healing mental and bodily sicknesses than He did to teaching, and He taught how to live in this present life than He did to preaching about life elsewhere. And it is manifest that the religion which will convert men and women from evil ways to ways of mental, moral and physical clean living is the religion about which the church conventions may well be most intensitively concerned.

TRYING TO GET HIS GOAT.

The state board of medical examiners in Kansas has ordered a certain popular "goat gland" doctor to appear before it and tell why his license to practice medicine should not be revoked.

At this distance the summons looks like a rather high-handed effort to regulate the business of a noble benefactor of the human species — one particularly well placed in the dry commonwealth of Kansas where the goat first became accoladed as the symbol of the now departed populist party, sponsored by Patriarch Peffer and Sockless Jere Simpson, not to speak of Mary Ellen Lease. Out there the climate and scenery are not amicable to the propagation and delectation of the natural capriconus, so that the grafting of goat glands into arid Kansans seems a necessary operation to convert them into the national goats they have so long claimed to be.

Evidently this doctor who is haled before the state board has had a large practice among the farmers of the Sunflower state, for they claim that they are the most harried agricultural goats of the nation. Then there is genial Charles Curtis, whom the Kansas City convention made the goat to butt along the Hoover presidential campaign. Close behind him trail Senators Capper and Allen, who cavort for Kansas in the high arena of the congress, and Bill Allen White, whom Hoover made one of the chief goats of his Haitian commission.

With such distinguished examples of how a human is advantaged by being a goat the Kansas goat gland doctor should pass the ordeal of the state board of medical examiners unscathed and unscotched.

SAVING THE SMALL TOWNS.

One of the teaching revelations of the census reports so far is a very common decrease in the population of small towns in the country generally from the figures they supplied in 1920.

With respect to these southeastern states in particular the present reports do not fully support the common belief that, because of the unprofitableness of agriculture in the last five years, people have been abandoning the farms for the better opportunities and occupations in the towns. The persons who have deserted the farms have evidently drifted into the larger cities where industries are active.

What, then, is the obvious logic of the revelation? As we read the record it means that those who own the property and capital in the towns must employ their means in establishing and operating local industries that will catch and hold those who are drifting from the farms into the cities of opportunities.

There are a thousand small towns in the southeast where small and profitable industries, using local raw materials and locally obtainable labor, could be set up and maintained if only the local owners of money would back those of skill and character who are eager to engage in such enterprises. Unless they learn the wisdom and profit of so using their capital it will not be long before both they and their money will also have to move from the town to the city. The salvation of the small town is to supply the means and incentives to keep local capital and labor profitably employed at home.

LUCY COBB IS SAFE.

The whole intelligentsia of Georgia read with acute pleasure the report from the special election in Athens and Clarke county on Friday, which assures annual appropriations by those units to preserve historic "Lucy Cobb" female institute. Now it is to be made a standard junior college for young women and more efficiently than during its past 72 years prepare girls of the south for the high duties of womanhood.

The people of Athens and the county have responded finely to the statewide sentiment that "Lucy Cobb" should not disappear from the educational equipment of the state. They have thus accented their own culture and wisdom, and will have the praise of the people of the state and thousands all over the south for their resolution to preserve and extend the influence of their famous institution.

THE FREE SUGAR BOWL.

The republican party once made a highly successful national campaign with the everywhere heralded promise of a "full dinner pail." It had a winning appeal to that organ of the citizen where most of them live—the stomach.

Nobody can tell yet what the sugar tax in the new tariff bill is to be—whether 2 cents per pound or 2.4 cents per pound. But almost every householder in the nation is being made wise to the fact that if even the senate 2 cents rate is agreed upon, it will mean $10 a year added to the sugar bill of every average family in the nation.

In view of the widespread dissatisfaction with that prospect it would seem that the democratic party has the chance of its life to capitalize that increase, if finally imposed by a republican congress and president, and go to the country with the one roaring slogan of a "free sugar bowl!"

It is easily calculable that the government can dispense with the annual sugar tariff revenue. The domestic sugar protection in it serves but one beet or cane farmer by taxing 995 other farmers. The sugar tariff heavily stimulates tariff-free sugar from our insular possessions and holds down continental sugar production, and also depletes the power of our Cuban ally to trade profitably to us and to it with our people.

Democratic leaders will do well for both their party and the people by keeping the sugar issue in the forefront of their campaign plans for this year and the presidential contest in 1932.

Old Cap. Stayton, the anti-prohibition mogul, has poured a lot of hot water into the administration's gopher holes. The inmates are coming out hollering for the hose reel companies.

Everyone who wants "sugar in his'n" should now load his ballot-gun for the congressmen who have put that extra levy on his sugar bowl.

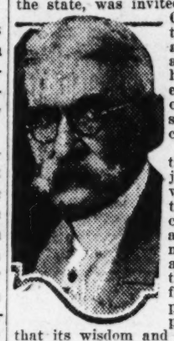

The London naval pact is going to have a football time of it in the senate.

Hoover says business is getting level again. Now, on the level, whereabouts?

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

A Brilliant Exposition of Southern Powers by a Great Georgia Jurist.

Lately Judge S. Price Gilbert, associate justice of the supreme court of the state, was invited to address the Cotton Manufacturers' Association of Georgia, and as might have been expected made a speech of learning and suggestive significance.

All who know the distinguished jurist understand with what intenseness and accuracy he studies any subject committed to him and in this case the address he offered has been put into printed pamphlet form that its wisdom and instruction may be given wider circulation than the spoken word.

Over and above his legal occupations as a judge he gives the attention of an alert and progressive minded citizen to what is affecting the political and economic conditions of the people.

* * * *

Money Madness of the Times.

As an exordium Judge Gilbert graphically sketched the character of the World War and the civic and economic conditions it produced while in action and after the armistice, particularly pointing the material wealth expanding effects upon the people of the United States. Through the agencies and exigencies of that war, while half the civilized world was being smashed by the engineries of battle and debacle, this country, enjoying physical immunity at home, and being the depot of supplies for the allies, the United States became the creditor nation of the world. Its people reveled in the rich development of their inexhaustible resources, made money as though each was a Midas, and the general wealth became enormous. A money madness seized the people and has not yet exhausted its influence upon their minds.

* * * *

Judge Gilbert does not hesitate to expose how that mad orgy of "getting rich quick" has changed in the mass mind the emphasis from morals to money. The idea that there are certain fundamentals of morality—religion, dependence upon God's providence, the sanctity of marriage, and the power of pure homes in the integrities of life—has been distinctly weakened in the recent decade.

This fine jurist cogently warns that such a general state of mind tends to weaken also the safeguards of business, of social life and of government itself. Already we have had evidences of restiveness and discontent with the long accepted fundamentals of government. There are cries going up for "change"—changes of the civic order such as wrecked the Hebrew commonwealth and the republics of Greece and Rome.

* * * *

Where the South Is Concerned.

It is the opinion of Judge Gilbert that, in spite of manifest sore spots in the general business situation, industrial and commercial American psychology is yet sound at heart and that the future of the public welfare can be made safe by the co-operative wisdom of those men in society who can rise above mere sordid avarice and see beyond the rim of a silver dollar.

"Ill fares the land, to hastening ills a prey
Where wealth accumulates and men decay!"

No greater truth outside of Holy Writ has been written than that for the guidance and warning of sane men. While Judge Gilbert does not quote it, the tenor of his address to the important cotton manufacturers of the state is clearly in the same verity of philosophy.

* * * *

The Warning Is Timely.

After citing the rapid and great increase of wealth in the south—now owning $81,000,000,000 of the $366,000,000,000 of the national wealth—Judge Gilbert envisions a yet more rapid increase to come, eventually and soon establishing a parity between our per capita holdings with that of people in other sections.

For whatever evils crop up in the course of our progress Judge Gilbert sees "increasingly the habit of our people to turn to the federal government for relief in such cases" and it is his reasoned and fixed judgment that "failure and complete collapse will come to any industry that supinely depends upon the federal government to make it profitable."

Those are the words of a wise American with the balanced appraisement of a statesman. He is everlastingly right in telling Georgia businessmen the salient truth.

* * * *

The Bulwark of Safe Economics.

From Jefferson down to Hoover (before he became president) the outstanding glory of America, her progress and power, has resided in the spirit of individualism. Judge Gilbert very truly says:

"The fundamental and paramount duty of government is to protect person and property. It is its supreme duty to do these things, and a part of that duty is not to oppress any class of people by an unjust burden of taxation. Outside of this it can do little.

"The glory of America has been achieved by individual enterprise, industry and genius. It must be maintained in the same way. It can be maintained in no other way."

The businessmen, financiers, the social uplifters and the men who have any color of statesmanship in the south need to understand that we must, to make our section safe, prosperous and powerful rely upon our own wisdom in effecting those reforms that appear necessary. Capital must be made safe, labor rights made secure and profitable, taxation made reasonable and equitable, and government confined to its constitutional functions.

* * * *

Here Conservation Should Rule.

Here in the south, with a nearly 100 per cent native population, unleavened by foreign inheritances and habits of body and thought, with a strong faith in the rightness of the American plan of government and the interaction of democratic principles, this section should continue to be the home of conservatism and happy social conditions.

Perhaps it rests more upon the business men of the south than upon our politicians to insist upon and establish the south as the reservoir of sound Americanism from which other sections may draw inspiration and examples. To that goal Judge Gilbert points the certain way.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES

Doing and Dreaming

There is nothing which the average man resents so quickly as being called "impractical." There is so much work to be done in the world that the call is always for a practical man. This constant demand for the practical man means that he is an experienced man. That means that he does things which have been done before. He does not venture outside this realm of experience into the uncertain and the unknown. He is the man one calls for to repair a machine, or to run a machine, which has already been invented. He is the man who can show you the road, because he has been over it himself before, though he followed in the footsteps of another.

* * * *

The Practical World.

This practical man repeats the creeds which others have written, and believes only that which he considers as proven. Since so much of life consists in copying what others have made, and living in what others have builded, saying what others have said, and believing what others have proven, the practical man is very useful.

Let us understand, however, that the practical man lives within a "finished" world. Life is limited by the experience of mankind. He inherits his tools, and also his models. He can repair and repeat, but can not create. He is considered a dependable workman, a sane thinker, and a safe leader.

In its last analysis this gospel of the practical means an acceptance of "things as they are." It is a denial that there is a better or a best. It would build an adamantine wall around us, and compel us to move forever within its narrow and unending circle. It would stop every wheel of progress, paralyze the inventor, imprison the discoverer, and silence every question which has not already received an answer. It is the attitude which bids us "let well enough alone." It tells us that ancient evils have always been, and always will be. It advises human nature to "lie down on the job." What a dull and dead world this would be, governed by the practical mind. There would be no expectancy, no surprise, and no splendid adventure. It would be a safe world where men, in their very effort to save themselves, would lose their personalities.

A Dream World.

Antitheses are, like rhymes, quite dangerous to truth. We do not want to displace the practical man with an impractical man; i.e., to substitute for the man who "does things," one who can not do things. It is the type of mind we are looking for, rather than technical skill. We need men who are dissatisfied with things as they are, because they see things that are better. Yes, those who see something which does not exist, but who dare believe their visions can be translated into form. Certainly we do not want people ignorant, or careless, of the experience of the past, but those, who standing upon the vantage ground of the accumulated experience of others, can see further than the generations which have gone.

Is not the very genius of the Christian religion a dissatisfaction with "things as they are," which is born of the vision of a better world which can be? It sees a "new earth," but it is the old earth whose possibilities are revealed in the light of a new Heaven. This is not an unreasonable faith. It is based upon the experience of the past, where nothing was fixed and finished. Each epoch of history has been a new act in a drama, and the story of the plot has been the unfolding of new possibilities in nature, and human nature. But to pursue our figure, we are not merely auditors, to merely watch the inevitable unfolding of a drama. Each of us has a part to play, but unlike the written dramas of the stage, we may determine what the next act shall be. Tomorrow shall be the fulfillment of the dream of today. So not those who merely "do," point the pathway of civilization, but those who dream and then dare to make their dreams come true.

NEW YORKSKYLINES

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance.)

NEW YORK, May 3—If and when John Masefield is appointed poet laureate of England, as is rumored now, he will be the first man in that position to have come out of a Greenwich Village saloon. No one even from a Greenville Village attic has ever made the grade, let alone a saloon.

But it isn't true, no matter how often repeated, that the gentle, sweet-spirited and poetically rapturous Masefield was a bartender in Luke O'Connor's place.

"I never reached those heights," says the poet. "What I did was to wash out cuspidors, sweep and scrub the floor and put chairs on top of tables. Also I polished glasses and footrails."

Plenty of oldtimers in the village—which has changed both for better and for worse—remember Masefield. So do plenty of war service men remember him, for he spoke in American camps after seeing action in the Gallipoli campaign. Some of these American lads thought him a sissy because they were not used to the gracious speech of an Englishman and poet and it seemed affected. Had they known of his saloon experience and his thrilling sea voyages they might have respected him more.

The Terrible, Precious Elevated.

The present controversy over the Sixth Avenue elevated line shows strikingly what a fix this city is in as regards human transportation. For years the Sixth Avenue merchants and real estate people have been saying that the elevated structure must come down and all New Yorkers able to think at all have agreed that it was unsightly and a detriment to the thoroughfare.

Meanwhile rapid transit congestion has grown so much worse that now many have changed their minds. They say the city can't afford to let that elevated line go. Its present passengers would glut the nearest subways, already saturated at times so that the platforms must be closed against any more patrons.

Twice daily now, hundreds of thousands of people ride two, five and even 10 miles in a state of discomfort that approaches misery. They can scarcely turn, think or breathe, and reading is difficult for most. They can only wait.

Why don't they move? The answer is that they are so trapped in an economic system that the present way of life is the lesser of two evils. But the question does raise another: If the city's population keeps on growing even under extremely unsatisfactory living conditions how much would it grow if life were easier, more comfortable and more natural?

Sixth Avenue Bazars.

With the elevated gone, Sixth avenue certainly would flourish, because through the best of its length it runs between Fifth Avenue and Broadway and is geographically Manhattan's main artery. On the other hand the changes would spoil what is now a most fascinating street for anybody interested in odd and curious shops.

A shopper with taste can pick up charming bargains, and one with bad taste or none can go wrong to an extent that is tragic. "Any article in this window one dollar," is a characteristic shop sign. Well, none of the trinkets and peculiar bits of jewelry may have more market value than that and yet a few of them are almost exquisite and the rest are atrocious.

On a stroll up Sixth avenue the window shopper passes a kimona display, ivory elephants, Egyptian panels designated as replicas of ancient walls in Egypt, Japanese coolie coats, hand-painted pajamas at $3.94, the homeliest cuff links in existence, French prints and novels, a cleaning concern established in 1819, and colored pictures of American farmhouses in the spring.

Youth Picks Own Authority.

Elsewhere American life may be standardized, as the critics say. In Gotham the lack of standards makes a problem where instruction of children is concerned. Boys and girls come home from school with tales that reveal a startling divergence in beliefs and customs under their various roofs so that parents have to get together and agree on a few fundamentals; lest the offspring consider them entirely ignorant about birth, life, death and what follows.

Partly because of such differences at home the young people coming from immigrant homes look less to their parents as the authority than they do to the community, the teacher, or some organization or individual admired and trusted. Mrs. Felix M. Warburg, now heading the women's division in the allied Jewish campaign, learned this, she says, in her work for the Young Women's Hebrew Association.

No young girls in this city live more intensely and with a finer idealism than those from Jewish homes, but between the stern tenets of an old faith and the current literature of revolt in morals they sometimes find themselves confused.

Mrs. Warburg, just back from Jewagency council meetings that she attended in London with her husband, banker and philanthropist, is the daughter of the late Jacob H. Schiff, in whose memory she has given a $500,000 visiting nurses' fund. The Warburg benefactions range from $100,000 for a Jewish history and religion department in a university at Jerusalem to the provision of four stringed instruments of Stradivari for a quartet playing here.

Summer Jobs Are Open.

The charity organizations say that plenty of men and women are still complaining that they can't find work and yet no one would guess it from the myriad slips of paper hanging in the doorways of employment bureaus. Each slip offers one job or more and as May begins these offers give the annual evidence of summer homes and summer activity near mountain or sea.

Here are a few offers: Page boy, no experience, club, $50 and meals; steward, $1,000 a season of 14 weeks, German-Hungarian; gardener at small hotel, $60 a month; sanitarium attendant, room and board, $60 a month; Jewish cook, $80; coffee pot waitress, $8; nursery governess for two children, $65; chef, good on sea food, $150; cup cake cook, $150; cigaret girl, $20 a week; Chinese chef, $160 a month; sponge cake baker, $50 a week; part time girl, $10.60 a week; milker, $60.

A young dish washer is offered a "chance to learn soda dispensing," and he gets $20 besides. A Polish couple is offered $150 a month and three rooms, to stay on a farm. A doorman, middle age, is offered $70 a month to open apartment house doors for men probably more able-bodied than he is.

Mrs. Draper Tackles a Boathouse.

Mrs. George Draper is consultant on decoration of the new River Club, a decidedly classy outfit, and that means that the club quarters, in a 26-story co-operative apartment house, are sure to be "different."

A few years ago Mrs. Draper was so successful in pleasing people when she rearranged their houses for them that she established an architectural clearing house for the advice of persons wishing to develop roof gardens, build dwellings and remodel apartments. She learned what they wanted and put them in touch with the firms and men specializing in the things of their desire. She has a collection of photographs and plates to aid them in deciding.

She designed her own roof garden, a place of tiles, iron gates, fountains, brick arches and appropriate plants. The new River Club is modeled after certain clubs in London and is said to have invested $1,000,000 in the apartment house, which will have indoor tennis courts, squash racquet courts, gymnasium and pool, a landing for yachts and motor boats and perhaps a mooring pier.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON.

Wars of the first magnitude and revolutions of equal significance appear to be linked by a mystic affinity even where no direct tie is to be found. The American and French revolutions preceded the Napoleonic wars, and the revolutionary movements of 1830, whose repercussions were felt all over Europe and which resulted in overturning the government in France and establishing the independence of Belgium, followed soon after.

Thus along with the Great War of our own time there runs a revolutionary current, perhaps more rapid than that of a century ago but with some interesting resemblances. Nineteen hundred and eleven saw the downfall of the Manchu empire in China and the relegation of the British house of lords to a position of comparative impotence. Growing directly out of the war were the revolutionary movements which established new governments in Germany, Austria, Hungary and Turkey. Perhaps the Russian revolution should be included with these, as it actually took place while the war was in progress. But its roots run so far back and its developments have been so significant that the war in this case probably was more an occasion than a cause. Russia is in revolt against the rest of the world.

China continues her efforts to find herself through a series of revolts and threatened revolts, without quite knowing what she is revolting for, nor what she is revolting against. Revolt in Italy was so clear cut and so determined and so successful that we have almost ceased to think of the fascist movement as a revolt.

Mexico, on this side of the world, has also suffered a major revolution which bracketed the war period without being directly related to the greater conflict. Now India has gathered up long-standing forces of resentment into a movement which threatens a severe test to British statesmanship.

There is a fascination in all revolutions, but certainly Russia's is one of the most interesting of a large assortment. The downfall of the czar and the system he represented was due to a real national uprising. But the bolsheviks had no national mandate. They were the most cohesive body in Russia, and in the political vacuum which followed the fall of the czar they seized the power of government and have ever since held it with an unbreakable grip.

Highly organized, rigidly disciplined, logical to the point of absurdity, ruthlessly opposed to all things established and frenetic in their zeal to put their theories into practice, they have forced the Russian bear to perform tricks which must have made him at times long for the old master who was content if he "walked like a man."

The soviet rulers first reduced commerce and industry to state functions, demonstrating in practice both the advantages and the faults which had been ascribed to such socialist schemes by their advocates and their critics. The lesser faults the communists were willing to carry and deal with in good time. But there was one major shortcoming which threatened the very existence of socialized industry and commerce. That was the overwhelming power of peasant opposition.

The bolsheviks have set out to overcome this in typical fashion. They have determined to socialize the peasants—85 per cent of the population. They have decreed that agriculture also shall become a state function. The small holdings of the peasants are to be thrown together in huge state farms. These are to be worked on an industrial scale, the government furnishing the machinery and the management, while the peasants become day laborers after the manner of the factory workers.

Here is an experiment which the world watches with the keenest interest. Reports of its success so far are conflicting. It was officially stated early in March that 55 per cent of Russia's cultivated lands had been brought under the new system. Revised figures later in the month reduced this to 35 per cent. In either case the rate of collectivization was too great for the human factor involved, and Stalin was forced to curb his overzealous subordinates. Whatever the ultimate result may be, there are real ideas being worked out in the Russian revolution which, through success or failure, will add to man's knowledge of his eternal economic problem.

The Chinese revolution is not so promising. So far there has been practically no constructive experimentation in the economic field. Even in the political field the experiments are not of great importance.

The scheme of government under which the Nanking regime theoretically functions adds to the customary legislative, executive and judicial branches two others, both of which have their roots in Chinese history. An examination branch is supposed to train and select administrative officers. This is our civil service bureau raised to a position co-ordinate with the president, congress and the supreme court. The other branch of the government is the control, whose function is to criticize and corelate the policies of the government. The emperors of China used to have censors with similar functions. Sometimes one of them would venture to utter real criticism, and decided that it was the part of discretion to commit suicide immediately afterward. It remains to be seen whether such an organ of criticism can do otherwise in a modern world, or whether this task is not best performed by a free press.

Beyond these somewhat unpromising contributions, the Chinese revolution has not yet lifted itself far above the welter of sectional, provincial, local and personal efforts to secure immediate advantages from the existing situation. Russia at least is going somewhere. China is only holding its own—and that somewhat precariously.

And what of India? Will the Indians accept the Italian, the Russian or the Chinese model for their revolution?

It must be admitted that there would be more hope for concrete results if India had a political group organized and disciplined after the manner of the fascists or the bolsheviks. Thus far no such group has appeared. Gandhi has captured the imagination of many Indians—as he has of many Americans. As a prophet of revolt the mahatma is magnificent. As a symbol of revolt he is phenomenal. But as an organizer of social control his qualities appear to be wholly negative.

And nowhere are such qualities more needed than in India. Despite the aspirations of the nationalists, India is a geographical but not a national entity. Its people are divided by tribal loyalties, by racial and language barriers and by religious hostilities. Even the Hindus are disunited by caste antipathies. The politicians who purport to speak for "India" are self-elected and could not define their constituencies. By a gentle irony of political fate they have been constrained to adopt English as an official language, that being the only tongue which is generally understood.

As in the matter of language, so in the realm of government the British raj is the sole unifying force in India. If the demand for independence should be granted there is no man, no party and no organization which could enforce the slightest measure of control over what is now British India. Native states ruled by the Indian princes are untouched by the nationalist movement. Once the restraining hand of Britain was withdrawn there would be nothing to deter the native princes, most of them the sons of conquering warriors, from adopting the ancestral career of war and conquest. What is now British India—or most of it—would lie helpless before them.

If Gandhi and his followers should be successful in their campaign for independence and the British are driven out of the peninsula, there is little to inspire the hope that an Indian revolution could benefit humanity after the manner of Italy and Russia by performing radical experiments for others to watch, analyze and follow or avoid, as the results might warrant. There is even lacking in India the solid stability of the fairly uniform Chinese mass which enables China to hold its own in the throes of revolution. All questions of imperialism and economic interests aside, British statesmanship faces in India a most intricate and delicate problem.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE FRIEND OF POE.

The Life of Thomas Holly Chivers. With selections from his poems. A strange chapter in American history. By S. Foster Damon. The subject of this sketch was called the "Lost Poet of Georgia," and the "Wild Mazeppa of Letters." Edgar Allan Poe was a friend to the Georgia poet, and even Swinburne and Rosetti were known to read and make some comments on the work of Chivers. The writer of the introduction says that Dr. Thomas Chivers, of Georgia, wrote both like a "madman and a fool"—"he straddled the famous fence between the sublime and the ridiculous, and quite as often fell on the one side as on the other. He made up his words and all his poetic lore was self-got."

This is a most interesting volume and should be studied by the teachers and students of the south—the contents may be a surprise to some southern readers, but Dr. Lucian Knight, of Atlanta, Ga., in his "Georgia Landmarks, Memorials and Legends," 1914, vol. II, writes of Dr. Chivers and his work. The grandfather of the subject of this biography emigrated to Georgia from Virginia in the eighteenth century; his son, Colonel Robert Chivers, who married a Miss Digby and built "Digby Manor," started a cotton farm a few miles south of Washington, Wilkes county, Georgia. Perhaps very few Georgians know that Wilkes county was the first place in the state where cotton was cultivated. It was here in this home that Thomas Holley Chivers was born in October, 1809, just nine months later than Poe, whose name was so often linked with his. For information will say here that this was a famous year for it was the year of the birth of Lincoln, Tennyson, Darwin, Gladstone, Chopin, Menedlssohn, and other men and women whose contributions are being passed on from one generation to another.

This is a most interesting volume in which is seen a new Poe, a story revealing curious aspects of the man's genius, and more than that, it is a resurrection of the life of "The Lost Poet of Georgia," which had shone for a while with meteoric splendor and then sank into oblivion.

Foster Damon, himself a distinguished poet, has resurrected this strange and brilliant figure in the world of letters. The volume is full of unpublished material about Chivers and Poe which will be of interest to literary-dom. (Harper and Brothers, New York.)

PRINTS IN COLONIAL DAYS.

Early American Prints. By Carl W. Dreppard. The book is filled with a number of beautiful illustrations from which is said "All that America to the art of engraving, from early Colonial times to the Civil War, is accurately and beautifully mirrored in this volume."

There has been an increase in interest and growth in early American prints and print-makers have impressed the public with the need of a handbook adaptable to everyday needs for librarians, collectors, dealers and the general reader.

Mr. Dreppard tells the story of American art from Colonial days to the Civil War days, and there is a wealth of pictures, illustrations reproducing these famous subjects of the American Engravers' art.

Carl W. Dreppard is a native of Lancaster county, Pennsylvania, a locality famous for its quaint Ephrata community with its old world art and literature, and as the home of such celebrities as "Baron" Stiegel—the maker of Stiegel glass—Thomas Paine, William Henry and Robert Fulton.

Mr. Dreppard has long been an indefatigable student of early Americana. Beginning with architecture, his tastes led him to early American furniture and then to the various phases of the graphic arts. His collection of early American prints is among the finest in the country, although he collects as a hobby rather than as a business. He is vice president of the Hamilton-Sangamo corporation. (The Century Co., New York).

BRAZIL.

Brazil and Her People of Today. By Nevin O. Winter. This handsome volume is another to add to the series, "See America First., published by L. C. Page & Co. The author in his usual interesting style gives an account of the customs, characteristics, amusements of the Brazilians, and the development and resources of their country. This is a revised edition. The illustrations are from original photographs. The first picture is entitled "When Herbert Hoover Visited the Supreme Court in Brazil." The author says in the preface that since the visit of President Hoover around South America the belief is that this country, instead of Europe, will be the chief center of American activity.

Brazil is not so far away from the shores of the U. S. A. In this wonderful country today there is to be found a kindly spirit, a fellow feeling of friendship and interest between the Brazilians, Europeans and Americans when they meet in Brazil or the Argentine. "Rolling Down to Rio" is a delightful sensation, and the international good-will is abroad in the world.

"Go rolling down to Rio
Roll down, roll down to Rio.
I'd like to roll down to Rio,
Some day before I'm old."

INDIVIDUALITY AND CLOTHES.

The Book of Personal Attire. By Margaret Story. The "it" in dress is called "chic" by the Frenchwoman and the American woman calls it "good taste." But no matter why it is, or whatever it is, there is no woman but who longs for that individual style in dress which causes men and women to give her the second glance whether on the street or in the drawing room.

In the past few years perhaps there has been a greater demand for the study of individuality in dress—men and women both are more interested in styles, personal appearance, the blending of colors, etc., and this volume will be found quite satisfactory as an able assistance along this line. It tells the story that is needed by every woman who is interested in her personal appearance. These everyday, commonsense lectures are written by a woman who has made a study of all interesting and valuable material on this subject because she is an acknowledged authority on dress. Her engagements to talk to woman clubs, and as a speaker over the radio are well known. The illustrations are for both men and women and will be very helpful in making selections in styles. Two colored charts. (Funk & Wagnalls, New York, $3.50.)

ANTHOLOGY OF SOUTHERN HUMOR.

Tall Tales of the Southwest. 1830-1860. Editor by Franklin J. Meine. This volume contains nearly 500 pages. It is a collection of humorous stories and sketches from newspapers and pamphlets of the frontier days. The readers will thoroughly enjoy these selections of a people who were leaders in happiness and pleasure in the days of long ago—a time that covered three decades before the Civil War. As the publishers write "This literature was wrought out of the experience of a new nation, and it has lost, after nearly a half century, none of its freshness." (Alfred A. Knopf, publisher, New York.)

THE CRUISE OF THE MARY PINCHOT.

To the South Seas. The cruise of the schooner, Mary Pinchot, to the Galapagos, The Marquesas and the Tuamotu islands and Tahita. By Gifford Pinchot. This is a handsome book with covers of blue and gold. There are nearly 500 pages with maps and 250 reproductions of photographs takes on the cruise, also wood engravings. Governor Pinchot dedicates the volume "To George W. Woodruff, friend and comrade, in work and play, for 40 years."

Richard J. Beamish in his review of Governor Pinchot's story of the South Seas, calls it "A whale of a book . . . . it made magic for five hours of straight reading for me." Commenting further on the work he writes "A dream that lasted 40 years—a dream of Eden's unspoiled gardens where birds and beasts were as brethren to man—a dream of living so close to nature that you might count its heart beats and know the peace that was upon the earth before man, the killer, made havoc."

It was the dream of the governor of Pennsylvania to some day make this trip on a seaworthy boat that would be big enough to take three Pinchots, three scientific men, a physician and a young school friend of Giff's. By the way, it was not an all-pleasure voyage, for to this was planned a scientific expedition. It was undertaken in co-operation with the United States National Museum in Washington, in the party being several noted naturalists of the Academy of Natural Sciences, and for them it was a most successful trip for they collected 22 new species for the museum. The schooner was named for the governor's mother, Mary Pinchot, and his greatest hope was that the vessel would prove the kind of a ship that his mother was a woman.

It was a great day for the governor when he and Mrs. Pinchot, their son and his chum, who were called Giff and Stiff, and with the others put out to sea for his dream of 40 years had come true, the realization of which he more deeply appreciated when, after a glorious sail to a new country, he returned with new ideas, new experiences, as well as the never-to-be-forgotten memories, which will ever bring lasting pleasure to a successful trip in which each one played their part. (The John C. Winston Co., Philadelphia, $3.50.)

THE NEW GENERATION.

What's Right With America. By Sisley Huddeston. The author asks the following questions in introducing his new book: Is America the most European of nations? Is Russia becoming Americanized? Are American men and women equal? Does the American think only of material things? This new volume by a famous European journalist is a record of a tour in the United States with political, social, economic and literary comments and with 20 illustrations to make his remarks that much more impressive.

Mr. Huddleston, who had made many friends in his contact with the American on the other side, was not content to form an opinion until he saw him on his native shore, so he made the long promised trip, and although he claims to have been almost Americanized while in Europe, he now says that the U. S. A. has conquered, and pays it the great tribute that it is "forever being discovered," not always by different persons, but by the same persons.

The writer's personal opinion that America is "vivid and vital" so interestingly expressed in this book should be widely read. The book is dedicated to Roland R. Harrison, who he claims was the first to greet him when he landed on American shores, and who was his friend in every city, in fact everywhere. It is a well written book which Americans will appreciate. (Lippincott's book, Philadelphia.)

A SKETCH OF ADMIRATION.

Dwight Whitney Morrow. U. S. ambassador to Mexico. By Hewitt H. Howland. With an introduction by Calvin Coolidge. This concise and understanding sketch of Dwight Morrow, United States ambassador to Mexico, gives to the general public for the first time a clear apprehension of a man whose name has gradually come to be a sort of symbol for sound management and wise handling of international diplomatic affairs. Dwight Morrow and Calvin Coolidge were classmates at Amherst college, and in the balloting at the end of their course his classmates voted Morrow the man "most likely to succeed." In a graceful introduction which he contributes to this book, former President Coolidge points out how well this prophecy has materialized.

Mr. Howland's sketch is deliberately short. It brings out the essentials of the man without overloading the picture with details. A distinguished jurist and long-time friend of the ambassador has said of it: "It is admirable for its directness, its simplicity and its restraint, and it gives a very accurate picture of Dwight's life and character."

Hewitt H. Howland, author of this "sketch in admiration," is bound to Mr. Morrow by ties of friendship only, having known the ambassador for a number of years. As editor of the Century Quarterly Mr. Howland has had the opportunity to study Mr. Morrow's career with the objectivity of the magazine editor and to express his findings with the ease of the trained writer. THE EDITORIAL PAGE.

Robert W. Jones, associate professor of journalism, University of Washington, former special correspondent of the Associated Press, contributes a textbook that will be heralded with pleasure by the Fourth Estate. While it may be true that the local touch, the editor's well known personality, does not shine as brightly as in the past, as in the days of Horace Greeley of the New York Tribune; Colonel Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, but the name of Adolph S. Ochs, of the New York Times, continues to be the one bright particular star shining with the same brilliancy as in the past.

Recently a brilliant editor from the southland paid Mr. Ochs and the Times the following splendid tribute: "In my opinion Mr. Ochs has done more than any living man to elevate the standard of American journalism, not forgetting the editorial page. He has made the New York Times the greatest newspaper in the world, and has established a standard that has made him the most notable publisher in the world."

The table of contents will tell the reader more than he can glean from a newspaper the work that has to be done, the weighing of every word, the time that has to be devoted to editorial work. One of the best statements made under the heading "Newspaper Policy" is "The Newspaper Aids Democracy." Other titles are "Writing the Editorial: Accuracy and Fairness," "The Reader's Demand and Style; Words and Sentences; the Make-up of the Editorial Page and Problems and Questions."

Another interesting feature is the photographic reproduction of editorial pages from the New York Times, the New York World, Kansas City Star, Chicago Tribune and the Atlanta Constitution.

The author discusses his subject from the class room to the editorial sanctum, this being quite easy for him to do as he has been step by step along the editorial path gathering experience along the way. He wishes to impress the statement that the time has come when newspaper policies have become less personal in tone, have broadened in many respects." The old bitter partisan politics has now given way to the broad platform of civic betterment—a condition that is welcomed by all citizens. (Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York.)

THE NEW CATHOLIC DICTIONARY.

The New Catholic Dictionary. Published under the auspices of the Catholic Encyclopedia, is a complete work of reference on every subject in the life, belief, tradition, rites, ceremonies, symbolism, devotions, history, biography, laws constitution dioceses, missions and everything else concerning the Roman Catholic church, with statistics of the church and her part in promoting science, art, education, social welfare and civilization. It is compiled under the direction of Dr. Conde B. Pallen, John J. Wynne, S. J., with very able assistants, and about 200 editorial writers. It is a most valuable book and should be in the library of every Catholic home and would be of worthwhile information to any one from the high school boy to the man of letters. It is a true statement of the Roman Catholic position as made by its well-known editors and it bears the imprimatur of the cardinal archbishop of New York. The contributors are experts and have and included every subject of any interest, accounts of the church in every country, religious orders, church societies and non-Christian religions, etc.

This handsome volume is commended to readers and students by reviewers, both Catholic and Protestant, and there were more than 12,000 subscribers before its publication. There are 1,100 pages, 8,500 subjects, 12 maps, 671 text illustrations and 64 halftones. (Published by the Universal Knowledge Foundation, New York city.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

The Painted Minx. By Robert W. Chambers. The friends of this popular author, and they are many, have noticed with pleasure his tendency to give his stories historical settings. In this book he has added to the interest and attractiveness of his story by locating it in Old New York during Revolutionary days. The story is woven around Marie Guest, not only the leading actress at that time but the toast of the town. She was so vivacious, so winsome, and possessing a charm that carried everything her way she was called "the Painted Minx."

Marie Guest, like all other girls, was loved and loving. She perhaps carried a heavy heart, even though her face indicated no sadness, because of a handsome young officer in Washington's army. This is the romance that Mr. Chambers has woven and while it belongs to the eighteenth century, it is so full of sentiment, with a rich and realistic background and with such historical characters as General Washington, General LaFayette, Major Andre Hamilton, Anthony Wayne that there is not a dull moment in the story. (D. Appleton & Co., New York).

Navy Wives. By Whitman Chambers. While this is a modern story full of modern men and women, especially husbands and wives, it has an unusual flavor of interest for the setting is in the Panama Canal Zone and the story is woven around American naval officers and their families. The author had plenty of material in which to weave an interesting story; a group of people far away from their native shores, alien environment, very little to do, busy trying to entertain and be entertained—and what do you expect?

It is an appealing romance or story, or both, of real human beings, men and women with plenty of time hanging on their hands to realize that life is what you make it and the real struggle that is ever before them to live up to the thought. There is much in this story that has a touch of realism, and, naturally, the reader will agree that it is a very modern story. (Rae D. Henkle Company, New York).

War Nurse. The true story of a woman who lived, loved and suffered on the western front. The following is used as an introduction: "The story of the war was written on the shifting lines of the trenches, in gunpowder and in steel. Here is the story of another part of it—the woman behind the lines, who saw their old conventions, morality and logic sway in the reverberations of the big guns, and at last go crashing like a picture from a crumbled wall."

"Corine Andrews" is the heroine of this story, though of course her real name is not used, but it is authentic for it is transcribed from her diary. She was the daughter of a prominent and well-known New York citizen. (Cosmopolitan Book Corporation, New York.)

New Lamps. By Albert Stedman Eagan. An important social problem. It is the story of two girls who long to test their freedom. It is a sympathetic study of modern youth. The author has done editorial and publishing work, having been connected with several newspapers.

A Roman Holiday. By Don Ryan. A few years ago the author was working with a famous western movie director. He has been a newspaperman, actor, title writer for the movies and is now writing talkie scripts.

Children of the Earth. By Bruce Marshall. The story is woven around a young curate as the central figure. (Macaulay's Books).

SEEING LONDON

BY JOAN LITTLEFIELD.

(Staff Correspondent of The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

BY JOAN LITTLEFIELD,
Staff Correspondent of The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

LONDON, May 3.—Princess Mary and her husband, Lord Harewood, hope to take up residence at Harewood house in August, and the fine Yorkshire mansion is now being redecorated and thoroughly modernized.

Harewood house was built in the reign of George III. Time and thought, as well as money, were spent on it, and the services of great craftsmen and great artists were sought for its decoration and adornment.

Some of the finest work of the brothers Adam is to be seen in the state apartments, and some of the loveliest examples of Chippendale's art are also contained in the house. The collection of Sevres china in the picture gallery is valued at $1,000,000 and there are pictures by Reynolds, Hoppner and Lawrence, and ceilings painted by Zucchi and Rebecchi.

There are 76 massive mahogany double doors at Harewood, all specially made on the Harewood estates in Barbados.

The house stands in a well-wooded park of 2,000 acres, and its lovely gardens were laid out by the famous "Capability" Brown. The lawns slope down to a lake, and from this the park rises to meet the wharfdale slopes with their groups of luxurious trees.

Running along the wide south front of the house there is a terrace which looks over an exquisite Italian garden. Here a fairy-like fountain plays amid beautifully trimmed box trees, cut to quaint cone-like shapes, and masses of flowers blaze in the borders.

Princess Mary is taking a great personal interest in the modernization of the house. Six extra bathrooms have been made and a small power-station has been built on the grounds to serve all-electric kitchens, electric fires and two passenger elevators.

The princess's ideas of the ideal home are distinctly modern and she has had several walls removed to provide lighter and more airy rooms. One of her principal interests is the nursery on the top floor in the east wing. This will have pale blue walls and a fresco of tiny hunting scenes for both young Viscount Lascelles and his brother have a keen love of horses and the open air.

Blue will predominate in the color scheme of the house, for it has always been Princess Mary's favorite color. In the big drawing room, which has been constructed from three small rooms, the walls will be of pastel-blue, hung with flower studies from the princess's collection. The ceiling of this room has been hand-painted and the woodwork treated to resemble silver.

Mediaeval Art on View.

The exhibition of mediaeval art which the Archbishop of Canterbury is to open at the Victoria and Albert museum is likely to be one of the most interesting events of May. Examples of the work of English artists and craftsmen of the middle ages are being collected from churches, cathedrals and city guilds in all parts of the country. The king is lending some treasures, the Archbishop of Canterbury is sending some illuminated manuscripts from his collection at Lambeth palace, and Pierpont Morgan has also promised some manuscripts.

The works of art shown will range from the year 800 to 1550. There will be many beautiful examples of Gothic sculpture from the cathedrals, including some of the famous carvings from York, with carved and painted oak chests, plate and early church vestments, such as still exist in unsuspected wealth in church treasuries.

Stonyhurst college is lending the renowned eighth century St. Cuthbert's fourth gospel with its original binding and there will be early plate from many of the city of London guilds and embroidered palls from some of the city companies. From Westminster Abbey will come the very beautiful contemporary portrait of Richard II.

G. B. S. in the Stilly Night.

We are all of us subject to nightmare, even supermen, and George Bernard Shaw has confessed to having a favorite dream and one which often visits him in the stillness of the night. It is a dream which most people dread, for in it Mr. Shaw finds himself pursued by somebody trying to catch him. "And," he says, "this invariably ends with my being chased upstairs, and that I thoroughly enjoy.

"When I was seven years old," continued G. B. S., "my father told me there were no such things as ghosts; I believed him then and have believed him ever since."

There is a story, however, to the effect that once when Mr. Shaw was asked by some people interested in psychical research to help investigate a ghost at a house near London, he, as the unbeliever, was given the post of honor—the haunted room. Soon after he went to bed, Mr. Shaw became aware of a "presence" in the room, and, jumping out of bed, he seized an old sword which hung on the wall and strode about the room hurling defiance at the powers of darkness. The noise he made aroused the psychic researchers, and they burst into the room to find him brandishing the sword above his head. And it was not till then that the great man awoke from his nightmare!

Where the Walls Have No Ears.

In the round tower at Windsor castle, in a strong room which is reached by 129 steps, are stored the king's archives. The secret documents which they comprise have been looked after for many years by the Rev. Albert Lee, M. V. O., who has just retired.

There are many Stuart papers in the archives, largely concerning the pretender. Other documents deal with the movements of George III, Georve IV, and various ministers of state. These are interesting because, so much being of a secret nature, they are in script. There is also a large collection of Victorian papers from the time of Queen Victoria's first prime minister, Lord Melbourne. From that point there are papers from all parts of the world, including many from sovereigns, presidents and ministers of state.

The Power of Suggestion.

On the principle that environment plays a large part in the purchasing power of a customer, a well known Regent street shop for men has had a room designed which should inspire the most backward male with a desire to buy cool tropical clothing.

The room is made entirely in bright red lacquer, and in the panels, forming a frieze above the glowing walls, is a series of fine pictures by Mr. Fred Taylor. These represent scenes in many parts of the tropics—the famous procession of umbrellas in Burma, a festival in Java, a camel convoy on the move in Egypt, and so on—scenes full of brilliant color in which scarlet predominates.

As Sir Alan Cobham said when he recently opened the room, any young fellow ordering an outfit for his first trip to the east would feel "a regular dog" when he saw himself in whites against those scarlet walls.

It remains to be seen whether this example will be followed by other enterprising firms. Grey skies and artificial rain, for instance, would undoubtedly stimulate the umbrella trade, while who, on seeing dainty nymphs swimming in synthetic seas, could fail straightway to buy the most alluring thing in jazz bathing costumes?

Cocktails Still the Fashionable Drink.

Although there is a rumor that the cocktail is dying, and that sherry is about to come back into its own, there is still fascination in searching for new combinations of cocktail ingredients, and the vogue for cocktail clubs continues.

The latest of these is "Cymie's," in Grosvenor street, so-called as an abbreviation of the name of Cynthia Hume, who started it. Miss Hume, who has spent some years in Paris painting, designed and decorated "Cymie's" herself in an attractive color scheme of cream and green. Although the club has only been open a few weeks, it already has a membership of over 200, among whom are P. G. H. Fender, the cricketer, Lord Russell, the Northesks and the Duke of Manchester.

Another craze of the moment is to find a place where one can get a sort of supper-breakfast before retiring for the night, or rather, early morning. Napper Dean Paul, the very versatile son of Sir Aubrey Dean Paul, has supplied a want in this respect by taking over the grillroom of a restaurant in Burlington Gardens, which he has christened the Breakfast Room, where he will specialize in a supper-breakfast menu of Anglo-American dishes, with dancing and a cabaret.

Mr. Dean Paul has a flair for discovering new talent. Some time ago he imported some street musicians to a cocktail party where they were an instant success.

Mr. Dean Paul would make a good cabaret artist himself, and among other things, he has gone in for house decoration and published a volume of poems, called "Patchwork."

Becomes Star Over Night.

One of the most astonishing rises to stardom in the west end of London is that of Celia Johnson, the 19-year-old actress, who is now playing the name part in Mr. Frank Vosper's dramatization of G. B. Stern's novel, "Debonair."

A few weeks ago Miss Johnson was quite unknown. Then she was given a small part in a play that ran only a week, in which she attracted the favorable notice of every London critic. Mr. Vosper, who was experiencing great difficulty in finding a leading lady for his play, went to see her and she was engaged almost immediately.

Not long ago Miss Johnson was at school, playing Fatima in a French version of "Bluebeard" (she speaks fluent French), winning the five-foot jump with ease, and delighting her friends by her prowess on the tennis court and the lacrosse field.

The Better Songs

The crazy jazz on radios
Will kill them by and by
If, to get better music, soon,
The stations do not try.
It is degrading to the soul.
And does no earthly good
Of elevating human souls,
As all good music should.

O, give us back the dear old songs
Like mother used to sing;
For they, sweet, tender memories,
Into the heart, will bring.
We're tired and sick of crazy jazz
That elevates no soul.
We want the music aiming for
A higher, nobler goal.

"Juanita," "In the Gloaming," too,
Sweet memories, will bring
"Sweet Genevieve," "Love's Old Sweet Song,"
"Forgotten," "Absent," sing.
Bring memories of other days
As "Home, Sweet Home" will do;
And "In the Garden of My Heart,"
"Grandfather's Clock" comes, too.

Then "Old Black Joe" and "Nellie Gray,"
To me, are always dear.
"After the Ball" and "Old Lang Syne,"
And "Sweet Marie," I hear
In memories old, charming songs
That, to my heart, will bring
The thoughts of many by-gone days
Of which I love to sing.

In "Silver Threads Among the Gold"
And Stephen Foster's songs,
We hear sweet songs of memories
For which a true heart longs.
The jazzy songs are nothing by Such tender songs as these,
And they will never seem to be
The ones that, most, will please.
—MARTHA S. LIPPINCOTT.

Lonesome

When I am feeling lonesome
And life's skies are growing gray;
Then I work with heart and hands,
For it is the surest way
To overcome moods and heartaches—
I've tried it—and plainly see
That always keeping busy
Is good medicine for me.

Singing, sometimes, will help one.
I find on a closet shelf
Grandfather's sacred "hymnal,"
Then I sing all by myself.
While my voice is not enchanting
As the chime of silver bells,
Yet it fills my heart with music,
When are coming these lonesome spells.

"On Greenland's Icy Mountain,"
When weathe's hot as can be
Then "On Jordan's Stormy Banks,"
Till cool airs come and fan me!
But here's my best when I sing
"Happy Day" and "Rock of Ages,"
For peace and consolation ring
From the "Hymnal's" misty pages.

When, perhaps you are lonesome,
Feeling rather gray and blue,
Get to work with heart and hands,
Keeping busy as I do!
Rummage for an old hymn book,
Hid away on closet shelf—
Then you'll forget your heartaches
While singing all by yourself!
—AUGUSTA WALL.

Nature's Jubilee

A happy heart has Nature—
Just listen to the breeze,
And see the green leaves dancing
To its blithsome melodies;

The sun seems broadly smiling
To see such elfin play,
And every bird is singing
A tuneful ron-de-lay;

The meadow grass is ripoling,
And each flower's nodding there
To the syncopated rhythm
Of the music in the air.

Come all, into the woodland!
'Tis wrong to stay away
When Spring is celebrating
The coming of Queen May:

'Tis meant we should be happy
The woods are wide and free,
And none are charged admission
To Nature's jubilee!

Portraits of Washington And Lee in Auditorium of Greensboro High School

Editor Constitution: It will be of interest to the women who are so ably featuring the placing in school auditoriums in the south men distinguished in the history of our country, to know that in the auditorium of the Greensboro High school are two of the handsomest portraits in oil elegantly framed, of General Robert E. Lee and George Washington (from Gilbert Stuarts' model), both life size, the work of the late P. P. Carter, of Virginia, who has done some famous work for many cities in Georgia, an artist of note. Lee's portrait was put in by the Woman's Club of Greensboro; Washington's, private subscriptions. These portraits are easily worth $300 each.

Attitude of Communists Outlined by Malone

Editor Constitution: I have just received a copy of an editorial printed in your paper on February 17, 1930, in which you speak of "The miserable cant of the professional 'liberals' like Darrow and Garfield Hayes, and Dudley Field Malone, arguing that communists be allowed free rein to invade peaceful communities and foment anti-government riots, under the guise of labor strikes, etc."

I am sure that your distinguished paper would not deliberately misrepresent me or my opinions. Though I always feel I am in very distinguished company when I join Clarence Darrow in any liberal enterprise, I do not believe that Mr. Darrow, who only recently returned from Europe, has had anything whatsoever to say in defense of recent communist activities. For my part, I have never had any sympathy with the communist movement here or anywhere else and in economics, I am a complete individualist. I expressed no opinion to anybody at any time favorable to the recent activities of the communists and as a matter of fact, I refused when recently asked to act as counsel for the communists arrested in New York city, because, as I told them, I was in complete disagreement with their principles, their conduct and the insincerity of their defense.

I have been privately and publicly in complete agreement with the policy of Mayor Walker in granting communists and all other minority groups the right of petition, free speech and free assembly, but when, by their conduct, communists, or any other groups, try to turn the congested streets of our cities into places for riot and propaganda, they should be promptly suppressed.

An April Night.

BY VIRGIE MAE WEBBER.

What mystic fingers trail along the air
Cool, glimmering threads spun from some starry height,
And blend their radiance with the stillness there
To weave the beauty of an April night?

From astral spheres nomadic dewdrops bring
A wordless legend of ethereal seas;
Upon a wandering zephyr's filmy wing
There comes the breath of full-blown apple trees.

Against the southern sky the mountains stand
Like silvered altars, whose dim centers glow
Still faintly, though some weary pilgrim hand
Lighted and left them there long years ago. . . .

This is the hour when miracles are wrought
In human hearts; when souls grown sick of strife
May quaff from heaven's bowl a healing draught,
And know again the thrill and throb of Life.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

ANOTHER OUTBREAK OF BILLINGS COMPLAINT.

The cart tail mountebank who arrived at Greenburg in time to prepare his pitch near the corners before dusk, 40 or 50 years ago, hypnotized the yokels gathered around his flare and sold 'em six bottles of his famous Kickapioux Tonic and Invigorator at the regular price of five bottles, or one week's pay, through sheer force of personality. Everybody's hired man in the audience struggled to get near enough to hand the magnificent one five bucks and take away six bottles.

The only difference between the cart tail medicine man of grandfather's day and the modern charlatan is one of volume production. Where there was one typical hired man or simple wage earner in grandpa's time there are now thousands of gullibles, and what's more the modern charlatan's prospects are likely to have a dollar, or two burning their pockets week days as well as Saturday night. So it behooves the chaps who provide the simple public with the secret discoveries of unidentified "famous scientists," "eminent specialists' and the like, to do business on a grand scale.

Here is a typical instance. It also "makes a sucker," as the saying goes, of the government—which is a nice, legitimate, roundabout way of making a "sucker" of you, if you are a citizen. Brazenly, deliberately, typically this brand new nostrum promulgates—

The U. S. government of course, has never given any such warning, and could not do so even to please the large financial interests that would have the simple laity believe something like that, because it is not true. Food kept above 50 degrees, as the greater portion and the more important portion of all foods is kept always, is not poisonous and not even unwholesome. What one of the steenteen government bureaus has tried to do, is to determine what temperature is desirable in the refrigrator, for the preservation of the more perishable foods, and they find that a temperature of 50 degrees F. or lower is most satisfactory for this purpose.

But it was not at all the intention of the nostrum monger to educate the public by thus garbling and promulgating this information. No, indeed. Along with the misrepresentation of the "government warning" the prospect is reminded that the body temperature is 98.6 degrees F. (which is the only truthful part of the nostrum announcement) and if "food decays—poisonous decay" at temperatures slightly above 50 degrees, how much more rapidly will germs grow and thrive at 98.6 degrees! Don't argue this. You're only a latter day hired man, you know.

Being merely a hired man and therefore a veritable Simple Simon, you will of course be interested and duly alarmed to know some of the diseases that come to those who neglect to use our nostrum constantly. It seems "research at the academy of medicine" has brought these diseases to light. Which academy of medicine? Never mind, foolish. We're not going to commit ourselves. Sufficient that we ascribe this to such a "high authority." Get ready to shake in your shoes, you poor sap:

Of steenteen recognized diseases no less than steenteen are due to the decay of food in the mouth. They are:

1. Aortic. Aortic what? We dunno. But just aortic sounds pretty bad, so we thought we'd include it here. No fear that any one will check this, because we're not telling which academy of medicine gave us the joke. There are thousands of academies of medicine you know. We might have included aynic and static, but our board of directors said wait a while.

5. Catarrh. Of course no academy of medicine would have the nerve to pretend any one knows what germ causes "catarrh" or even to pretend there is such a malady.

7. Common colds. (For years I, Brady, have been trying to pin this on some doctor or other responsible authority, and I have failed. So it seems to me this is the unkindest cut of all. Here's a mysterious, in fact I believe a mythical "academy of medicine" in possession of knowledge that those of us who do business under our own names can't get.)

18. Pleuro-pneumonia.
20. Pneumonia.
29. Typhoid-pneumonia.

Up to the time this sinister academy of medicine made these amazing "researches" we labored under the impression that Nos. 18, 20 and 29 were different names for the same disease. The nostrum people overlooked a bet here. They might have added to the list two other frightful names, to wit, lobar pneumonia and lung fever, thus giving the hired man population five dangers to worry over, where there is but one in fact.

19. Phthisis.
27. Tuberculosis.

Ain't science wonderful! Hitherto phthisis was a quaint old fashioned name for tuberculosis. Now it is a distinct disease. If you don't believe it, we refer you to the academy of medicine, if you can find the academy of medicine we refer you to. We might have stretched this one into three, by enumerating consumption in our deadly list, but really, we're all gentlemen of high ideals and our sole ambition is to do the public good. The vending of consumption cures is too disreputable nowadays, so we decided to leave that one out of the list.

And now, dear simple people, with your kind indulgence we will pull a couple more whoppers and call it a day. You will then be anxious, we confidently believe, to hurry off to the store to buy a crock of our amazing concoction.

Know then, foolish, that our product has fulfilled the exacting requirements of the pure food and drug act. We presume you will imagine the requirements of that act are exacting, also that you will not be aware that the food and drugs act hasn't been called PURE since back in the days when Jenny Lind sang for Barnum, or thereabouts, but you will let us have our little joke, won't you; and anyway we like the sound of that word PURE associated with our product. You will be good enough to ignore, until you've tried half a dozen packages at least, the fact that nothing in the food or drug line can be sold in interstate commerce unless it has first "fulfilled the exacting requirements" of the foods and drugs act. Of course we do not wish to imply that you are so childish as to imagine that no dangerous or poisonous products are marketed under the comical food and drugs act.

Furthermore our nostrum has "passed the government test" as a germ killer. That ought to clinch it—assuming you imagine your government exacts any particular standard of practical efficiency in that respect. We mention this merely because it is getting to be an old Spanish custom of nostrum exploiters of our class.

Now then, you latter day hired men, women and children, step right up and get yours. Please do not push and shove—we're going to stay here handing it out just as long as your coin keeps coming in and the bally old government nods. So keep in line and be patient until you are served.

U. S. Rubber Plants Running Full Capacity

DETROIT, Mich., May 3.—Responding to the progressive policies of the new management, the tire plant of the United States Rubber Company here is operating at 100 per cent of capacity. An expansion program also has been launched at the company-owned cotton mills at Winnsboro, S. C., to bring the output of tire cord up to the requirements of the tire plant.

This announcement was authorized by Joseph F. O'Shaughnessy, who was recently placed in charge of all United States tire department activities. The plant for the past month has been operated seven days a week on three eight-hour shifts each day.

Daily tire output is at the highest point since 1906, when the plant was first opened in Detroit, and present maximum capacity is expected to be maintained until well into the summer to meet the growing demand for United States tires for the replacement and original equipment markets, Mr. O'Shaughnessy said. Employment, accordingly, has been on the upturn.

The Winnsboro mills, which are owned and operated by the United States Rubber Company, and in which all cotton cord used in building United States tires is produced, also have been operating at capacity since early in the year. While most cotton mills of the south are on curtailed schedules, the output of the United States mills is being increased 17 per cent by the installation of new machinery in anticipation of record summer operations. Housing conditions for employes also are being improved.

The vigorous production operations of this company reveal the results already being obtained from the new policies inaugurated last year with the change in management of the company. The aggressive tire sales program being carried out has resulted not only in a sizable increase in original equipment business over last year but also in the opening up of many important new dealer outlets throughout the country, according to L. M. Simpson, general sales manager.

European First To Build Straight Eight Motor for Car

According to Paul G. Hoffman, vice president of the Studebaker Corporation of America, the first eight-cylinder car was built in Europe in 1912. Designed by DeDion Bouton, French motor car manufacturer, its novel design and tremendous power aroused considerable interest.

"America saw its first domestic eight-cylinder car in 1915," says Mr. Hoffman. "At the New York automobile show of that year, there were seven eight-cylinder models on display. It was also the year in which the battle for supremacy between the four-cylinder car and the six was climaxed with the six capturing the predominant position for the first time in history. In the following year's show, the six increased its lead over the four by a substantial margin, while the displays of eight-cylinder cars also increased slightly.

"The post war years soon demonstrated that the eight was destined to give the six close rivalry. In 1925, there were 60 six-cylinder models being offered in the American market against only 18 eight-cylinder models. The latter were all high-priced cars selling far beyond the means of the average motorist. Nevertheless, the eight continued to advance. By 1927, the number of eight-cylinder models had increased to 28, with sixes dropping to 59.

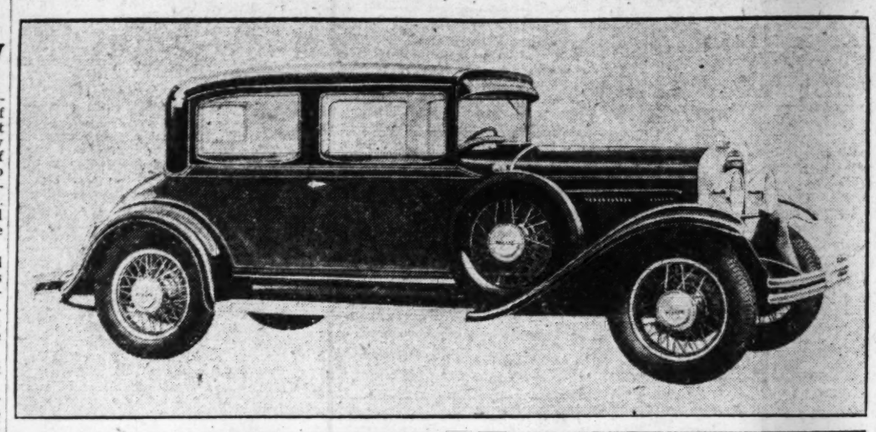

"About this time, a small group of American automobile manufacturers began building eight-cylinder cars priced to command mass sales. Among these was Studebaker, who inaugurated the President Eight which became an immediate success. This move was soon followed by the introduction of the Commander Eight and later by the Dictator Eight. Meanwhile, other manufacturers with a record of large scale production entered the field with the result that by 1929 the number of eight-cylinder models had jumped to 37, while sixes dropped to 49.

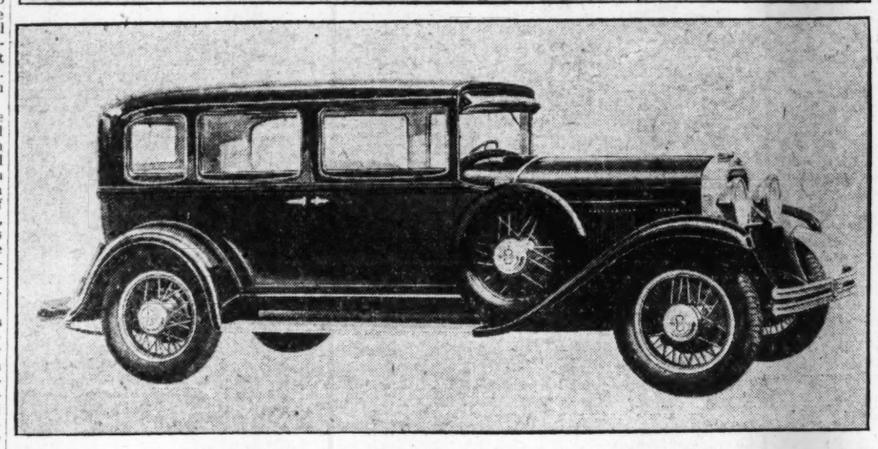

"The recent midwinter automobile shows evidenced a further triumph of the eight-cylinder car. At both the New York and Chicago shows, eight-cylinder displays exceeded the displays of sixes for the first time in history. Inu New York, there were 147 eights displayed against 112 sixes. At Chicago the margin was even greater with 97 eights on exhibit compared with 71 sixes.

"Registration figures, too, offer conclusive evidence of this overwhelming eight-cylinder trend. 1929 figures from 43 states compared with 1928 show a decrease of 19 per cent in six cylinder registrations above $1,000, while eight-cylinder registrations above $1,000 increased 47 per cent. Of the 43 states, in which registrations by engine model were available, only one failed to show an increase in eights. But that state also showed a decrease in sixes. Another state, which deviated from the general trend by showing an increase in sixes, showed an increase in eights which was greater than the national average.

"The eight-cylinder trend is just as apparent in Europe. At last year's Paris salon, a total of 44 European and American makes of eight-cylinder cars were exhibited, compared with 27 in 1928 and 10 in 1926. Of this number, European makers exhibited 26, compared with 19 in 1928 and only seven in 1926."

New Willys Eight Is Introduced

Top: Willys Eight De Luxe Sedan. Smart lines, comfort, power and speed are features of the new Willys Eight De Luxe Sedan presented in the field of medium priced eights by Willys-Overland. The sedan shown above comfortably seats five passengers in the capacious interior. This car, which has a wheelbase of 120 inches, is powered by an 80-horsepower straight eight engine, and has a speed of more than 75 miles an hour in high and 48 miles an hour in second. The line also includes a four-passenger De Luxe Coupe, a Standard Sedan and Standard Coupe, the latter two being equipped with wood wheels instead of wire wheels. Bottom: The De Luxe Coupe, shown above, is included in the new line of Willys Eight cars being presented by Willys-Overland. Smart lines, comfort, power, speed and smoothness are characteristics of this new product. The coupe comfortably seats four passengers, while a spacious luggage compartment is provided in the rear. The car, which bears the mark of quality throughout, is powered by a straight eight 80-horsepower engine and has a speed of more than 75 miles an hour in high and 48 miles an hour in second. The line also includes a De Luxe Sedan, a Standard Sedan and a Standard Coupe. These cars are on display here in the show rooms of the Willys-Overland Company, 17 North avenue, N. E.

Avoid Driving On Wrong Side of Road

HARTFORD, Conn., April 3.—If the motor vehicle fatality record during the coming vacation season, starting in May and lasting through October, is to show any improvement over the total of the corresponding period last year, motorists will have to stop driving on the wrong side of roads and refusing to give right-of-ways, while pedestrians will have to exercise more care in crossing streets and parents will have to keep their children from playing in thoroughfares.

Such factors are only a few of the reasons why more than 17,000 persons were killed in motor vehicle accidents during the vacation season last year, according to an analysis of automobile accident reports made by the Travelers Insurance Company.

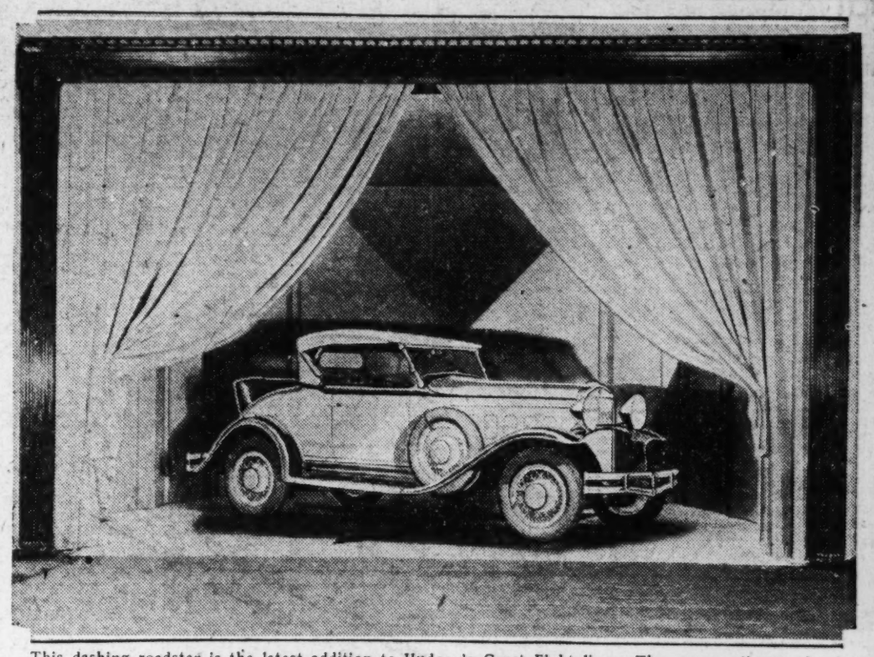

Out of a total of approximately 50,000 definite and assignable traffic violations resulting in personal injury or death reported in states having nearly one-sixth of the motor vehicle fatality toll last year, more than one-fourth involved failure to grant right-of-ways, while about one in every six traffic violations pertained to driving on the wrong side of roads. Cutting in and out of lines of traffic was the traffic violation in nearly a fourteenth of the total number of irregularities causing death and injury, and speeding was assigned as the cause of mishaps in nearly a fifth of the violations. One of the most dangerous things a pedestrian can do is to cross a street at places other than at intersections, about one-fifth of the pedestrians injured in motor vehicle accidents being hurt while doing so. Approximately the same ratio of injured is caused by people darting into streets from behind cars parked at curbs, and one-seventh of the pedestrians injured in motor vehicle accidents place their lives in jeopardy while crossing intersections without the protection of signal lights.

A third of the automobile accidents causing injury and death occur at street intersections, while even more happen upon highways. Only one-fifth as many accidents occur between intersections as at intersections, while more than a fourth of all motor vehicle accidents happening on highways occur upon curves.

Nearly one-fourth of the total number of motor vehicle accidents leading to a fatality record of at least 31,000 last year involved the collision of automobiles, while approximately one-half involved the collision of cars with pedestrians. Nearly one-third of all the persons hurt in automobile accidents are pedestrians, and about one-half include passengers of cars in collision.

More motor vehicle accidents occur on Sunday than on any other day of the week, one-fifth occurring that day, while Saturday is the next most hazardous day for the operation of a car, with one-sixth of the mishaps occurring then. Between the hours of 4 and 5 in the afternoon more automobile accidents occur than during any other hour from 6 in the morning until midnight, the number of accidents happening between 4 and 5 being 34 per cent more than during the previous hour.

Hudson's New Roadster

Tells How New Plugs Save More Than Cost

Why an automobile owner should change his spark plugs once a year, or every 10,000 miles, was explained to a gathering of dealers recently by O. C. Rohde, chief engineer of the Champion Spark Plug Company.

"Spark plugs when operating efficiently," he said, "ignite the mixture with a hot, intense spark. The gas mixture burns rapidly and combustion is very nearly complete. That means full use of the gasoline with no waste.

"But the intense strains and stresses, especially in modern high compression engine operation, are so terrific that they gradually sap the efficiency of the best spark plugs. The electrodes become pitted. Carbon is burned into the insulator. It forms a crust inside the shell. Then the spark begins to lose intensity because part of the current leaks away. The flame does not spread sufficiently fast or intensely enough to burn all the mixture. There is a loss of power. Unburned fuel is discharged through the exhaust or seeps into the crankcase to dilute the oil. Carbon forms on the cylinder heads, pistons and valve seats. The engine become sluggish. It falters on the hills. It is wasting both oil and gasoline.

"Thousands of tests in our laboratory show that all these things are happening in a car in which the same spark plugs have been used for 10,000 or more miles. The loss of efficiency occurs slowly—too slowly for the driver to notice, perhaps, but it occurs with absolute certainty. Every motor car engine actually costs less to run if a new set of spark plugs is installed every 10,000 miles.

"Spark plugs should be changed at least once a year, and it is because of this need that National Change Week was inaugurated by Champion. Last year upward of three million motorists participated in the observance of the week and this year we expect to have reports of even a larger number.

Sinclair Service Corporation Operates Large Station Here

Plant Has 450-Car Capacity Daily for Servicing Cars.

Specialized automobile service in keeping with the most up-to-date methods is featured by the Sinclair Service Corporation at its modern "Merry-Go-Round" plant on Ponce de Leon avenue at Juniper street, operating under the management of Paul Y. Gibson.

The plant's facilities for the servicing of automobiles is complete, including washing and polishing, greasing and lubricating, duco finishing and painting, brake testing, light adjusting, gas and oils.

To give some idea of the extensiveness of the plant, 40 persons are employed there and the monthly pay roll amounts to approximately $43,700 a month, and the operating supplies, such as soap, water, grease, etc., cost approximately $1,200 a month.

The plant is said to be the only one of its kind in the south, having a capacity of handling 450 cars a day. The track that carries cars around the washing pits is 94 feet long. Time required for washing a car is 14 minutes, and it comes out completely dry and ready to ride.

Describing in detail the working of the plant, Mr. Gibson says the service department takes any work pertaining to brakes, front wheel alignment, headlight adjusting, either the replacement of bulbs or the adjusting of the lights themselves, spring work and radiator flushing.

The washing department, commonly known as the "merry-go-round," gives 14-minute service from the time the car receives its initial wetting, according to Mr. Gibson. In this time 25 employes work on each car, during which the entire car is washed completely and the upholstery vacuum cleaned.

"In our lubrication department," says P. Y. Gibson, "we thoroughly lubricate a car, including such small details as door locks and hinges. On each of these jobs that washing is not ordered the windows are cleaned and the upholstery vacuum-cleaned.

"Cars placed in the chassis and motor department are washed thoroughly under the hood and all parts ordinarily hidden from sight. In the body and fender department we are equipped to paint and part or all of an automobile. The polishing department goes a long way toward restoring original luster, dresses tops, paints tires. The filling station completes the departments of the plant."

All of the departments are manned by expert workmen in their line, according to Mr. Gibson, and they are supplied with the most modern equipment and material to use in performing their duties.

George H. Phelps Gets Important Labor Commission

Appointment of George Harrison Phelps, well-known Detroit advertising man and director of Durant Motors, Inc., as a special commissioner of the department of labor to investigate European wage systems is announced by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis.

Mr. Phelps sailed immediately for England to begin his tour, which will include industrial centers in Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria, Italy, Spain, Belgium and the Scandinavian countries. He will make a special survey of the extent to which European manufacturers have adopted American production methods.

Two books published during 1929 by Mr. Phelps and dealing with world economic problems provoked wide comment both here and abroad. They were "Our Biggest Customer," an appeal for a square deal to labor, and "Tomorrow's Advertisers," a glimpse into the future arts of trade stimulation.

Mr. Phelps is president of the Detroit advertising agency which is responsible for Durant advertising.

Rigid Frame Constructed For Essex Challenger

An entirely new frame built to accommodate the large 113-inch wheelbase gives the new Essex Challenger roomier bodies and enhances the distinction of the sweeping stream lines of the car. The double drop center, which lowers the car one and one-half inches, without sacrificing road clearance, also helps greatly in establishing the low slung, sleek look which characterizes this year's edition of the Challenger.

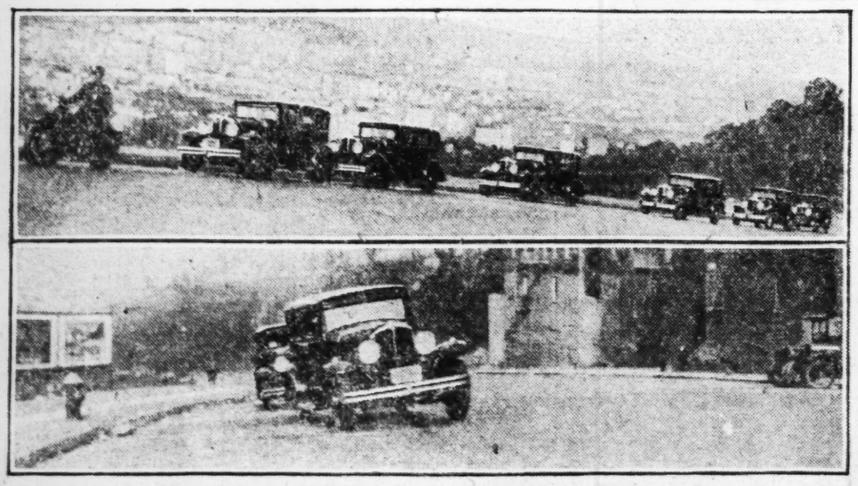

Six sturdy cross members, with box construction features, give greatly added strength. These cross members are gusseted, making the structure very rigid latterly, while the side members are non-weave type with reinforcing lower flange.

These features, combined with the patented Essex construction, give exceptional roadability, freedom from sway on turns or rough roads and riding ease at high speeds.

SEARS, ROEBUCK OPENS NEW FARMERS' MARKET

All Space Is Taken by 38 Groups of Growers From 18 Counties.

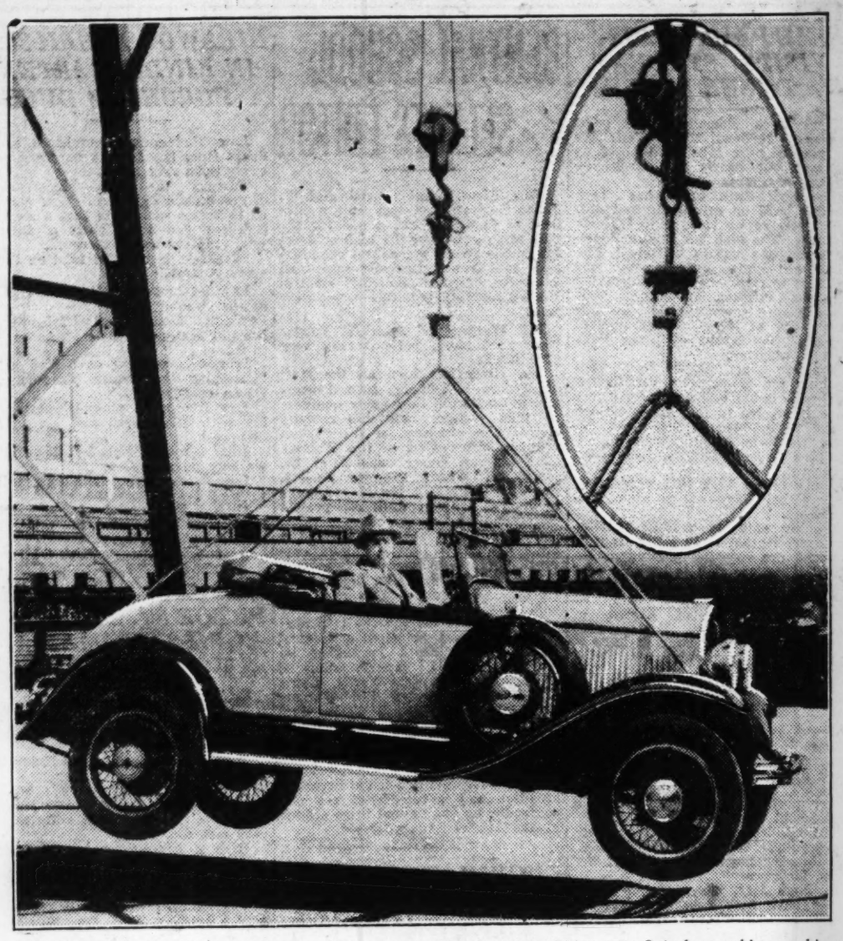

Thirty-eight groups of farmers, representing approximately 150 individual producers, occupied spaces in the new farmers' produce market operated by Sears, Roebuck & Company at Ponce de Leon and Glen Iris, when the market was opened at 7 o'clock Saturday morning. All of the spaces in the new market building were taken and late comers backed their trucks up to the concrete pavement surrounding the building to serve customers.

Eighteen Georgia counties were represented by purveyors of fresh produce direct from the farms, two having come more than 200 miles to participate in the opening of the new market. A check revealed that 53 different products were on sale, with seasonable vegetables and berries predominating, together with country eggs, butter and chickens.

At 10:30 the market was formally opened by L. H. Beall, manager of the Atlanta branch of Sears, Roebuck & Company, who stated that the object in opening the market was to afford farmers an opportunity to find a ready cash market for farm produce. He then introduced Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, who lauded the enterprise as the real start of a statewide movement that would eventually result in the farmers of Georgia growing and marketing direct to the consumers a substantial proportion of the half billion dollars' worth of foodstuffs consumed in the state every year. Dr. Soule also stressed the necessity of a larger consumption of vegetables for the benefit of health, and pointed out that by patronizing the farmers who brought their produce to the market direct from the farm the money spent by the consumer would be kept in the state instead of going to other parts of the country, and in this way a substantial form of farm relief would come to farmers of the state.

Interest that the market has created was evidenced by the presence of some 50 county agricultural agents, while a large number of farmers who did not bring produce were present to get ideas and information that would enable them to participate in future market days. At present the market will be open on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays, and the management will extend the facilities as rapidly as demand justifies.

GROUP WILL PRESENT MUSIC WEEK CONCERT

Three Well-Known Artists Will Feature Wednesday Morning Musicale.

Contributing to the observance of National Music Week, the Atlanta Music Club will give one of its series of morning musicales at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning in the auditorium of the Wesley Memorial church, it was announced Saturday by Miss Nana Tucker, program chairman of the club.

The program as arranged by Miss Tucker will present Mrs. Frances Stovall Felder, concert pianist, in two groups of piano numbers; Mrs. George H. McKee, lyric sporano, in a group of 18th century songs of her native France, and an aria from an old opera of the 17th century, and John Hoffman, well-known baritone, in a group of songs by modern composers. Miss Irene Leftwich will be the accompanist for Mrs. McKee; Mrs. Blanch Roberts McCowan will accompany Mr. Hoffman.

Mrs. Felder's numbers will include a group of concert etudes, F Sharp Major, by Arensky; A Flat Major, Raff, and D Flat Major, Liszt; and an interesting group of finely contrasted sea pieces, "A Song of the Sea," by Harriet Ware; "To the Sea," by MacDowell; and "The Sea," by Palmgren. Mrs. McKee will give three songs from "Bergerettes and Pastourelles" (Old French), by Weckerlin, and an aria, "Bois Epais," from the opera "Amadis," by Lully. Mr. Hoffman's songs will be "Love, I Have Won You," by Landon Ronald; "The Floral Dance," by Moss, and "De Gray Owl," by Dudley Buck.

Mrs. Wilmer L. Moore, president of the club, will hold the customary short business session at 10:30 o'clock preceding the program, which will begin promptly at 11.

Other officers are Roy Williams, vice president; Joe Tidmore, secretary, and Herbert Hitch, editor of the Democratic Digest, party organ. Ajax a S. A. E. member and the new head, succeeds Bob Strozier. He will begin work on his master's degree next year.

Management of Draughon's Announces Change in Name

Announcement is made by Hugh R. Todd, president, that Draughon's Practical Business College will be known in the future as the Draughon School of Commerce and that beginning June 1 the institution will make high school graduation or its equivalent an entrance requirement.

Associated with Mr. Todd in the direction of the school is Clark Harrison, vice president and manager of the institution. Mr. Todd and Mr. Harrison have been associated in the school for ten years and all during this time have worked to elevate its standards, particularly by inducing the better prepared young people to enter the school, by improving the equipment and the staff of offficers and teachers.

For several years the management of Draughon's has recommended that young people finish high school before attempting business training. The ruling now to make high school graduation or its equivalent an entrance requirement, however, does not apply to night school and extension work, it is announced.

The Draughon School of Commerce under the new arrangement will offer all of the regular courses taught before, ranging in time from seven to twelve months. It will especially emphasize secretarial training, executive secretarial training, accounting and the Walton higher accounting. The full course requires eighteen months and the school is in session all year.

The summer institute for commercial teachers has been merged with the regular courses, and only those who have earned units required of commercial teachers in the schools of Georgia will be admitted to this particular department.

Mr. Todd is a man of broad experience in literary and commercial education. He attended the public schools of South Carolina and a preparatory and academic school in North Carolina. From assistant teacher he forged his way to the top in the school in which he was educated for business. Mr. Todd is connected with several big business enterprises of this community and takes an active part in fraternal and civic affairs. He has been president of the school for 15 years.

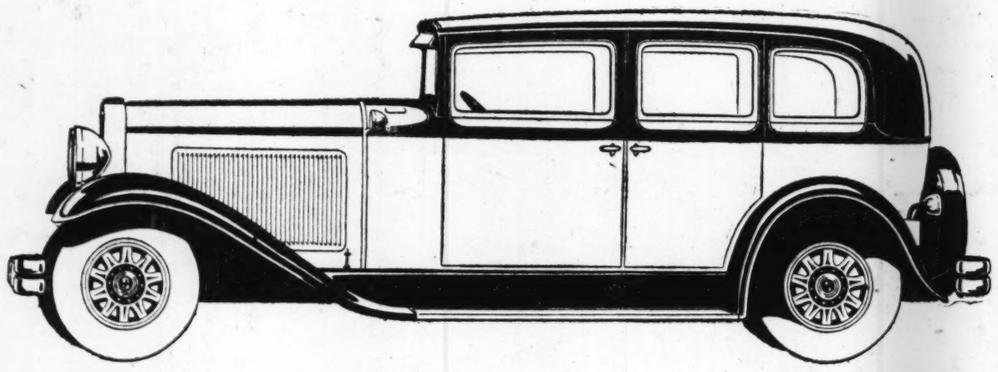

Mr. Harrison attended the public schools of Kentucky and was graduated from a teachers' training college with the degree of bachelor of commercial science and master of accounts. After being graduated Mr. Harrison taught at this college for six years. He headed the commercial department of Fulton High school, Atlanta, for two years and has been officially connected with Draughon's since 1920. In this time he has completed the degree work in commerce at Georgia Tech. Mr. Harrison is active in church and civic work.

GIRLS' HI CLUB VISITS BRENAU

Girls High knows no such thing as leisure with all the pleasures and inevitable work that accompany the approach of June.

Friday night, amateur night, the G. H. S. orchestra played at the Empire theater. They were awarded $10 for the best presentation according to the applause of the audience.

Two short plays and musical numbers comprised a most enjoyable program presented by the French Club of Commercial at an assembly of G. H. S. students taking French, on Thursday, April 24.

A surprise, senior assembly was called Monday afternoon for the formal addition of two new members to cum laude. Katherine Spear and Jessie Gardner, who have been in Girls' High only a few months, were the honored students. These will be the last elections to the society for this term.

Brenau invited the G. H. S. athletic association to its annual playday exercises last Saturday. Miss Caldwell, the club sponsor, and Miss Patton, of the math. department, accompanied 10 of the girls on the trip. Everybody participated in the games and had a "day of real sport."

High 4 is enjoying having Miss Baker from Agnes Scott with us this week and next.

Low 5 is studying about corn as the first food of the colonial people. They are interested to see how the corn industry has developed since colonial times.

High 5 is very glad to have so many children in its class qualify for athletic buttons. Now we must watch our scholarship and conduct in order to obtain them.

High and Low 6 have a tulip garden of pretty blooms which they are proud of. They welcomed a new pupil, Eumon Grace, to their room this week.

You Can't Tell How Much Fame Awaits Picture

Thirty years ago a typical little American boy went off with his mother to have his picture taken. The little boy arrived at the photographer's, sat, squirmed, listened to the birdie and finally was released from the ordeal. Whereupon he immediately dashed out with a loud whoop to rejoin his gang.

Just a typical boy and a typical scene—but from that point on the ensuing events were anything but typical. For while your picture or mine would have been put away to be dragged out when friends came to call, the air being filled with "isn't he cute" and "he has his father's eyes"—that lad's picture became familiar to millions of people all over the United States. Dressed in a slicked and high boots, he had become the "Nneeda Boy," one of the most famous trade marks in the country.

At the beginning of the twentieth century, the National Biscuit Company having just inaugurated its "in-er seal," damp-proof wrappers was seeking a trade symbol that would portray this new feature and serve as a reminder to the thousands who were using its products.

It was suggested that a typical young boy would be very appropriate and appealing. He could be dressed in a slicker and high boots, thus conveying the idea of the waterproof feature of the new "in-er seal" (N. B. C. Nneeda) wrapper. A real flesh and blood kid, so attired, would be a unique trade character.

A little boy was decided upon, a little boy that must have undeniable charm and be a typical and at the same time a distinctive representative of the million little boys he was to personify. And so this little boy became famous as the "Nneeda Boy."

Today the boy is known and as he looks at the "Nneeda Boy" for which he posed is probably saying, "You can't tell how famous your picture may become."

Arcade Directors Will Meet Tuesday

Directors of the Arcade Co-operative Association will meet Tuesday at 10 a. m. in the club rooms of Peachtree Arcade building to make plans for the summer work of the association. The Arcade Association is made up of tenants of the Arcade building, and is affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association.

Spring Street Pupils Visit Japan

Third grade pupils of Spring Street school, with Mrs. L. G. Rayfield as teacher, are studying the customs of Japan. As a Japanese project, the pupils made costumes and articles used in Japan. In the picture are shown Mary Lee Davison, seated in the jinrikisha; Lillian Roberts, standing, and John Parmale, serving as coolie.

MURPHY STUDENTS CARVED FROM SOAP IN ART CLASSES

The programs given by our P.-T. A. at John B. Gordon school on Thursday night and at Kirkwood school on Friday night were a success both financially and artistically. We appreciate all the fine things our parents and teachers do for us in their association.

Our ball team is having some fine experience now playing other schools. We played Hoke Smith Tuesday, with a score of 7 to 4 in favor of Hoke Smith. Our star players in this game were Marshall Shaw and Clarence Strother.

Soap sculpture is a new and interesting project in our art classes now. We carve animals and human figures from ivory soap. We first draw the figures to get practice in correct proportion. Then we try our skill as soap sculptors. Our finished water color posters are finished and very pretty.

We are working toward 100 per cent perfect teeth and we feel sure we will have a holiday soon.

Columbia Exercises Start Next Sunday

The 102d annual announcement for a graduating class of Columbia Theological seminary will be held in Decatur from May 11 to May 14, this year.

The program begins Sunday, May 11, with the delivery by Dr. Dunbar H. Ogden, of Mobile, Ala., of the baccaulaureate sermon in the Central Presbyterian church of Atlanta. Rev. Herbert V. Carson, of Montgomery, Ala., will deliver the missionary address Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the Decatur Presbyterian church.

Tuesday will be given over to the annual meeting of the board of directors and the commencement exercises will begin at 10:30 Wednesday, May 14, with the address of Rev. E. L. Hill, of Athens, to the graduating class after which degrees will be conferred and certificates awarded.

Emory 'Y' Handbook Staff Is Announced

Max Hall, editor of the Emory Y. M. C. A. Handbook for 1930-31, has announced his staff. Bill Bailey will be associate editor. Other assistants will be Henry Bowden, Dave Goldwasser, James May, Albert Ashley, and Burness Moore. P. Letheridge Smith will be the business manager.

Many Atlantans To Attend Credit Meet At Dallas

Atlanta business houses will be well represented at the annual convention of the National Association of Credit Men at Dallas, Texas, during the week of May 12, according to Fred H. Sned, secretary-manager of the Atlanta Association of Credit Men, who said Saturday that the following delegates have registered for the trip: P. M. Millians, of Ernest L. Rhodes Company, who has been president of the Atlanta association for two terms; F. B. Ramey, of the Texas Company; H. D. Carter, of Dougherty-Little-Redwine Company; E. W. Gottenstrater, Touche, Niven & Company; J. L. Moore, of The Journal; D. W. Everett, Armour & Company; R. L. Attaway, Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company; J. F. Meador, Meador-Pasley Co.; S. R. Partridge, of Carhartt Overall Company; H. P. Fleming, of Continental Trust Company, Macon; P. P. Hanley, Grinnell, Inc.

Milton W. Bell, of the federal reserve bank of Atlanta, will accompany the Atlanta delegation to attend the meeting of the Robert Morris Associates which is a part of the national convention of credit men, and is an organization of bankers.

Mr. Sned stated that the annual convention of the national association, with which the Atlanta association is affiliated, is known among business leaders as the National Credit Congress, and that its sessions are devoted to strengthening credit technique so that business may be kept sound and wholesome.

Experiments indicate that roasts run through with copper skewers are not only juicier and more tender than those baked in the ordinary way, but also require 30 per cent less time for cooking.

PEEPLES SCHOOL PUPILS PRESENT MAY DAY PROGRAM

Our time is taken up this week getting ready for our May Day program on Friday afternoon.

Lester Wilson has been chosen queen of the May and will be crowned on that day. Joy Simons will be maid of honor to the queen. Forrest Gee has been appointed herald and will announce the program.

Children of Low 3 as court jesters in our school colors will first dance before the queen. Then children of our own country will entertain her.

High 2 in savage dress will give the Indian dance.

Low 6 will present Oglethorpe, Tomochichi and their attendants making a peace pact and founding our state in pantomime and song.

Low 5 will dance the Virginia reel in colonial style and Low 2 as old-time country lads and lassies will frisk to "Pop Goes the Weasel."

The march of the red, white and blue by High 1 and the parade of the jolly little marines by High and Low Kindergarten will end our homeland entertainment.

From the land of make-believe will come the Mother Goose family to give Mother Goose a surprise party.

Then children from foreign lands will do honor to the May queen in their native costumes.

Then come Greeks from Low 4; Norwegians from High 4; Dutch children from High 3-II, and Japanese from High 3-I, in dance and march.

The last thing on the program will be the maypole dance by High 5 in rainbow colors.

JOY SIMONS.

O'KEEFE JR. HIGH PUPILS NOMINATE CLASS OFFICIALS

Officers for each grade were nominated last week at O'Keefe. The officers nominated were: Governor, lieutenant governor and secretary for each grade. Also, a permanent position for each of these was nominated. These permanent officers are elected from the graduating class.

On May 9 Miss Lankford will put on her operetta. The title of this annual activity among O'Keefe students is "The Toymaker." It promises to be a successful fete at O'Keefe. It will be held in the school auditorium, as seats have been installed now.

May 22 the annual activity banquet will be held. This banquet may be attended by all students participating in an activity during the year for the small price of 10 cents. Every year a large crowd of school students attend.

O'Keefe's baseball team defeated Bass Thursday, April 24, to the tune of 10-8. That game has inspired in the O'Keefe team the confidence required for it to win the baseball championship. We hope they do!

—MELVIN POLLOCK.

CALHOUN SCHOOL PUPILS WILL SEE ART EXHIBITION

All Calhoun is looking forward with great pleasure to the art exhibit tao be held May 5 through the ninth.

The first grade is busy making May baskets to take home to their mothers.

The high-second is making posters of some of the pictures in the art exhibit. They planted some chrysanthemums and primroses in their garden.

Most of the third grade has bought tickets to the art exhibit and the others are going to buy them.

The pupils of the high-fourth are delighted that they have two good shuttle relay teams, boys and girls. Roy Day and Paul Segars have qualified for bronze athletic buttons.

High-fifth's garden is beginning to look like they want it to look. They have such good times working in it. They hope to have a good dodge-ball team if they can stop mumps and measles.

High-sixth is working hard on the volley ball game. They enjoy playing with low-sixth.

The sight conservation low is making May baskets filled with English dogwood and daisies.

Dr. R. H. Oppenheimer Returns After Leave

Dr. Russell H. Oppenheimer, dean of the School of Medicine, Emory, is back in Atlanta after a four months' leave of absence for observation and study of the methods of medical education in clinics and other medical institutions.

He spent a month at the Mayo clinic, Rochester, Minn., and a month in the medical clinic at Boston, Mass. He also visited the McGill University School, and the Cleveland, Ohio, clinic. The Emory dean also attended the meetings of the American College of Physicians at Minneapolis, Minn., and the Council on Medical Education for American Medical Association, Chicago.

HOME PARK CLASS VISITS STUDENT TO SEE HIS PETS

Next week Home Park is going to observe National Music Week. We are glad to have Miss Smith back as she was out nearly two weeks on account of illness.

The high sixth grade has been working hard on arithmetic and other subjects so we may go to O'Keefe in June. The high six is also spending some time playing volleyball. The tulips we planted are blooming and are very pretty. Some of them are red, some crimson, and others pink. We are very sorry to have Twinkle Lively out of school on account of measles. She is one of Home Park school's reporters.

The low sixth grade has been working for penmanship certificates. Our game is bat ball and we are very much interested in it. All of us are trying to improve in our work because we want to be promoted. We are glad to have Mildred Lyon back in school.

We are enjoying writing a letter to Daniel Nathaniel in Hilo, Hawaii.

Low-5 are enjoying playing potato relay. They are glad to have Audrey Johnson, C. R. Powell, Luke Fowler and Clarence Blackwood back at school after an absence caused by measles.

High-4 pupils are sorry to have so many of our classmates out with mumps and measles, and hope they will soon be back. We are putting in some hard practice on shuttle relay.

Low-4 is very glad to have two representatives go to make impromptu speeches May 1. They are Dorothy Park and Edwin Eberhart.

High-3 has made a very pretty Dutch poster. We are now fixing a book about "Our Trip to Holland."

The children in Low-3 are enjoying reading "Old Testament Stories" and learning much of the life of the early Hebrews.

In High 1-II, many of our classmates have been absent on account of illness and we are very glad to welcome them back again.

We are very much interested in making pretty May baskets.

Low-1 is glad to have the children back at school who have been sick with measles. The pupils of this grade enjoyed a visit to see the pet rabbits owned by Leon Mathis. He has five mother rabbits with babies, and a mother dog with six little puppies. The children enjoyed seeing the pets very much.

The kindergarten belongs to the Clean-Up Club, and are working hard to keep everything pretty.

MARY RUTH POLLOCK.

CENTRAL SCHOOL SELECTS EDITOR

Ford Rives, popular member of W. J. Scott's journalism class and a student of Central Night school for the past six years, won the highest average in the recent journalism examination and is automatically appointed editor of "Modern Knight," Central Night's monthly publication, for next year.

Bill Watson and John W. Fowler were runners-up, both making very good marks.

Mr. Rives has been on the staff of Modern Knight for several years and is considered thoroughly qualified to take charge. He was recently elected vice president of the student council, is president of the Writers' Club and an active member of the Henry W. Grady Literary Society. Mr. Rives will edit the May 1 issue of Modern Knight, while the present editor handles the annual.

Central Night school will send a large delegation to the annual convention of the Georgia Scholastic Press Association, to be held at the University of Georgia, Athens, on Friday, May 9.

Among those making the trip are: Carroll Summer, principal of Central Night; W. J. Scott, journalism instructor; Fred L. Hester, editor of Modern Knight; Esta Siegel, Lewis Moseley, Tom Wyatt, Bill Watson, Ford Rives, May Bray, Wesley Jennings, Edgar Sheridan, Esma Rives, Edna Melander and David Edward Ungar, secretary to the principal.

Modern Knight is a charter member of the Georgia Scholastic Press Association and is considered a strong contender for the annual prize offered by the Athens Banner-Herald.

—FRED L. HESTER.

LUCKIE SCHOOL HAS TWO SPRING ENTERTAINMENTS

Our school is going to have a spring entertainment Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock and Friday night at 7:45 o'clock. We hope all our friends will come out and see our program. We think it will be very enjoyable.

Low 2 has had many children out because of measles, but they are getting well and beginning to come back.

Low 1 has a play about the barnyard. They have some very attractive costumes. They have a goose, white duck and some little hens.

Low 5 has just finished a new history border based on different people.

BILL ECHOLS.

KIRKWOOD PUPILS IN KINDERGARTEN PURCHASE DUCKS

Low kindergarten purchased some ducks from the Atlanta hatchery and enjoy them very much.

Tuesday the high kindergarten classes became dairymen. They churned to butter some milk that a mother sent and had a tea party of butter, jam, crackers and buttermilk.

High 1-II is working hard on their grocery store.

Low 2-I has a new terrarium with a white rabbit in it.

Walter Benson, of High 3-III, brought a cunning little brown rabbit to school.

Low 4 is working on a bird play, "Crowning the Brown Thrasher as Queen of Birds."

Low 5 enjoyed playing potato relay with Whitefoord and Mary Lin last week.

High 5-I and High 5-II have been working on a garden.

Low 6 is enjoying building a medieval castle.

High 6-I is proud of Mary Bert Cain, who represented the school in impromptu speaking.

—BARBARA BARLOW.

PRYOR ST. SCHOOL PUPILS DRAMATIZE STORY OF JOSEPH

Kindergarten is working on picture books.

Low 1 is reading about the three bears and making them.

High 1 is having a good time sewing.

Low 2 is making animals out of beaver board. They are also making baskets with honeysuckle vines as the cave men did.

High 2 is busy making May Day baskets to hang on mother's door.

Low 3 is dramatizing the Bible story of Joseph.

The children of High 3 are planning a Dutch party. They will make their own refreshments.

High 4 is enthusiastic over shuttle relay. They hope to win in the final contest.

High 5 has been making some product maps to show fishing, hunting and sheep raising in this country.

High 6 is playing practice games in volley ball with the neighboring schools. This class is enthusiastic over the improvement of their work in arithmetic.

—ELIZABETH WILSON.

COMMERCIAL EDITORS ATTEND CONVENTION

Reuben Crimm, editor-in-chief of the Co-Ed Leader; Brodus Sanders, associate editor; Hilda Isakson, reporter, and Miss Adelaide Cunningham, faculty adviser, will attend the Georgia Scholastic Press Association convention on Friday, May 9, at the University of Georgia, in Athens.

One feature of the convention will be the round-table discussion, which will be concerned with various editorial and business problems connected with the school paper, magazine, or annual. The various representatives attending this meeting will relate simply and informally their own difficulties and how they have met them.

A bound volume of the Co-Ed Leader for the current year has been entered in the contest for the best bound volume of school publications.

Hilda Isakson and Bill Grennor won the race for boy and girl presidents of student government of Commercial in the election held by all junior and senior classes Thursday morning, April 24. Bertha Goldberg ran against Hilda and Oscar Dwoskin against Bill Grennor. These students were nominated by the junior classes on April 4.

Campaign speeches were made by the four candidates Wednesday, April 4, during the fifth period. Frances Braselton was campaign manager for Hilda Isakson; Sarah Rivers for Bertha Goldberg; Bob Evans, for Bill Grennor, and Hyman King for Oscar Dwoskin.

—MABEL CARPENTER.

SPRING STUDENTS ENJOY A DEBATE IN SIXTH GRADE

High six-two has enjoyed a debate.

The fifth grade has selected the dodge ball team to play next Tuesday.

High four-one has added a salamander to their aquarium. They find it a very interesting creature.

High and low-three were delighted to have a Japanese picture taken for the Constitution.

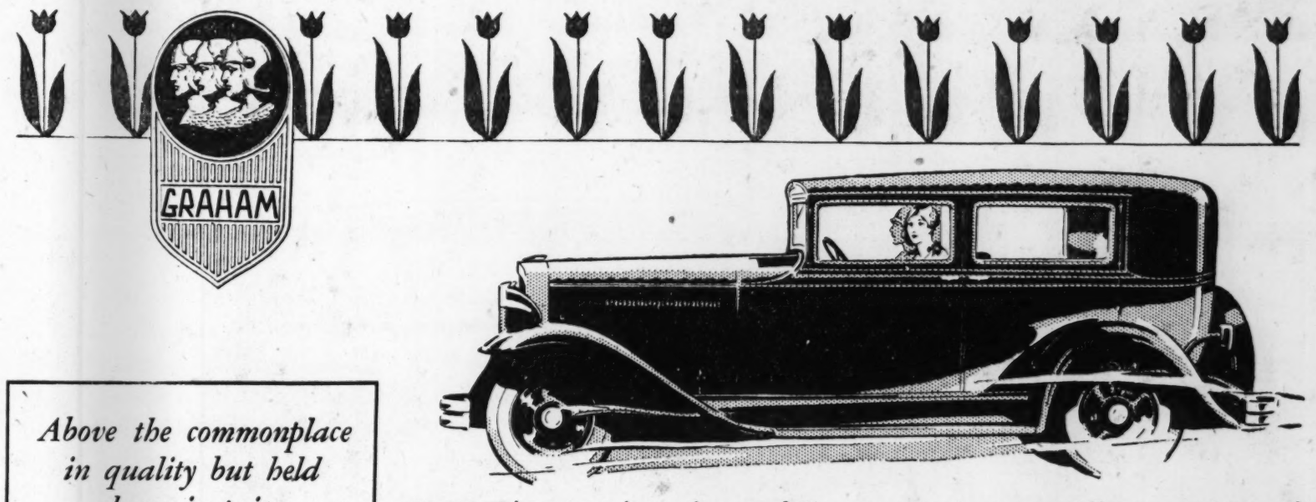

The high second grade is enjoying the study of Japan and the natives of that country.

—BARBARA GREENE.

State Editor Commends Work Of Late Mrs. L. H. Raines

BY ADA RAMP WALDEN, Editor.

Outstanding among the patriotic women of Georgia who held on high the torch that others might carry on in the great work they had undertaken, is the name of the late Mrs. L. H. Raines, of Savannah. No more fitting epitaph could be written of this patriotic woman than "She hath done what she could."

As the little Anna Davenport, a child of 10 years of age, she accompanied the women on their visits to the hospitals and soldiers' camps, when bandages and food were supplied. She witnessed suffering that few of her tender age seldom saw; yet, it served to imbue her with the unfaltering, unquenchable devotion to the cause that found expression throughout her life in various channels.

As her people passed through the trials of reconstruction following the great struggle her devotion to her beloved Georgia was deepened and intensified. As soon as the movement tending toward the organization of the United Daughters of the Confederacy was begun she centered her energies in organizing the charter chapter of Savannah, which had its origin in the home of Mrs. Pope Barrow, daughter of General Henry R. Jackson, and the first cousin of Mrs. Raines.

A life work began for Mrs. Raines with the granting of that charter, and never once did her enthusiasm wane, her efforts weaken, in the work of establishing and perpetuating the parent organization, which some years ago was referred to by a national commander of the G. A. R. as the "most powerful organization of women in the world, because they are bound by ties of sentiment." That she designed the official insignia of the U. D. C. is itself a memorial, and that for six years she served as custodian of the Cross of Honor was another. At the initial meeting of the organization she was also elected as the first vice president. And now, in loving memory, the U. D. C., at its convention in Biloxi, Miss., in 1929, decided to raise the sum of $8,000 with which to establish the Raines memorial fund. The retiring president general, Mrs. W. C. N. Merchant, who had for years worked in harmony with Mrs. Raines, and appreciated the spirit with which the honored one centered her energies, herself recommended the adoption of the recommendation:

"That the endowment fund of $8,000 be created, the interest from this fund to be a loan for a year to a student doing graduate, vocational work, and to be available when as much as $4,000 has been invested. The collecting of this fund will be under the supervision of the committee on education, U. D. C., and the chairmen of education in divisions and chapters where there are no divisions."

To establish this loan fund will be entirely in line with the outstanding features of the life of this patriotic woman, in whose home was a room, the Confederate Den, in which she worked many hours of the day and night, and in which hundreds of letters were written with the organizing of U. D. C. chapters in view.

The general organization has contributed $1,000 to the memorial to Mrs. Raines, and now that the sum may soon materialize, and that the members and divisions may have the opportunity of memorializing one who did much that the U. D. C. might live, a contribution of 12 cents per capita is asked, and surely no individual member will regard this as burdensome. Mrs. John W. Daniel, 102 East Henry street, Savannah, is division chairman, and it is urged that every contributor send donations to this fund to Mrs. Daniel before June 1.

"The long procession of school children bearing Confederate flags and flowers was an inspiring sight," writes one who witnessed the exercises under the auspices of Kennesaw chapter, Marietta. "Arriving at the cemetery they banked their flags and flowers at the base of the monument—a beautiful tribute to the 3,000 heroes sleeping beneath its shadow." Following the march to the cemetery the exercises were held in the courthouse, Colonel George Napier delivering the oration, presented by Leon Blair. Colonel Napier's subject was "The Private—the Man Behind the Gun," and was one of the most eloquent addresses ever heard on a similar occasion in Marietta. The musical program was most beautiful and appropriate. The few remaining veterans were honored guests at the luncheon served by the chapter, those having part in the exercises sharing the honors.

Colonel Lawrence S. Camp delivered the oration at the impressive exercises held in Fairburn at the Baptist church Friday, April 25, in the observance of Memorial Day, the school children participating in the program with songs and readings. Another interesting feature was the reading by Catherine Hall, of her essay on "Jefferson Davis," which had won the chapter prize. "The Origin of Memorial Day" was presented in dialog by Catherine Stevens and Ethel Lee McLarin, wearing costumes of the '60s. Three Confederate veterans were present. These exercises were under the auspices of the Campbell County chapter, of which Miss Giralda Brooks is president; Mrs. J. C. Reese, program chairman.

Hartwell chapter held its memorial exercises at the court house Saturday, April 26, when the large assemblage present heard Rev. W. J. DeBardeleben deliver an inspiring address, followed by Rev. Frank Jenkins and Rev. R. E. Telford and Professor Maughon, who made brief but interesting talks. Mrs. DeWitt Teasley, president, presented crosses of service to Dr. W. E. McCurry, of Hartwell, and Dr. T. R. Gaines, of Anderson, in recognition of their World War service. Following the dinner, at which the veterans, wives and widows were guests, the graves of the Confederate soldiers were visited and decorated with Confederate flags, wreaths and blossoms.

Memorial Day was appropriately observed by Clarksville U. D. C. with a public program at the school, characterized by patriotic music, readings and a Memorial Day playlet by the children of the primary grades, after which a splendid address on the real meaning of Memorial Day was given by Miss Addie Bass, of Piedmont College, Demarest. The local prize in the U. D. C. essay contest on Jefferson Davis was presented to Carol Love, who won over 17 contestants; and Janet Middlemas won second place. A committee of the U. D. C. placed evergreen wreaths on the graves of the 48 Confederate veterans who rest in Clarkesville.

Most impressive were the memorial services sponsored by Woodland chapter and which were held at the Primitive Baptist church, Friday, that day having been selected in order that the school children could attend. The decorations were of Confederate flags and the garlands and baskets of flowers that were later placed on the graves of veterans and wives of veterans. The ushers, Misses Kate Peeler, Willene Webster, Mary Whittington and Thelma Miller, were gowned in white, with arm bands of the Confederate colors of red and white. As the processional, "God of Our Fathers," was played by Miss Annie Clark, the members of the chapter entered in a body, followed by the World War veterans, the sons of Confederate veterans, and last, the school children. One of the interesting features was the long line of candles before the altar, each representing one of the 36 veterans who had passed away. As their names were called the ushers lighted the candles. "There Is No Death" was sung by Mrs. W. J. Braddy in the hush that followed. The address, which was splendidly delivered by James F. Woodall, superintendent of the high school, and namesake of the James F. Woodall chapter, C. of C.

The U. D. C. Chatter Box

Draping the wall in the rear of the rostrum at the exercises Memorial Day at the high school in Hephzibah, under the auspices of Walter A. Clark chapter, was a huge Confederate flag, bullet-torn and stained with the ravages of time. It is the property of Mrs. W. Edward Clark, of Augusta, and was formerly the possession of her father, the late C. S. Guyton, of Lawrence county, lieutenant colonel of the 57th Georgia regiment. When hostilities ceased, the regiment was in Vicksburg, Mississippi. Captain Davis, who could not brook the idea of relinquishing to the enemy the flag which had gone through many terrific battles, secreted it in Colonel Guyton's saddle blankets. Not until he had reached home did he know of its presence; but since that day it has been a treasured relic.

Some time ago, the editor reproduced in her Chatterbox column, on the society page of the Augusta Chronicle, a letter found near Camden, S. C., a short while after the Union forces had evacuated that place, and which for many years had been preserved in the scrap-book of the late Miss Mary Hall, of Augusta, who was for years a conspicuous figure in her gray uniform, at Confederate reunions, being honorary life member of Camp 435, U. C. V., of Augusta. Following its appearance in the Chronicle, requests galore came for copies of the paper, and soon there were no more to be had. Recently, since many requests have come to the editor for a copy, she therefore, reproduces it, as copied from the original letter in Miss Hall's scrap book, and which, after having been found in Camden, appeared in the Camden Journal:

"Camp near Camden, S. C.,
"February 26, 1865.

"My dear Wife:

"I have no time for particulars. We have had a glorious time in this state. Unrestricted license to burn and plunder was the order of the day. The chivalry have been stript of most of their valuables. Gold watches, silver pitchers, cups, spoons, forks, etc., are as common in camp as blackberries. The terms of plunder are as follows: The valuables are estimated by companies. Each company is required to exhibit the result of its operations at any given place; one-fifth and first choice falls to the share of the commander-in-chief and staff; one-fifth to the corps commander and staff; one-fifth to field officers and regiment, and two-fifths to the company. Officers are not allowed to join in these expeditions without disguising themselves as privates. One of our corps commanders borrowed a suit of rough clothes from one of our men and was very successful at this place.

"He got a large quantity of silver (among other things an old time silver milk pitcher) and a very fine gold watch from a Mr. DeSaussure at this place. DeSaussure is one of the F. F. V.'s of South Carolina and was made to fork out liberally.

"Officers over the rank of captain are not made to put their plunder in the estimate for general distribution. This is very unfair, and for that reason, in order to protect themselves, subordinate officers and privates keep back everything that they can carry about their persons, such as rings, earrings, breastpins, etc., of which if I live to get home, I have about a quart. I am not joking—I have at least a quart of jewelry for you and the girls—and some No. 1 diamond rings and pins among them. General Sherman has silver and gold enough to start a bank. His share in gold watches and chains alone at Columbia, was 275.

"But I said I could not go into particulars. All the general officers, and many besides, have valuables of every description down to ladies' embroidered handkerchiefs. (I have my share of them too). We took gold and silver enough from the d—— rebels to have redeemed their infernal currency twice over. This, (the currency), whenever we came across it, we burned, as we consider it utterly worthless.

"I wish all the jewelry this army has, could be carried to the 'Old Bay State.' It would deck her out in glorious style; but alas, it will be scattered all over the north and middle states. The d—— niggers, as a general rule, preferred to stay at home—particularly after they found out that we wanted only the able-bodied men (and to tell the truth the youngest and best looking women). Sometimes we took off whole families and plantations of niggers by way of repaying some influential secessionist. But the useless part of these we soon managed to lose—sometimes in crossing rivers, sometimes in other ways.

"I shall write you again from Wilmington, N. C., Goldsboro or some other place in that state. The order to march has arrived and I must close hurriedly. Love to Grandmother and to Charlotte. Take care of yourself and the children. Don't show this letter outside the family.

"Your affectionate husband,
"THOMAS J. MYERS,
"Lieutenant, etc.

"P. S.—I will send this by the first flag of truce to be mailed; unless I have the opportunity of sending it to Hilton Head. Tell Sally I am saving a pearl bracelet and earrings for her. Bob Lambert got the necklace and breastpin of the same set. I am trying to trade him out of them. These were taken from the Misses Jamison, daughters of the president of the South Carolina secession convention. We found these ladies on our march through Georgia."

Of 31 floats in the Apple Blossom festival, featured in Cornelia, and which attracted thousands of visitors from various portions of the state, the Habersham county chapter, U. D. C., won the first prize, $25, for the most original. Mounted on the float, which was artistically draped in bunting of red and white, was an antiquated victoria of the type in vogue during the sixties. On the driver's seat sat a genuine, ante-bellum darkey, 75 years of age, who was born a slave, near Walhalla, S. C. He wore a long coachman's coat and high silk hat. Seated in the vehicle were Mrs. E. D. Reeves, of Clarkesville, whose father and brothers followed the Stars and Bars. She was attired in a quaint costume of flowered silk, with leghorn hat, black lace sunshade, lace mitts and carried an old-fashioned nosegay. Every detail of her costume was pronounced by the judges as historically authentic, as were the costumes of the other occupants. One of these was Mr. William Fry, a Confederate veteran of Habersham county, who wore the uniform of a Confederate soldier; two children, Carolyn Barron and Richard Graves, descendants of surgeons of the Confederate army, were each dressed in quaint costumes worn by children of the period represented.

Into few memorial exercises was injected such touch of pathos, as in those that took place in Crawfordville, under the auspices of the Alexander Stephens chapter, Mrs. C. G. Moore, president. It was the presence of one lone veteran at the exercises consisting mostly of southern songs and the readings, "A Georgia Volunteer" and "They Wore the Gray," following which the graves of the Confederate soldiers were adorned with wreaths and blossoms. To the mind of every one present came the thought that the last of the dwindling gray line would soon aswer the last roll, and assemble no more with those who remain to do homage to their memory.

VALDOSTA, Ga., May 3.—The old custom of "bringing in the May" was observed in the traditional old English May Day festival presented by the physical education department at the Georgia State Woman's college Thursday afternoon under the direction of Miss Leonora Ivey and her assistant, Miss Elizabeth McRee. Taking part were Miss Louise Lastinger, of Valdosta; Miss Myrtle Vick, of Moultrie; Miss Helen Ryon, of Hinesville, and Miss Lucile Wood, of Valdosta; Miss Ruth Norman, of Norman Park; Miss Essye Alligood, of Cairo; Miss Margaret Bullock, of Adel; Miss Evelyn Deariso, of Sylvester; Miss Louise Forbes, of Valdosta; Miss Katherine Harrison, of Bluffton; Miss Marian Laing, of Glennville; Miss Joyce Roberson, of Screven; Miss Mary Mansfield, of Arlington. The queen of the May, Miss Catherine McRee, of Valdosta, a blonde of unusual beauty and charm, was elected to her honored place by her college friends. The maid of honor was Miss Caroline Parrish, of Valdosta, and the ladies-in-waiting were Misses Catherine Maxwell, of Calvary; Louise Tippins, of Reidsville; Ruby Dowling, of Jesup; Virginia Carswell, of Waycross; Martha Caudle, of Valdosta; Ethel Castleberry, of Ashburn; Helen Harrell, of Valdosta; Jenny Williams, of Cordele; Pauline Griffin, of Valdosta; Margaret Warfield, of Savannah.

The queen's other attendants were two heralds, Miss Mary O'Quinn, of Patterson, and Miss Aline Tyson, of Ashburn. Two children, Mary Moore Jackson and William Giddens, served as train bearers. The lords of the court were: Misses Margaret Brabham, of Moultrie; Avrylea Burch, of Valdosta; Grace Chastain, of Thomasville; Dorothy Harper, of Ocilla; Roselle Hatcher, of Donalsonville; Alice Hicks, of Thomasville; Margaret Jennings, of Waycross; Jean Loughridge, of Blackshear; Leta Mae Stripling, of Reidsville; May de Lois Summerlin, of Pelham. Miss Kate Jones, of Riceboro, and Miss Kathryn Sawyer, of Albany, entertained the court with a characteristic gypsy vagabond dance. Miss Louise Lastinger, of Valdosta; Miss Myrtle Vick, of Moultrie, and Miss Louise McMichael, of Quitman, also took part.

Student Government Association of the school met in the rotunda of Ashley hall Friday evening. Miss Mary Alexander, of Nashville, president of the association, presided. Reports were made on the conference of Southern Intercollegiate Association of Student Governments, held at the North Carolina State Woman's college in Greensboro by Miss Mary Alexander, president, and Miss Margaret Bullock, of Adel, president-elect. Dr. R. H. Powell, president of the college, awarded G. S. W. C. emblems to 33 girls. These emblems are awards of merit in extra-curricular activities. The following girls received emblems: Seniors—Misses Evelyn Blanton, Valdosta; Mary Kate Burrows, Valdosta; Evelyn Deariso, Sylvester; Louise Forbes, Valdosta; Dorothy Harper, Ocilla; Marian Laing, Glennville; Dorothy Lile, New Philadelphia, Ohio; Catherine McRee, Valdosta; Kathryn Sawyer, Albany; Hazel Taylor, Valdosta; Myrtle Vick, Hartsfield; Lucile Wood, Valdosta. Juniors—Misses Margaret Brabham, Moultrie; Margaret Bullock, Adel; Grace Chastain, Thomasville; Bertha Ferrell, Quitman; Katherine Harrison, Bluffton; Roselle Hatcher, Donalsonville; Margaret Jennings, Waycross; Kate Jones, Riceboro; Jean Loughridge, Odum; Lilian Patterson, Cordele; Joyce Roberson, Screven; Eunice Seagraves, Hawthorne, Fla.; Leta Mae Stripling, Altamaha; Dorothy Stroud, Valdosta; Margaret Sumner, Poulan; Ann Talbert, Brinson; Mary Winn, Savannah. Sophomores—Misses Agnes Jones, Brunswick; Linnie Mae Hall, Waycross; Lillian Lively, Savannah; Annie Lou Stanaland, Thomasville.

Rural Life Sunday Observed On Fifth Sunday After Easter

One of the important actions taken at the January meeting of the Episcopal home missions council was the decision to promote the observance of Rural Life Sunday throughout the world. Acting upon the suggestion of the secretary for rural work of the national council, the home missions council and the foreign missions conference representing some 25 different Christian bodies, adopted a resolution approving the observance of the fifth Sunday after Easter each year as Rural Life Sunday, and urged all constituent bodies to observe the day, or days, as seemed best to each group and situation. The response from the church at large was very cordial, hundreds of churches holding special services, meetings and programs in furtherance of the plan.

At its meeting in Ames, Iowa, October 12-20, 1929, the section on "Church and Rural Life" approved the observance of Rural Life Sunday and urged groups of every sort to cooperate in making the day fulfill its possibilities for the rural life of the world.

Committee Appointed.

For the furtherance of the movement, the town and country committee of the home missions council appointed a committee on Rural Life Sunday consisting of the Rev. H. W. Foreman, secretary for the work of the Episcopal church, the Rev. M. W. Dawber, of the M. E. church, and the Rev. M. R. Zigler, of the Church of the Brethren. The committee on Rural Life Sunday offered the following resolutions on the observance of Rogation Sunday: "Resolved, That in view of the evident way in which God has blessed the observance of Rural Life Sunday by church and secular agencies throughout the world, the home missions council approved the observance of the fifth Sunday after Easter each year as Rural Life Sunday and commends its observance by all governments, state, secular, farm and church agencies in such ways as may seem practical to them."

Co-operation of Churches.

Rural Life Sunday in reality means that the blossoming of the church's beautiful and historic seasons into its proper place in the life of Christianity as a whole and the world at large. After fifteen hundred years the Christian people of the world are beginning to unite in a common day of prayer to God for His blessing on the farmers and their fields, the ranchmen and their ranges, the shepherds and their flocks and the growers of food throughout the world.

Rural Life Sunday does not mean "another special Sunday;" rather it means the utilization of one of the oldest seasons of the church year for God's glory and the blessing of the peoples of the world who are living upon nature.

Annual Visit to Appleton Home

Once a year the Episcopalians of the diocese of Atlanta visit Appleton church home, in Macon, in a body. All who can will motor to Macon Sunday, May 11, to visit the children there, to enjoy a real picnic and the pleasure of being together.

A group of the Young Woman's Auxiliary of St. Philip's Cathedral is to make the annual pilgrimage to the home to visit its adopted daughter, Lillian Johnston, Sunday, May 11.

Some of the Young Woman's Auxiliary of All Saints' church will make the annual pilgramage to the Appleton church home, in Macon, to visit the child sponsored by the auxiliary on Mother's Day, Sunday, May 11.

District Secretaries of Baptist W. M. U. Announce Rallies for the Month of May

The photograph presents Mrs. J. A. Doster, center; Mrs. W. L. Allen, right, and Mrs. C. B. Babb, left, secretaries, respectively, of the first, second and seventh districts of the Atlanta Baptist Woman's Missionary Union. The photograph is by Bill Mason, staff photographer.

In presenting the pictures of Mesdames W. L. Allen, J. A. Doster and C. B. Babb, an opportunity is afforded to announce their respective district rallies, all of which will occur in the month of May.

Mrs. Allen, secretary, will conduct the rally of the second district at North Atlanta Baptist church, Tuesday, May 6, opening at 10 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. J. D. Cromer, of the Second Baptist church, will lead the devotional period, and the theme of the day will be "Be Ye Steadfast."

Mrs. W. D. Burke, chairman of stewardship for the B. W. M. U., will make the principal address.

An interesting feature of the day will be a pageant, "Seeing the Unseen," which will be presented by Mrs. Norman Pool, first assistant superintendent, the Young Peoples' leaders, Mesdames L. A. Witherspoon, Gordon Weekley, W. H. Carter and M. O. Hemperly, assisted by members of several of the second district churches, Mesdames J. B. Mayfield, E. S. Caldwell, J. M. Patrick, W. R. Murray, C. E. Chapman, Joe Spinks and Miss Jewell Jenkins. Mrs. A. G. Sullivan, second assistant superintendent, has assisted Mrs. Allen in directing the missionary teaching pageant.

The rally of the first district, which will be held at the new First Baptist church, and that of the seventh district, which will be held at Grant Park church, will be announced later by Mrs. Doster, secretary of the first, and Mrs. Babb, of the seventh district.

Congregational Woman's Guild Is Entertained

The Woman's Guild of Central Congregational church gave a garden party Wednesday afternoon, April 30, at the beautiful estate of Mrs. Fred Creswell, on Roswell road. Tables were placed in the gardens along the walks and beside the lily pools. The display of rare iris blooms and roses made a charming setting for the springtime costumes of the guests.

The guild will be held on Wednesday, May 7, at the home of Mrs. R. G. Sawyer, 930 Adair avenue, N. E. This meeting will be a luncheon, followed by a program and business. The guild welcomes the president, Mrs. M. E. Vaughan, back to the group after her prolonged illness.

All-Day Sewing.

A group of United Congregational churchwomen sewed last Tuesday morning and afternoon at the home of Miss Emma Scott, 622 Grant avenue. When there is a fifth Tuesday in the month it is an all-day sewing meeting day, and the Home for the Friendless is the recipient of many new garments. Luncheon was served. Some new members were welcomed to the fellowship. A very large group heard the Rev. Ernest C. Partridge, of Aleppo, Syria, at the Wednesday evening meeting at Dr. and Mrs. W. T. McElveen's apartment, in the 1050 Ponce de Leon apartment.

Lutheran Class Holds Meeting.

The Matrons class, Lutheran Church of the Redeemer, met recently. Social service work for the Home of the Friendless featured the meeting. Luncheon was served by Mrs. C. F. Hansen, Mrs. Abe Massel, Mrs. William Fauss and Mrs. Ray Sox. Mrs. H. C. Chatham presided and Mrs. W. B. Correll gave a discussion on "Christian Hope."

St. Mark's Missionary Auxiliary To Give Silver Tea May 7

Circle No. 9 of the St. Mark Missionary Auxiliary, Mrs. W. H. Hall chairman, will have a silver tea Wednesday afternoon, May 7, from 3:30 until 5:30 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. John S. Owens, 60 Eleventh street, N. E. Members and friends of the auxiliary are cordially invited.

WOMANLESS WEDDING WILL BE GIVEN.

The "Womanless Wedding" recently given by the men of Inman Park Methodist church, will be repeated May 16 in the Moreland school auditorium. A musicale will be given in connection with the wedding. Tickets are 50c for adults and 25c for children.

MRS. CHARLES GRAHAM HONORS CIRCLES.

Mrs. Charles Graham, president of the Trinity Missionary Society, and her mother, Mrs. M. L. Isham, entertained two circles of this society at their home on Pace's Ferry road recently. Circles one and two were the guests. Miss Kate Massey, a trained Bible student, gave the devotional with an interpretation of the song, "Lead Kindly Light," as the main topic. Readings were given by Mrs. Mary Johnson Blackburn from her book, "Mammy Days."

Those present were: Mesdames M. L. Isham, Charles Graham, F. G. Crout, Robert Bradford, R. R. Treadway, C. M. Richardson, Mary Blackburn, John Woods, Willis McCravy, J. Tom Smith, T. A. Blackwell, F. M. Akers, Johnson Sutton, W. O. Bagwell, Fannie Francis, L. L. Wallis, J. C. Bowie, L. J. Davis, Susy T. Griffin, C. T. Printup, W. H. Higginbothem, M. Burns, Ben J. Potter, W. M. Leppard, J. B. Adams, J. R. Reynolds, Miss Kate Massey and Miss Alma Sturdivant.

PARK ST. CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING.

The Business Women's circle of Park Street Methodist W. M. S., met Monday evening, April 28 at the Wren's Nest. Mrs. Arthur Hale, hostess, served supper to the members assisted by Mrs. L. W. Bradley and Mrs. Ralph Ramsey. After the business meeting, Miss Bertha Tucker, missionary on furlough from Cuba, and Mrs. W. Frank Wells, of Hapeville, gave interesting and inspiring talks.

The circle was organized little more than two years ago and is growing rapidly and is one of the most active in the W. M. S. having at this time 25 members, 22 of whom were present Monday night. Mrs. V. L. Brigman is chairman of this circle. The next meeting will be held May 26 and after the business meeting a "white elephant" sale will be held for the purpose of increasing funds for social service and missionary work.

PAGEANT GIVEN IN INMAN PARK.

Sunday evening, May 4, at 7:30 o'clock a pageant "The Awakening of Mr. Tightwad," will be presented at the Inman Park Methodist church by the ladies of the Oakland City M. E. church, under the auspices of Circle No. 6 of the Inman Park M. E. church. The public is invited. No admission will be charged.

Presbyterian Evening Circle Meets Thursday

The Evening Circle of the Morningside Presbyterian church meets Thursday evening at 6:30 o'clock. An interesting program has been planned and all business women are invited. New officers recently installed for the coming year are: President, Miss Margaret Rusk; vice president, Miss Nellie McIntyre; secretary, Mrs. E. M. Carmain; corresponding secretary, Miss Mamie Taylor; treasurer, Mrs. Frances Cross, and counsellor, Mrs. E. V. Benson. Mrs. E. V. Benson will teach the Book of Romans, using the devotional hour of each meeting.

Briefly Told

In the near future, the St. Mary's Guild of St. Philip's cathedral will give a silver tea at the home of Dean and Mrs. Raimundo de Ovies. Not only will silver coins be acceptable, but broken bits of old silver or gold, also; broken spoons, old glass rims, backs from combs, anything old silver or gold that can be melted will be most gratefully received.

The women of St. Philip's cathedral are planning a carnival for the end of May. Announcements will be made later.

Miss Helen Myles, secretary at All Saints' Episcopal church, is ill at her home on Argonne drive.

The Young People's Service League of St. Philip's cathedral is staging a show—several vaudeville acts and a one-act play, by Audria Bandy Gray, at the chapter house, Tuesday evening, May 6, at 8 o'clock. The proceeds from this play will go toward the expenses of a delegate to the Sewanee summer training school.

The Federated Church Women of Georgia as an organization which is interested both in the physical and spiritual welfare of humanity, heartily indorse the celebration of the Health Week which is now being observed. The organization lends its moral support to the movement and especially the splendid and instructive programs which are being put on by the schools and other organizations.

Mrs. George Westmoreland, president of the board of trustees of the Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home and prominent official of W. M. U. of Georgia, will be among the delegates attending the annual convention of southwide W. M. U. meeting in New Orleans, La., May 12-14. Mrs. Westmoreland has been in Dallas, Texas, for several weeks visiting her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Prade.

Mrs. Wash Watts, of Greenville, S. C., returned missionary from Palestine, will be one of the principal speakers on the program of Baptist W. M. U state meeting at Bessie Tift College, Forsyth, June 10-12. Mrs. Watts will speak on the 11th.

Dr. C. R. Stauffer, pastor of the First Christian church, will speak to the Business Woman's Circle of Capitol Avenue Baptist church Sunday, May 4, at 6 o'clock. The remainder of the program will be a musical one on which some of Atlanta's most talented musicians will take part. Business women of other churches who are interested in this work are cordially invited to attend this meeting.

Prominent Baptists Will Attend Convention in New Orleans, La.

New Orleans, the Baptist convention city of 1930, is not only the largest of southern cities, but can certainly be classed among the most interesting and hospitable to visitors and tourists. All New Orleans has extended a most cordial invitation to southern Baptists to visit their city May 12-18.

Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia has published in the Christian Index of April 24, for the benefit of women who expect to go to New Orleans, the train schedules and railroad rates to New Orleans. Mrs. McMahon says: "Delegates and visitors to the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union (auxiliary to the Southern Baptist Convention), which convenes in New Orleans May 12-14, inclusive, will be interested in the train schedules and rates. Pullman reservations should be made at once. It is hoped that the Georgia delegation as nearly as possible may meet in Atlanta and make the trip in a body. Write directly to F. L. Nelson, district passenger agent, 208-210 Healey building, Atlanta, or to Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary, W. M. U., 320 Palmer building, Atlanta."

Train Service.

There is a regular train service daily. The New York-New Orleans Express leaves Atlanta at 5:35 a. m., arriving in New Orleans 8:30 p. m.; Piedmont Limited leaves Atlanta 4:30 p. m., arriving in New Orleans 7:20 a. m. The round trip rate from Atlanta to New Orleans and return is $26.67. Identification certificates must be presented to ticket agent at the time of purchase in order to secure reduced rates. Short line fares from Savannah, Waycross, Valdosta, Cordele, Macon, as well as other south Georgia points, will apply through Atlanta and Montgomery.

Tickets will be on sale from all points in the southeast, May 8 to 15, with final return limit May 23. Pullman fares are, standard lower berth, $5.63; lower berth $4.50 in each direction; compartment is $15.75 and the drawing room is $21 in each direction. Special high class, all steel Pullman cars, as well as day coaches will be provided for delegates attending the Woman's Missionary Union and others leaving Atlanta on "Piedmont Limited" at 4:30 p. m. Sunday, May 11, and also Monday, May 12. A full delegation from Georgia is confidently expected and a great and important convention is predicted by leaders of the Baptist denomination.

Delegates to Meeting.

Delegates who have accepted the appointments and will attend the convention are: Mrs. W. J. Neel, Mrs. A. E. McMahon, Mrs. George Westmoreland, Mrs. E. C. Laird, Miss Mary Christian, Miss Beulah Caraway, Mrs. J. Henry Burnett, Mrs. Charles F. Cater, Mrs. J. L. Love, Mrs. T. F. Callaway, Miss Evelyn Lewis, Mrs. G. S. Borders, Miss Allie Lee Arendall, Mrs. E. M. Bailey, Mrs. G. C. Green, Miss Clara Stephenson, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Ben Thompson, Mrs. Julia Veach Stewart, Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, Mrs. Charles E. Sammons.

NOONDAY W. M. U. HOLDS INSTITUTE.

The Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of the Noonday Association held a mission study institute for leaders at the First Baptist church of Marietta April 22-24 under the supervision of Mrs. J. M. Marbut, general mission study chairman. The faculty included: Mrs. W. D. Burke, Atlanta, teaching "From Jerusalem to Jerusalem;" Mrs. E. M. Bailey, Acworth, "Going to Jerusalem," for juniors; Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, Atlanta, "Pioneers of Good Will," for intermediates; Mrs. G. C. Green, Smyrna, "Little Lord Jesus," for beginners; Mrs. Wickliffe Read, Mrs. Ray Griggers, Smyrna, poster making. The general theme of home missions was emphasized throughout the books that were studied.

The morning devotional hours were lead by Dr. W. A. Ray, of Marietta First; Dr. I. A. White, also of Marietta, and Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth. The afternoon devotional sessions were conducted by Mrs. Bailey, Mrs. L. A. Dean, Woodstock, and Mrs. J. M. Marbut, Smyrna. During the Tuesday afternoon class Mrs. Bailey taught missionary education through story telling, as adopted from "Missionary Education for Intermediates," by Mrs. W. Kershner. She stressed that to be really efficient one must master the technique of story telling.

The next hour was devoted to poster making under the direction of Mrs. G. C. Green, assisted by Mrs. Read and Mrs. Griggers. Mrs. Green gave splendid examples of three different types of posters. At the Wednesday afternoon session Mrs. Green and Mrs. Griggers explained the power of pictures and posters for all auxiliaries of the W. M. S. The next hour was devoted to a discussion of the value of plays and dramatization by Mrs. Burke.

Thursday Afternoon.

The Thursday afternoon session was conducted by Mrs. J. D. Rhodes, who gave a most interesting talk on the use of impersonation and dramatization for intermediates. A playlette, entitled "Bartimaeus and His Friend," was presented. A short play, "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations," was enacted by Mrs. E. L. Collins, Acworth, superintendent of the Noonday association; Miss Nannie Ruth Griffin, Shady Grove, district Young People's leader; Mrs. S. C. McEachern, associational mother; Miss Mary Towers, member at large; Mrs. Benson, Mrs. Fowler, Mrs. P. G. Smith, Mrs. R. A. Thacker, all of Marietta, with piano accompaniments by Mrs. C. W. Read, Jr. A dramatization of the "American Flag" was given by Miss Mary Towers. An impersonation, "A Little Colored Girl," Mrs. C. W. Read, Jr. All these sketches were under the direction of Mrs. J. D. Rhodes.

The following hour was devoted to discussions of posters. "Ideas From One Magazine" was presented by Mrs. W. Read. Mrs. Green read a short sketch of the Life of Christ, illustrated on the blackboard by Mrs. Ray Griggers. The members of the Noonday association wish to take this opportunity to express their appreciation to the ladies of the First Baptist church of Marietta for their splendid co-operation in every way toward making this institute a success. The average attendance for this institute was 30.

DELLA KING CLASS IS ENTERTAINED.

The Della King class of Capitol Ave. Baptist Sunday school was entertained on Friday evening at the home of Mrs. John C. Alleyne on Courtney drive. The occasion was a party in honor of the winning side in a recent attendance contest. Miss Louise Felton, leader of the losing side, was chairman of the entertainment committee. The guests enjoyed very much the readings given by Mrs. Mattie Lasiter and Mrs. John C. Alleyne. Those present: Mrs. J. M. Browning, Mrs. Nash B. Grogan, Mrs. Grady Davis, Mrs. Mattie Lasiter, Mrs. W. E. Leach, Mrs. Mabel Williams, Mrs. J. B. Vandigriff, Mrs. Frances Meldau, Mrs. Carl Lester, Mrs. R. B. Fox, Miss Helen Brown, Miss Louise Felton, Mrs. J. D. Brown, Mrs. B. G. Browne, Mrs. J. H. Shine, Miss Mayme Blackmon, Mrs. E. B. Thomas, Miss Annie Vest, Miss Theodosia Thomson, Mrs. Arthur Corrie, Mrs. S. K. Hood, Miss Pearl Blackmon, Mrs. J. M. Morris, Mrs. John C. Alleyne, Miss Mary Brown, and Miss Marion Corrie.

MORELAND CIRCLE HOLDS MEETING.

Circle No. 2 of the Moreland Avenue Baptist church, of which Mrs. McDonald is chairman, met at the home of Mrs. J. S. Harris, 1117 Sanders avenue, Wednesday afternoon, April 23. Mrs. S. H. Griffin had charge of the very interesting program rendered. There were 19 members and 3 visitors present. Two new members were enrolled. The next meeting will be held May 21, the location to be announced later.

HAPEVILLE CHURCH IS ENTERTAINED.

The Brotherhood of the First Baptist Church of Hapeville and a number of their friends were entertained at a dinner recently with the following members as hosts for the occasion: Dr. B. J. W. Graham, Rev. F. M. Davis, R. O. Adams, J. R. Cathy, W. P. Anderson, O. A. Ford, W. H. Smith, H. L. Gibson, B. F. Almand, W. C. Mathews, C. L. Stewart and M. E. Lowe. The ladies serving the dinner were Mesdames Jewel Eberhart, R. Willingham, L. E. Mann, R. O. Adams, Zack Adamson, O. A. Ford, L. V. Hall, W. H. Smith, W. H. Stewart and J. R. Cathy.

Rev. T. Baron Gibson, L. L. Jones, J. W. Sims and C. Ponder, of Canton, Ga., were honored guests and after a song of welcome presented by a chorus of girls from Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home, several vocal selections were rendered by the visiting guests, namely, the Canton Quartet, which were much enjoyed. Mrs. J. E. Colwell gave the reading, "Old Friends Like You."

Dr. B. J. W. Graham, pastor of the church, introduced the visitors as his old friends, naming Rev. T. Baron Gibson, pastor of the Canton Baptist, as speaker for the event. Rev. Gibson delivered an address on "The Right Use of Our Talents." A short business session was held in conclusion of the program, with A. J. Hudson, president of the Brotherhood, presiding. Zack Adamson, secretary and treasurer of the organization, gave gratifying reports as to finances and relief work accomplished.

Junior Music Club To Give Program Tuesday, May 6

Atlanta Junior Music Club, with Mrs. Bonita Crowe as counselor, presents a National Music Week program Tuesday, May 6, at 3:45 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's Club. This forms a special concert and takes the place of the next regular meeting. Stress will be laid on a more general knowledge of music, particularly on a greater adult interest in it. The orchestras playing under the direction of Messieurs W. Chase and W. Griffith, and the chorus led by Miss Grace Gaffney and accompanied by Mrs. Cecil Stockard will present large groups of the junior members in orchestral and choral compositions. The Patterson string quartet, including Harriett Ivey, Barbara Selmon, Margaret Milam and Mary Jean Ivey, and Bowen David, violin soloist, will give selections accompanied by Mrs. Ruby Head Lewis. Other numbers are a reading, Winifred Wilkinson; a dance, Annie Clyde Edgar; piano numbers, Eugenia Snow, and vocal solos featuring Ruth Sellers. An invitation to this entertainment is extended to all friends of the club, senior music club members and others who may be interested.

W.C.T.U. Membership Continues To Mount During Campaign

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard, of Macon, State Editor.

W. C. T. U. membership continues to mount as the coupon books, each containing ten signed total abstinence pledges with the dollar dues for each name, are turned in to the state membership chairman, Mrs. Dudley Smith, of Eastman. She urges that all coupon books, whether filled or partly filled, be sent to her immediately after Mother's Day. Coupon books now filled with names of new members should be sent to her now.

Ask For Organizers.

The Woman's Missionary conference of the Southern Methodist church in session at Americus recently adopted the following recommendations: "We recommend that in ecah auxiliary five minutes on one program each month be devoted to the study of the relation of temperance and missions and to the promotion of the observance and reforcement of the 18th amendment, and that responsibility for this feature of the program be placed in the hands of a woman appointed by the superintendent of social service." We further recommend that the social service committee sponsor the movement to enlist the missionary women as members of the W. C. T. U." Since then, increased interest in W. C. T. U. membership has been manifested by missionary women. In one south Georgia town, an earnest worker had secured 107 new members and was still busy working for others. At another town a rally was sponsored, advertised with dinner at a church for hundreds, a W. C. T. U. speaker asked for to organize at an early date. In still another a missionary woman is filling a coupon book with the names of state W. C. T. U. members. More will be published about these places after the unions have been organized and officers elected. And so the good work goes on in unorganized territories. Christian women of whatever denomination are invited to join the W. C. T. U. nearest or the state organization by signing the following pledge: "I hereby solemnly promise, God helping me, to abstain from all distilled, fermented and malt liquors, including wine, beer and cider, and to employ all proper means to secure the enforcement of the 18th amendment to the federal constitution," and by sending the annual dues of one dollar to the state treasurer, Mrs. Wilbur Brown, at Griffin.

Valdosta.

Serepta Garbutt W. C. T. U. of Valdosta, met at the lovely home of Mrs. A. J. Strickland last Tuesday, and Mrs. A. C. Pyle gave the devotional on woman's work for temperance, and the places of importance held by women down the ages, and showing how woman's work and influence for God and home and humanity are needed today. This W. C. T. U. has made marked progress under the leadership of the president, Mrs. G. M. Boyd. Fine departmental reports were made by directors. Thirteen new members were added.

Mrs. Atkins Leads Institutes.

Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, of Milledgeville, continues to do valuable work as director of institutes, building up unions, helping to solve problems, instructing in methods, and gaining members. In Griffin delegates were present from Barnesville, Macon, Zebulon, Forsyth and Jackson, and visitors from Milledgeville and Atlanta. The state president, Mrs. Marvin Williams, gave the inspirational address. Both Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Atkins stressed the effectiveness of departmental work in keeping with the national organization's "Do-Everything Policy," and carrying out the motto of the W. C. T. U. as worded by Frances Willard, "Do good according to a plan." Plans for progressing the aims and activities of the W. C. T. U. were discussed and decided, many participating. One of the things stressed was the urgency of all members registering before the registration books close on May 5. Mrs. J. H. Cheatham and Mrs. L. M. Latimer led the devotionals. Mrs. E. T. Crawford was pianist in the morning and Mrs. Robert Wheaton in the aftnoon. Mrs. C. H. Morris, of Barnesville, was secretary. The local president, Mrs. Reese Thaxton, presided during the opening exercises and the district president, Mrs. A. W. Voight, of Macon, during the rest of the day. The luncheon was held in the First Methodist church, and Mesdames W. T. Murphy and C. S. White formed the decoration committee, while Mesdames Mobley Johnson, H. M. Griffin, C. S. White, J. T. Nunnally, J. C. Nunnally and Miss Marthalyn Turner. Mrs. Mae Olliff registered the visitors.

Macon Institute.

Anna Gordon W. C. T. U., of Macon; Mrs. F. C. Hardy, Mrs. C. W. Schaefer, Mrs. W. C. Howard and Mrs. B. H. Tyner, officers, entertained a district W. C. T. U. institute at the Eastside Methodist church Friday. The keynote was "Eternal Vigilance Is the Price of Prohibition." Mrs. Atkins conducted it in a manner to strengthen every department of W. C. T. U endeavor. The devotional was led by Mrs. Henry W. Pittman, a W. C. T. U. worker and the vice president of the South Georgia Woman's Missionary Society. Her topic was "On the Road With the Master." She showed how the W. C. T. U. had walked with the Master from the beginning, that only by so doing could it accomplish what it had with such powerful opposition, and urged all individual members to "keep close to the Master today." The pastor of the church where the institute was held, Rev. J. A. Roundtree, led the noontide prayer after Mrs. Atkins had explained that the W. C. T. U. organized all around the world prayed at noon each day for the annihilation of the liquor traffic. A delightful feature was the singing at various times of prohibition songs set to well-known tunes. Miss Julia Goodall led the singing, with Mrs. R. L. McKenney, Mrs. D. A. Warlick or Mrs. Harry Hudson at the piano. There were no set speeches, but many participated in the earnest discussions. Mrs. C. W. Schaefer was in charge of the luncheon. Prohibition posters as well as flowers were used in the decorations. The program came to a close with the formation of the fraternal circles. Mrs. Atkins spoke to the young people's department at Mulberry Street Methodist church Sunday morning, and at the Mable White Baptist church in the evening, and led an institute at the Jackson Street Baptist church, in Atlanta, and one at Tallapoosa this week.

W. C. T. U. Personals.

Mrs. Lella A. Dillard, honorary president of the Georgia W. C. T. U., is improving so that she has been able to leave the hospital for her home in Cochran.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Barnesville, state W. C. T. U. president, addressed a large prohibition gathering at Ashburn on Thursday.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, of Greenville, writes from Baltimore, where she is filling lecture engagements for two weeks: "I have just completed two weeks of most interesting field work in South Carolina. I have often lectured in South Carolina, but enjoyed this visit more than any I ever made there. A new spirit seems to have possessed the workers for prohibition. The ministers seem to be more anxious for the W. C. T. U. to be organized in their pastorates and to live and grow than I have ever known them to be. The wet hearings and the Literary Digest straw vote have aroused the church to action. I never secured so many new members nor organized so many new unions in the same length of time. Many times—from coast to coast—I have broadcasted, but never before did I have the manager of a broadcasting station to tell me he was sorry I quit because people were 'phoning and wiring to ask him to let me go on."

Mrs. Armour discussed straw-ballot voting, and told of the places of interest visited in and about Charleston, and said: "The Digest poll ought to inspire every white ribboner to educate, agitate and organize as never before. To have so many thousands bone dry, and so many other thousands opposed to ever seeing saloons come back is enough to enthuse every humanity-loving patriotic man and woman in America and send them on swift feet with glad proud hearts to finish the task so well begun of bringing in that glad day when intemperance shall have blackened its last soul and whitened its last corpse."

After May 1 Mrs. Armour will be in Dallas, Texas, till the twelfth. She will attend the general conference of the Methodist church, and meet with the committee on temperance and social service of which she is a member. She will speak under the auspices of the Texas W. C. T. U. She will also help with the preparations for the entertainment of the national W. C. T. U. convention in Houston, November 12-20. She expresses the wish that Georgia will send her full quota of delegates as that convention promises to be truly great.

Miss Patterson Weds Harold V. Yeargin.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 3.—The marriage of Miss Louise Patterson to Harold V. Yeargin, of Jacksonville, was performed by Rev. Marshall Woodson, pastor of the Thomasville Presbyterian church, at the local church of that denomination last Saturday evening. Ushers were: Marshall Jeffers, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Harry Owens, of Thomasville. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Askew, of Atlanta, and Miss Erwin Smith, of Dublin. Little Jane Patterson, niece of the bride, was maid of honor.

Harris-Martin Bridal Party, Recent Bride and Brides-Elects

The beautiful photograph above presents the members of the wedding party of the marriage of Miss Gertrude Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Harris, and Dr. William O. Martin, Jr., which was a brilliant social event, taking place at the Sacred Heart church Saturday, April 26, at 11 o'clock, followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents on Oakdale road. Reading from left to right are Miss Pauline DeGive, Dr. William McDougall, Mrs. Bryan Merry, of Augusta, formerly Miss Sarah Smith, of Atlanta; Dr. Everett Bancker, the groom and bride, Dr. Nelson Martin, best man; Miss Margaret Harris, maid of honor, and Miss Margaret Stovall. The flower girl is little Miss Vera Vee Harris, of Athens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James C. Harris, Jr. In the oval at the lower left is Miss Margaret Angelin Mathews, daughter of Mrs. Zadoc Walter Mathews, whose engagement is announced today to Frederic Addison Holden, of Washington, D. C., the wedding to take place June 5. In the center is Mrs. Joseph Emerson Boston, Jr., lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Beverly Garrard, who before her marriage Saturday, April 26, was Miss Elizabeth Garrard. Lower right is Miss Myrtis Corker, beautiful daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Gratton Corker, whose engagement is announced today to Ralph Girdner Bullard, of Atlanta, formerly of Charlotte, N. C., the marriage to take place June 7. Photographs of the Harris-Martin wedding party, Miss Mathews and Miss Corker are all by Thurston Hatcher. Photograph of Mrs. Boston is by McCrary studios.

Coleman-Paris Wedding Plans Are Announced

Of wide social prominence is the announcement made today of the wedding plans of Miss Edythe Coleman and Ralph Paris, whose engagement was announced a few weeks ago. The ceremony will be a beautiful event of Wednesday afternoon, May 28, taking place at 5:30 o'clock in the magnificent new First Baptist church on Peachtree street. Rev. Dr. Ellis Fuller, pastor of the church, will perform the marriage rites, and George L. Hamrick, the church organist, will be in charge of the music.

The beautiful young bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, William David Coleman, and Mr. Paris will be accompanied to the altar by his best man, Richard A. Cannon.

Miss Helena Hermance, of Miami, Fla., will be Miss Coleman's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids will include Misses Ellen Newell, Ida Sadler, Margaret Stovall, Ethel Hunter and Mary Jane Hill, of LaGrange, Ga. The groomsmen will be Robert H. Scott, Barmore Gambrell, Rhyne Cannon, of Charlotte, N. C.; William A. Hawkins and Victor M. Covington, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Acting as ushers will be Lee Ashcraft, Henry W. Grady, Mell R. Wilkinson, Joel C. Harris, William A. Parker and Cannon Young.

Robert H. Scott, Jr., and Trenton Tunnell, Jr., will be the two little ringbearers. Little Miss Jean Lowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lowe, of Hartwell, Ga., will be the flower girl.

Mr. Paris and his bride will leave immediately after the ceremony for a wedding journey of several weeks.

Prior to the wedding, Miss Coleman and her fiance will be honored at innumerable social gayeties. Tuesday, May 6, Mrs. Clyde King, Jr., will honor Miss Coleman at a luncheon at the Druid Hills Golf Club, the guests to include Misses Ellen Newell, Margaret Stovall, Ida Sadler, Mary Jane Hill, of LaGrange; Helena Hermance, of Miami, Fla.; Ethel Hunter, Constance Spalding, Jane Small and Mesdames Bryan K. Vann, Albert Pritchard, William C. Warren, Robert W. Woodruff, Edgar Dunlap, Jr., Eugene V. Haynes, Bolling Jones, Jr., Edgar Watkins, Jr., Robert Scott, Oscar Davis, Carl Lewis, Granger Hansell, Claude McGinnis, Erroll Eckford, William Parker, Edgar Chambers, Jr., Trenton Tunnell and Preston Arkwright, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee Ashcraft and Mr. and Mrs. Claude McGinnis will be hosts at a buffet supper Tuesday evening, May 27, at their home in Druid Hills following the wedding rehearsal. Others who will entertain in compliment to Miss Coleman are Misses Ellen Newell, Ethel Hunter, Mrs. Evert Bancker and others.

Mrs. Robert Gresham Honors Daughter.

Mrs. Robert Irving Gresham entertained at a dinner-dance last evening at her home on Springdale road, honoring her daughter, Juanita, a popular member of the younger social set. Mrs. Gresham was assisted in entertaining by Mrs. Paul Jones. Miss Eloise Gresham, daughter of the hostess, and Miss Beverly Rogers served punch.

Dinner was served on the terrace, which was hung with Japanese lanterns. The individual tables, at which dinner was served, were ornamented with low black bowls showered with pastel colored spring flowers tied with narrow streamers of gold ribbon. Mrs. Gresham wore a model of shrimp colored georgette trimmed in rhinestones. Her shoulder bouquet was of gardenias and valley lilies. Miss Juanita Gresham wore a model of hyacinth blue offset with a shoulder spray of orchids and lilies of the valley. Miss Eloise Gresham was gowned in light blue taffeta. Mrs. Jones wore a model of blue chiffon. Her shoulder bouquet was of pink roses. Dancing was enjoyed afterward in the living room.

Miss Phoebe Ellis Entertains At Tea.

Miss Helen McDorman And Mr. Bahin To Wed in Athens, Ga.

ATHENS, Ga., May 3.—The announcement made today of the engagement of Miss Helen McDorman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. McDorman, of Athens, to Louis Joseph Bahin, of Cartersville, is of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends. The wedding takes place in June in Athens.

The charming bride-elect was educated at Lucy Cobb, from which she was graduated with highest honors, and the University of Georgia, where she received her A. B. degree in 1926. She was outstanding in college activities, being a member of Phi Beta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi, honor fraternities; the Thalian Dramatic Club, Girls' Glee Club, and Kappa Delta Sorority, of which she was president during her senior year. Miss McDorman is descended from many old Virginia and Georgia families. Her mother, who was Miss Mattie Burton, is a descendant of Thomas Burton, of Virginia, who later came to Georgia, where he was a member of provincial congress and of the famous "Sons of Liberty." Her maternal grandmother was Miss Eliza Cobb, of Eatonton, and great-niece of United States Senator Thomas W. Cobb, of Greensboro, for whom Cobb county was named. Senator Cobb's grandfather, Captain Thomas Cobb, came to Georgia after the Revolution and settled at Cobbham, in Columbia county, and he was the descendant of Ambrose Cobb, who came from England to Virginia in 1613.

Miss McDorman also traces her descent from Nathan Johnson and Nicholas Meriwether, who received a land grant in Virginia for settlement of a loan made by his father to the crown and from the Allen, Carter, Tate, Daniel, Randolph, Beckham and Lewis families, all prominently connected with the history of these two southern states. For the past three years she has been on the faculty of the high school in Dalton, where she is teaching French and algebra.

Mr. Bahin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Bahin, of Natchez, Miss., and is the brother of Mrs. M. M. Brandon, of Stamford, Conn., and Miss Martha Bahin, of Natchez. His paternal great-grandfather came to Natchez from France in 1848. He had served as colonel in the artillery of Napoleon's army and came to America to forget the harrows of the French Revolution and to continue his profession as an artist. He was widely known as a portrait painter and many old families of Mississippi cherish his paintings. For a portrait of himself, he was awarded the first prize by the Paris Society of Arts.

Mr. Bahin's grandmother was Margaret Wev, daughter of a well-known merchant of Natchez, and granddaughter of Betty Zane, who was noted for her bravery during the Revolution. She was also a descendant of the Everetts of Pennsylvania.

On his maternal side Mr. Bahin is a descendant of the Harmons, early settlers of Virginia, who came to Georgia and then moved to Mississippi, and of the Crislers, of Mississippi. His mother was before her marriage Miss Daisy Salmon, whose father served in the Confederate army during the War Between the States and took part in every major battle in this section of the country. Mr. Bahin received his education at Mississippi A. & M. College, from which he was graduated in 1923. He was captain of the Lee Guards, a local fraternity, which afterward became a chapter of Kappa Alpha. He has been with the state highway department of Georgia for the past five years and now holds the position of senior resident engineer of the first division, with headquarters in Cartersville.

Dedication of Rhodes Memorial Hall Takes Place May 10 and 11

Formal dedication of the Rhodes Memorial hall, permanent home of the Georgia department of archives, will take place May 10 and 11, with Miss Ruth Blair, state historian, as official hostess, who will be assisted in receiving guests by distinguished Georgians. No invitations have been issued and the public is invited to attend.

The hall, former home of the late A. G. Rhodes, located at Peachtree and Spring streets, was donated to the state for memorial purposes. The priceless records of the state department are being moved to the new building and the Atlanta Historical Society has taken over a room for the display of its relics. The Old Guard will transfer its treasures soon. During both receptions Lucy Stanton, noted artist of Athens, will have an exhibit of miniatures.

Among those who will take part in the opening ceremonies are the state historical commission, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rhodes and Dr. and Mrs. L. O. Bricker, the donors, and officers of all state patriotic societies. County historians now appointed or being appointed to write the history of Georgia's counties are also asked to be present, as have been the historians of the other southern states.

Those who will receive on Saturday afternoon, May 10, are the state historical commission, Governor and Mrs. Hardman, State Treasurer and Mrs. William J. Speer, Commissioner of Commerce and Labor H. M. Stanley and Mrs. Stanley, Attorney General George M. Napier and Mrs. Napier, State Librarian Miss Ella May Thornton, Tax Commissioner R. C. Norman and Mrs. Norman, Superintendent of Schools M. L. Duggan, and Mrs. Duggan, Commissioner of Agriculture Eugene Talmadge and Mrs. Talmadge, Secretary of State George H. Carswell and Pension Commissioner R. DeT. Lawrence.

Others to receive on Saturday are Dr. and Mrs. L. L. Knight, Mr. Knight being state historian emeritus; Judge and Mrs. J. Render Terrell, and Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Rhodes and Dr. and Mrs. L. O. Bricker, donors of the building.

Those receiving on Sunday include Walter McElreath, president of the Atlanta Historical Society; W. W. Gordon, of Savannah, president of the Georgia Historical Society; Mrs. Irvin S. Thomas, Atlanta governor of the Society of Mayflower Descendants; Mrs. A. H. Strickland, Bowman, governor of Sons and Daughters of the Pilgrims; Mrs. J. M. High, Atlanta, president Daughters of Patriots and Founders of America; Mrs. Frances Brown Chase, Atlanta, regent Daughters of American Colonists; Thomas M. Cunningham, Jr., Savannah, governor Society of Colonial Wars; George Noble Jones, Savannah, president Society of the Cincinnati; Mrs. Bun Wylie, Atlanta, regent Daughters of the American Revolution; W. M. Francis, Atlanta, president of Sons of American Revolution; Mrs. Thomas C. Mell, Atlanta, director of Children of American Revolution; Mrs. James D. Weaver, Dawson, president of the United Daughters of 1812; General John J. Hunt, Griffin, commander United Confederate Veterans; Mrs. J. J. Mrs. Deck Weds James S. Newton.

Mrs. Birdie Presson Deck and James Stanley Newton were quietly married Saturday evening in the pastor's study of the Decatur Presbyterian church, Rev. D. P. McGeachy officiating. The bride was lovely in a blue crepe ensemble with blouse of real lace and accessories in harmonizing tones. Her corsage was of valley lilies, Ophelia roses and maidenhair ferns. The bride is very prominent in Cornelia, Ga., having organized and served as president of, for three successive terms, the John P. Fort Chapter Daughters of Confederate Veterans. She was also prominently connected with the Three Arts Club and did much constructive P.-T. A. work.

Mr. Newton is a graduate of Wooster college, Wooster, Ohio, and also a graduate of the Emerson Conservatory of Oratory, Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Newton is the daughter of the late Leonard H. and Leona Presson, who were themselves descendants of pioneer settlers of Tennessee. She is the sister of Leonard H. Presson, of Atlanta.

Little Theater To Give Play.

Dramatic interest centers this week in the production of Shaw's "The Devil's Discipline" the Little theater of the Studio Club. The play will be presented on the evenings of May 9 and 10, in the club theater, at 104 1-2 Forsyth street.

Janet Millis Shepherd, director, is confident that this drama will be the most successful production the Little theater has yet offered. No efforts are being spared to make the performance complete in every detail. Authentic and picturesque costumes of the Revolutionary period are being ordered from Baltimore. "The Devil's Disciple" gives ample opportunity for variety in stage sets. Five different scenes are called for, and J. M. B. Hoxsey is designing and constructing the sets for this comedy.

The cast includes well known local actors—Louis Rucker, Miss Ernestine Hornady, Mrs. Florence Brine, Mrs. Richard T. Morenus, Pendleton Mitchell, Sam Wood, Matt Jorgenson, Kemp Taylor, Griff Edwards and others. Tickets are going rapidly and those interested should communicate with Mrs. Catherine H. Zonnerat at Hemlock 2915.

Miss Ennis and Mr. Kennedy Will Wed at June Ceremony

Miss Eleanor Ennis, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Ennis, whose engagement is announced today to Dr. Sidney G. Kennedy, the marriage to take place in June in Lakeland, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. William Romalice Ennis, of Lakeland, Fla., and Milledgeville, Ga., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Gray, to Doctor Sidney G. Kennedy, of Lakeland, Fla., and Atlanta, Ga., the marriage to take place in Lakeland, Fla., in early June.

Miss Ennis graduated with A. B. degree from the Georgia State College for Women at Milledgeville, Ga., two years ago. Since her graduation she has been instructor of Latin and French at her alma mater. She is a niece of Hon. J. Howard Ennis, of Milledgeville, and Miss O'Nora Ennis, of Quitman.

Dr. Kennedy received his B. S. and M. D. degrees at Emory University, where he was a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha and Pi Rho Sigma fraternities and Caduceus honorary fraternity. Since his graduation he has been connected with Grady hospital where he will be with the surgical staff next year. He is the eldest son of S. G. Kennedy, Sr., of Lakeland, Fla.

Carnation Day Is Declared For May 10

Saturday, May 10, Carnation Day, will be observed by the auxiliaries of the Spanish War veterans, on behalf of raising funds for needy veterans, widows and orphans. There will be workers from both of the auxiliaries and co-workers from other patriotic organizations on the streets and in the office buildings selling carnations, the Spanish War flower, also the favorite flower of President McKinley, who served as president during the conflict of 1898.

Carnation Day has been featured in Atlanta for several years and has always been received most generously and every one has shown a desire to help make it a success. It is the desire of the chairman of this sale for the public to co-operate in this worthy cause; the funds of the auxiliaries are very low, and the demands for help have been heavy this past winter. Food, clothes and coal were sent the needy ones and help extended to the sick.

Hospitalization is furnished the veterans, but while the veteran is away being cared for by the government, his family has to be cared for at home. For this reason Carnation Day has been ordained an annual affair by which to raise funds to take care of the needy widows and orphans. Every donation contributed to this sale will be used as an emergency fund to cheer and care for the dependents, and headquarters will be established at the entrance of the Kimball house.

Fifth District Spring Garden Show To Be Held at Woman's Club May 15

Plans are rapidly maturing for the spring garden show to be staged by the garden division of the fifth district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. The show, in which wide public interest is being manifest, is to be held at the Atlanta Women's Club Thursday, May 15. Any member of a federated club is eligible to make an exhibit in this show.

The executives in charge of the show are: Mesdames E. L. Harling, W. O. Trammel, Jesse Manry, Fred Creswell, Alva Kiser, Richard Sams, W. E. Lotspeich, W. H. S. Hamilton, Frank Davis, J. S. Mitchell, Eugene Daniel, B. A. Johnson, E. M. Fain, Fred Rice, L. V. Kennerly, S. B. Naff, D. C. Shepherd, Walter Lamb and Fred Lawshe. These executives have been requested by the chairman of the division, Mrs. J. R. Bachman, to meet at the Atlanta Woman's Club Friday, May 10, at 10 o'clock, to complete the final instructions for the show.

Mrs. McArthur Presides At Macon Convention.

Rebekah Assembly of Georgia will hold its annual session in May at Macon, Ga., presided over by Mrs. E. A. McArthur, of Atlanta, who has returned from a tour of the southern part of the state in the interest of Rebekah Odd-Fellowship, brings encouraging reports of the work. She visited Jesup, Brunswick, Waycross, Savannah, Augusta, and a number of other points, and the Rebekah assembly of Florida, which convened in Orlando in April.

Mrs. McArthur reports that the president of both the Rebekah assembly of Florida and South Carolina will be guest of honor at the Georgia assembly in May. As president of the assembly of Georgia, she has closed a successful year's work, and her administration has meant much to the order.

Music Festival To Take Place Friday May 9 at Woman's Club

A mammoth music festival, which will include dancing and bridge playing will take place Friday evening, May 9, from 8:15 o'clock until 12 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's Club. This will be the largest social event which the club has sponsored for some time and will be among the last of a series of parties which have taken place at the club during the present administration under Mrs. John R. Hornady's leadership. The entertainment will begin with a concert in the auditorium, at which time the Griffin Mandolin orchestra will be heard and the Griffin Harp ensemble will contribute several musical numbers. A group of Washington seminary girls will put on a one-act play entitled, "College Campus Life," which proved a great success when presented at the college recently, a number of Atlanta's prettiest and most popular girls taking part in the play. Miss Margaret Battle, one of the leading soloists of this city, will be heard in a group of songs and Miss Mary Morrison, who will be seen in a solo dance, has received much praise and applause wherever she has appeared.

After the concert which will consume about an hour and a half time, the guests will be invited into the banquet hall where an orchestra will furnish excellent music for dancing. For those who do not care for dancing there will be card tables in the clubhouse proper for bridge games. Beautiful prizes have been procured and a number of tables have already been reserved. There will be tables provided for all who wish to play, whether or not reservations have been previously made. Players are to provide their own cards, pencils, etc.

Banquet Hall.

The large banquet hall where the dancing will take place, will be elaborately decorted and during the hours which will be given over to dancing there will be some "surprise contest" featured, for which beautiful and useful prizes will be awarded. A number of solo dancers from the Dozier School of Dancing will be seen in attractive costume dances.

During the evening refreshments will be served by an attractive bevy of young ladies, daughters and relatives of the members, who will be at the punch bowls and some at small tables where dainty sandwiches and other dainties will be served.

Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs, chairman of music, who has presented unusually attractive musical programs at the meetings all during the year, will be general chairman of arrangements and will have assisting her Mrs. W. P. Dunn and Mrs. James T. Williams, who will have charge of the arrangements for dancing and Mrs. Harry G. Poole and Mrs. Thornton Fincher, who will assist with the arrangements for the bridge parties.

Single tickets entitling the bearer to all the different features of entertainment are $1.00 each, but couples will be admitted for $1.50 per couple. Tickets may be bought from members of the executive board or through the club by calling Hemlock 4636.

Emory Glee Club.

The Atlanta Woman's Club will present the Emory Glee Club, renowned as the "south's sweetest singers," in concert Thursday evening, May 8, at 8:30 o'clock, in the auditorium of the club. Presenting a varied program of negro spirituals, old English folk songs, quartet and solo music in addition to instrumental selections, the glee club, which is the best known college musical organization in the world, will greet a large audience of music lovers, who will hear among other things: "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Ain't Gonna Play on Your Harp," "Ain't Gonna Study War No More," and "Couldn't Hear Nobody Pray."

The appearance here of the Emory Glee Club marks the sixth concert of its regular spring tour of the south. Under the direction of Dr. Malcom H. Dewey, the glee club enjoys a distinction held by but few organizations of its kind in the United States. The club's remarkably realistic presentation of southern negro spirituals has gained for it an international reputation, and on its last European tour a series of 24 records were made for the Metropole Gramaphone Company of London.

Woman's Division of C. of C.

In co-operation with the movement sponsored by the woman's division of ath chamber of commerce, which is indorsing and fostering Music Week in this city, the Atlanta Woman's Club is offering two delightful muiscal programs during the coming week, Thursday and Friday evening at 8:15 o'clock in the auditorium of the club. In endorsing National Music Week, Mrs. John R. Hornady, president of the clubs, says in a letter to the woman's division Chamber of Commerce:

"You certainly have my endorsement on the plan to concentrate the public mind on music for one week, and hope that a universal musical interest may be stimulated. I wish to congratulate the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce on its splendid effort in promoting music through these observances. You may quote me as saying that I feel that there is nothing more inspiring and more uplifting than beautiful music, and it is my earnest desire to see such music established in every home and institution."

The auditorium committee of the Woman's Club, Mrs. Arthur H. Hazzard, chairman, and Mrs. J. P. Billups, co-chairman, assisted by Miss Florence Edwards and a committee of club members will be in charge of the concert and a large number of Atlanta music lovers will act as sponsors on this occasion. Much praise has been given the Emory quartet, which is perhaps the best known quartet in the south. Members of the quartet to be heard here are: Rosser Smith, first tenor; George Monk, second tenor; George Rogers, first bass; Laurance Chaffee, second tenor.

The Emory Glee Club has produced two singers of grand opera caliber, Byron Warner, former Atlanta boy, student for several years under Catildi and Mandolini, now singing in European grand opera, and Edward Austin Kane, winner of the recent Atwater-Kent national auditorium contest, with whose singing many southerners are familiar through national radio broadcast.

Tickets will be on sale at the club and reservations may be made by calling Mrs. T. E. Simmons, Hemlock 4636. Lower floor, $1.50, balcony, $1.

Educational Department.

The educational department announces the beginning of its annual spring classes in Spanish and French, being held at the club in the afternoons during May and June. These courses are for beginners and for those who desire to broaden their vocabulary in practical conversational French and Spanish, and those planning to spend the summer in Europe will find these courses an excellent preparation for a European vacation.

The courses offered require no previous knowledge of a foreign language nor will it be necessary to review long forgotten rules of English grammar. The courses are entirely conversational. The grammar is taught incidentally from observation of correct sentence structure. Students begin to speak the language at once, learning an extensive vocabulary of those words necessary to converse upon the most usual topics of ordinary conversation.

These classes are being held at the Woman's Club at 3 o'clock Tuesday, May 6, and on Tuesdays and Thursday's thereafter. The cost of the lessons is very small.

P. E. P. Club Meets With Mrs. Folson.

Beautiful Young Belles Who Will Be Brides In Double Wedding Ceremony Wednesday, June 11

On the left is Miss Claire Carswell, lovely daughter of George H. Carswell, present secretary of state of Georgia, whose engagement is announced today to Nathaniel C. Hughs. On the right is Miss Bernice Largenfeld, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Largenfeld, of Centralia, Ill., whose engagement is announced today to Innes Subers, of Bainbridge, Ga. The wedding of these young couples will be a double ceremony, taking place Wednesday evening, June 11, at the Druid Hills Baptist church.

A wedding of interest taking place in the early summer will be the double wedding of Miss Claire Carswell and Nathaniel C. Hughs, and Miss Bernice Largenfeld, of Centralia, Ill., and Innes Subers, of Bainbridge, Ga., which will take place Wednesday evening, June 11, at the Druid Hills Baptist church, the engagements of the two young couples being announced today.

Miss Carswell is the daughter of George H. Carswell and her sister is Mrs. D. R. Simmons, of Bainbridge, and her brothers are George Carswell and Harold Carswell, of Atlanta. Mr. Carswell, the bride-elect's father, is the present secretary of state of the state of Georgia and is a candidate for governor. Miss Carswell's mother was Miss Ethel Claire Wood Carswell, of Irwinton, Ga., daughter of Dr. and Mrs. J. S. Wood. The bride-elect attended Georgia State college at Milledgeville, Ga., and Marjorie Webster, at Washington, D. C., where she was a member of the H2E Club, the only honor club in school, president of the athletic association, secretary and treasurer of her class and voted the most popular girl in school.

Mr. Hughs is the son of Mrs. Viola Bush Hughs and the late W. J. Hughs, of Fort Pierce, Fla. He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Nathaniel C. Hughs, of Irwinton, Ga., who were early settlers of Wilkinson county. Mr. Hughs received his education at Tech High school, followed by a commercial course, and until a few years ago resided in Georgia, but lately has been active in hotel business in Florida. Following the wedding trip the bride and bridegroom will make their home in Fort Pierce, Florida.

Miss Langerfeld is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph V. Langerfeld, and her only brother is Dr. J. Alden Langenfeld, of Centralia, Ill. Mr. Langenfeld, the bride-elect's father, is prominent in automobile business in Centralia, Ill., and St. Louis, Mo. Miss Langenfeld's mother was Martha Bell Miles, of Centralia, Ill., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas M. Miles of Centralia. The bride-elect attended Monticello seminary at Godfrey, Ill., and Marjorie Webster at Washington, D. C., where she was president of her class, member of the H2E Club, the only honor club in school, editor-in-chief of the year book and member of Choral Club, and voted best all-around girl in school. Miss Langenfeld was highest honor graduate in her class.

Mr. Subers is the son of Mrs. Zulieme Balkcom Subers and the late J. I. Subers, of Bainbridge, Ga. His father's family were of the original settlers of Bainbridge. He received his education at Bainbridge High school and the University of Pittsburgh. He was in the insurance business in Bainbridge previous to taking a position as special agent for the Metropolitan Casualty Insurance Company. Following the wedding trip the bride and groom will make their home in Orlando, Fla.

Miss Leffingwell's And Rev. Young's Plans Announced

Of much interest today are the wedding plans of Miss Mary Leffingwell and Rev. J. Russell Young, of Pittson, Pa., a senior at Columbia seminary. Dr. D. P. McGeachy and Dr. J. B. Green will perform the ceremony May 14 at 5:30 o'clock at Columbia seminary in Decatur. Miss Irene Leftwich will be maid of honor.

Mrs. Polly Lacy and Miss Clarice Glass will be bridesmaids. Reginald Lowe will be best man. The groomsmen will be O. E. Sanden and Russell Steights. Miss Mary Grace Kehrer and Charles White will render a program of vocal selections. Miss Edith De Witt will be pianist and Charles Campbell, violinist.

Cooking School To Be Given.

The Cascade M. E. church will sponsor a cooking school beginning May 5 to 9, inclusive, 10:30 to 12:30 o'clock. Admission 25 cents per day and the following menus will be demonstrated by Mrs. A. P. Boardman, who will conduct the class. There will be several prizes given away. All ladies and girls are invited: Monday, tuna fish aspic, pineapple and cucumber salad served in tomato roses; English peas served in carrot boats; hot biscuits and strawberry or banana cream. Tuesday, baked liver, macaroni mousse, eggplant souffle, pineapple ice box cakes and hot rolls. Wednesday, planked haddock, stuffed cabbage salad, hot biscuits and cherry pudding. Thursday, stuffed cabbage, Italian style, parsleyed potato balls, butterscotch pie, hot biscuits and Jell-O raw vegetable salad. Friday, German Irish potato cake, new Manhattan salad, cheese straws and banana fluff.

Engagement of Miss Bolles and John Knox, of Tenn., Announced

Miss Lois Adelaide Bolles, lovely daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Derbe Bolles, whose engagement is announced today to John Knox, of Nashville, Tenn., formerly of Atlanta and Washington, D. C. The marriage will be quietly solemnized in June at the home of the bride's parents on Rosedale road. Photograph by Elliott's Peachtree studios.

Of cordial interest in Atlanta is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton D. Bolles of the engagement of their daughter, Lois Adelaide, to John Knox, of Nashville, Tennessee.

The bride-to-be is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bolles, and granddaughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. A. G. Thomas, pioneer citizens of Atlanta. Her paternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. George F. Bolles, of Connecticut and Massachusetts and for many years residents of Atlanta. Her brothers are Hamilton Thomas Bolles and Howard Knowlton Bolles. She is a graduate of Agnes Scott college and of the Atlanta Library school. She was for two years librarian of the school of theology of Emory University, and is now the librarian of Agnes Scott.

Mr. Knox is the eldest son of Mrs. Emma Mann Knox and the late Rev. Absalom Knox, of Baltimore. His sisters are Mrs. Ebert Van Buren, of Chicago, and Mrs. Mercer G. Evans. His only brother is James Knox, of Birmingham. He received his A. B. degree at Randolph-Macon college, in Virginia, and his B. D. degree at Emory University, where he later became a member of the faculty. He also studied at the University of Chicago. He is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity. Mr. Knox is now minister to Fisk University, Nashville.

The marriage will be quietly solemnized in June at the home of the bride's parents on Rosedale drive in the presence of the immediate families.

Cartersville Belle To Wed Frank Jolly.

CARTERSVILLE, Ga., May 3.—Announcement is made today of the approaching marriage of Miss Romie Eugenia Milam, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Harrison Milam, of Cartersville, to Robert Frank Jolly, of Kingston. Both of the contracting parties are members of families who are among the original settlers of Bartow county. After attending high school, Miss Milam attended South Georgia College for Women, at Valdosta. Since finishing there she has been a teacher in the Kingston public school. She is a sister of Miss Louise Milam and Messrs. Riley, John, Henry, Herman and Robert Milam.

Mr. Jolly is a son of Mrs. Frank Jolly and the late Frank Jolly. He is now principal of the West Rome school. A number of pre-nuptial parties are being planned in honor of the bride-elect.

Perennial Club Members To Read Papers at Meeting

The Perennial Garden Club is to hold its May meeting at the home of Mrs. Sage Hardin, on Rockbridge road, Tuesday, May 6. Each member of the club has prepared a paper for the meeting in which the perennials grown in her own garden will be discussed. A feature of these papers will be the distinction between the perennials which thrive in the shade and those which do best in the sunny places. These papers will deal with individual experiences and when they have been read are to be followed with round-table discussion. In this way information of practical value will be developed.

The following chairmen are expected to give reports at this meeting: Mrs. Walter Lamb, on "Garden Views and Pictures;" Mrs. John Brickman, on "Wild Flowers;" Mrs. S. B. Naff, on "Flower Show," and Mrs. John Harper, on "Publicity." The club will be entertained at a luncheon after the meeting by Mrs. Hardin, and the members will make a trip through the extensive gardens where peonies and iris are now in their glory.

Decatur Rebekahs To Sponsor Party.

Friday evening, May 9, at the Hotel Candler in Decatur, Decatur Rebekah lodge, No. 31, will sponsor a benefit bridge party. A number of handsome prizes have been donated by Decatur merchants and the table prizes are all well worth the winning.

Tables will be $2 and can be reserved by calling Mrs. Harper H. Harden at Dearborn 3626, or Mrs. J. Ed Bodenhammer, Dearborn 1169. The committee in charge includes Mrs. Harper H. Harden, Miss Elizabeth Sims, Mrs. Albert Snyder and Miss Ella K. Flemming will appreciate the support given them. Tables can also be arranged for at the hotel on the evening of the party.

Atlanta League of Women Voters To Hear Frank Miller Speak

Frank Miller, director of the Community Chest operations in the city, will speak on "street begging" at the executive board luncheon of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, Tuesday, May 6, at 1 o'clock at Chamberlin's tea room. Mr. Miller will discuss street begging from many angles, including the various kinds of mendicants and their methods of soliciting alms, and how and when street begging started. This is a subject of vital interest to the city in general and to the league members in particular, since it is one of the items on the yearly study program. Everyone interested in this civic program is invited to attend the luncheon and to hear Mr. Miller speak. It is requested, however, that reservations be made through the league headquarters, WAlnut 8472, not later than Monday afternoon. Mrs. Wilbur Hunnicutt will preside at the luncheon, and the twelfth ward will have charge of the program. After Mr. Miller's talk there will be an opportunity for questions and discussion of his subject. These luncheon programs are arranged each month to follow the regular executive board meeting, and are of great educational value, since the subject of the program is always taken from the topics of study.

Executive Board Meets.

Executive board will meet in regular session Tuesday, May 6, at 10:30 o'clock at league headquarters, Mrs. Harry Greene presiding.

Eighth ward meets at the Georgian Terrace, Friday, May 9, at 3 o'clock. The subject of the program will be "Outstanding Defects and Proposals for Change in County Government." This is the last of the series on county government which have been presented by the eighth ward, and the topics for study for the next six months will be decided upon at this May meeting. Mrs. Thomas Stubbs, chairman, requests all members of the ward to be present and to bring suggestions. An interesting feature of the meeting will be the reports on the national league convention which was held in Louisville, Ky., the week of April 28, at which the Atlanta league was well represented.

At the request of the Whitefoord Avenue P.-T. A. a demonstration on registering and voting was given Tuesday afternoon at the school. Mrs. Phil Schulhafer, chairman of the ninth ward, was assisted in this demonstration by Mrs. Herman Hyman and Miss Elleigh Page Tucker. These members will be glad to repeat this demonstration upon request before other groups or organizations.

Facts.

The Atlanta league bulletin, "Facts," will be off the press this week. The contents will be devoted to "Registration," which subject is of vital importance to all citizens. Membership in the league includes a year's subscription to Facts and the Georgia Voter. If you wish to vote in the city's next municipal primary you must be registered by May 19, as city registration books close on that date. State registration books close May 5, and all taxes must be paid up to date in order to be qualified as a voter in the state primary to be held in the fall. A governor, statehouse officers and both houses of legislature are all to be filled and 12 congressmen and a United States senator are to be chosen this year. League members are urged not to delay to take the necessary steps to vote this fall.

Bridge Party.

A bridge tea will be given at the home of Mrs. Fred Hodgson on Clifton road for the benefit of the Atlanta league the afternoon of May 23. Mrs. Thomas West, chairman of finances in the ninth ward, will have charge of arrangements. Her committee is working out details of the tea which will be announced later. The month of May has been designated "Finance Month," and this bridge party is one of a series planned to raise money for the league.

MISS MYRTIS CORKER TO WED MR. BULLARD

Pueblo, Col., and Newman Corker, of Atlanta.

Prominent Families.

Mrs. Corker, mother of the bride-to-be, was formerly Miss Alice Lillian Cole, of Savannah, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Theodore Cole and the late Mr. Cole. Mrs. Cole was before her marriage Miss Mary Eugenia Norton, of Robertsville, S. C., and a direct descendant of Nathanial Green. Mr. Cole, who was of Savannah, was captain of the Oglethorpe Light infantry of Savannah and served with the Confederate army during the War Between the States.

Mr. Corker, father of the bride-elect, is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen A. Corker, of Waynesboro, Ga., Mrs. Corker being the former Miss Margaret Myrtis Palmer, of Burke county. The late Mr. Corker was a member of the first congressional delegation from Georgia after the reconstruction. He was the colonel in command of the Third Georgia regiment at the battle of Gettysburg, where he was captured.

Pioneers of North Carolina.

The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond Bullard, of Charlotte, N. C., the Bullard family being among the pioneer settlers of the state of North Carolina. Mrs. Bullard was before her marriage Miss Mary Ione Girdner, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Ephriam Link Girdner, of Terre Haute, Ind., and Mrs. Girdner was formerly Miss Mary Augusta Murphy, of Terre Haute.

On his paternal side Mr. Bullard is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Washington Bullard, of North Carolina, Mrs. Bullard being the former Miss Martha Adams, of South Carolina.

Mr. Bullard is very prominent in Atlanta, having been an outstanding student at Georgia School of Technology. He was a graduate in the class of 1928, and played end on the Golden Tornado, the Georgia Tech football team; was on the basketball team, was a member of the Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity and the Bulldog Club, the Cotillion Club and the Civil Crew. Since his graduation he has made his home in Charlotte but has moved to Atlanta for residence, having recently opened a branch here of the Western Waterproofing Company. Mr. Bullard's only sister is Miss Mary Julia Bullard, and his brothers are Edmond Bullard, Jr., and Harry Bullard, all of Charlotte.

Mrs. W. M. Lewis To Honor Visitor

Mrs. W. M. Lewis will entertain at a bridge-tea Tuesday afternoon, May 6, at her home on Sherwood road in honor of Miss Polly Rover, of New York city, who is the guest of her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Rover.

Miss Mayo Weds Mr. Berrey At Druid Hills Methodist Church

Mrs. Eugene Berrey, whose marriage took place last evening at 6 o'clock at the Druid Hills Methodist church. Mrs. Berrey was formerly Miss Eugenia Mayo.

Beautiful in its simplicity was the wedding of Miss Eugenia Mayo, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Mayo, and Eugene Berrey, which was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 6 o'clock at the Druid Hills Methodist church. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. R. L. Russell in the presence of a group of relatives and friends.

The church was effectively decorated with palms and a profusion of Easter lilies. The ushers were Wheeler Upchurch and Jack Morris. Preceding the ceremony Ned Nichols sang "O Promise Me" and "At Dawning." He was accompanied by Mrs. E. V. Jones, who softly played "The Flower Song" during the ceremony.

The bride's only attendant was her cousin, Miss Ruby Jones. She wore a frock of angel pink chiffon. Her hat was of pink horse hair braid and her shoes and gloves were of pink. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

The bride, who is a young woman of unusual beauty and charm was lovely in an afternoon dress of tea rose chiffon, ankle length. Her lace hat was of the same shade. Her flowers were bride's roses and valley lilies in a shower bouquet.

The bride and her uncle, W. Robert Whalley, were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Claude H. Newman.

Lewis Skidmore Talks on 'American Skyscraper' Today

Emphasizing especially the New York zoning law and the skyscrapers of that city, Lewis P. Skidmore, director of the High Museum of Art, will deliver an informal illustrated lecture on "The American Skyscraper" at 3:15 o'clock this afternoon at the museum, 1262 Peachtree street. Mr. Skidmore will illustrate his talk with exceptionally fine stereopticon views which have been recently completed by the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York city. In view of the place of industry in the art of today the lecture will prove of unusual interest to those who attend the lecture Sunday.

The etchings of the Philadelphia Print Club, which are on view at the museum for the next two weeks, comprise one of the most interesting exhibitions which have been at the museum during the season. The exhibit includes the pictures of the annual show of the club which is on circuit through the country. It arrived Tuesday at the museum from Savannah, where it was shown at the Telfare academy. The museum is open to the public from 9 until 12 o'clock and from 1 until 4 o'clock throughout the week; from 7 to 9 o'clock Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings, and from 3 to 5 o'clock Sunday afternoons.

Miss Carrie Chavers Weds T. M. Shaddix.

The marriage of Miss Carrie Chavers, daughter of Mrs. Susan O. Chavers, to Thomas M. Shaddix was solemnized Saturday afternoon at the First Baptist church. Dr. Ellis A. Fuller officiated, using the impressive ring ceremony. The church was artistically decorated with Easter lilies and ferns.

Preceding the entrance of the wedding party Mrs. Wilbur Scarboro sang "I Love You Truly," accompanied by her sister, Mrs. Claude E. Martin. The processional from "Lohengrin," which was played by Mrs. Martin and Mendelssohn's "Wedding March" was used as the recessional. Mr. and Mrs. Chester A. Read were the attendants. The bride wore an aquamarine chiffon dress fashioned with circular draped skirt with accessories to match. Her shoulder bouquet was of Ophelia roses and valley lilies and she carried a white Bible showered with orange blossoms. Mrs. Read wore an afternoon dress of blue chiffon with accessories to match and she also wore a shoulder bouquet of Ophelia roses and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Shaddix left for a wedding trip through Florida, after which they will be at home on Fourth street, N. E. For traveling Mrs. Shaddix wore a suit of light tan with matching accessories.

Atlanta Federation To Plant In Honor of Miss Alice Baxter

Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs will plant and dedicate a tree to Miss Alice Baxter, in "Author's Grove," Piedmont park, at the entrance at Piedmont avenue and Thirteenth street Saturday afternoon, May 10, at 3:30 o'clock. Former Governor Clifford A. Walker will be principal speaker and will make the dedicatory address, while a musical program arranged by Mrs. John R. Hornady will be an interesting feature of the dedication service.

Miss Baxter, as chairman of forestry in the State Federation of Women's Clubs, also chairman of forestry in the fifth district, Federation of Women's Clubs, and forestry chairman in the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, has the distinction of being the only woman ever appointed by the state forestry committee, receiving her appointment by ex-Governor Clifford A. Walker during his administration as governor of the state of Georgia. Mrs. D. B. Gray, chairman of memorial tree planting, Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, is in charge of the dedication exercises and members of the committee are: Mrs. Oscar Palmour, co-chairman, and Mesdames W. F. Melton, R. K. Rambo, J. K. Ottley, Samuel Inman, Samuel Lumpkin, Norman Sharp, John R. Hornady, T. Guy Woolford, H. M. Nicholes, Victor Kreigshaber, H. G. Hasting, Kate Green Hess, J. W. Wills, Lambdin Kay, R. I. Reed and Miss Cora Everroad.

Mrs. Samuel Francis Boykin, president of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, urges the attendance of all federated members and requests a representation from every club. The federation heartily indorses "National Music Week," May 4 to 11, inclusive, and will co-operate with the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce in the celebration of music, including specially arranged radio programs and two mammoth concerts to be given without admission charge. The first of these concerts is to be given on Sunday afternoon, May 4, at 3 o'clock, in the auditorium of Trinity M. E. church, on Washington street, and the second, which will be an innovation, will be given at the close of "National Music Week," in Wesley Memorial church, Sunday afternoon, May 11, at 3 p. m.

Mrs. Mildred Seydell is chairman of international relations, Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, calls attention to the scrapbook contest, and requests all scrapbooks made of international clippings to compete for the $20 gold piece to be sent to her address, 1098 Spring street, N. W., not later than Monday, May 5. For further information call Mrs. Seydell, Hemlock 0598.

Recital To Present Piano Class Program.

Miss Lenus Daniell will present pupils from her piano class in a National Music Week program this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the Old Ladies' home. Mrs. Wylie Issues Greetings To Her Georgia Daughters

To my beloved Georgia Daughters: Your state regent extends cordial greetings and best wishes for a successful year of service together. Let us clasp hands and pledge ourselves anew to the cause for which we stand willing to render any service or make any sacrifice for the honor and glory of our splendid society of Daughters of the American Revolution.

Let me thank you for the beautiful flowers sent me on the occasion of my installation into office by the national society during continental congress. An arm full of pink roses, tied with blue ribbon, my color—each rose bringing me a message of love and loyalty from the Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution. Let us be vigilant and active, for with our high ideals there is much to be accomplished. Deprive us of our ideals and we become degraded; preserve them and we move onward. Yours to serve.

State D.A.R. Editor Writes Article on 'D.A.R. Ideals'

BY MRS. STEWART COLLEY,
Of Grantville, State Editor.

Mrs. H. Fay Gaffney, of Columbus, retiring state regent of Georgia D. A. R. and candidate for vice president general from Georgia, has returned from Washington, D. C. Efficient, capable and charming, Mrs. Gaffney wins her way and is deserving of the high esteem in which she is held, having closed a popular, brilliant regime.

Recently when your editor was in The Constitution office and Mrs. Stafford told her what to do and how to do it, she suggested that there be a column on the D. A. R. page headed "D. A. R. Ideals." That column will be started today with a picture of a personality representative of a "D. A. R. Ideal." The picture referred to is that of Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, ex-vice president general from Georgia.

Seldom in D. A. R. history has there been a more sincere, a truer or more loyal evidence of ancestral idealism embodied into one beautiful person than there is in Mrs. Talmadge. May Talmadge, for that's what she is to Georgia daughters, is the material ideals are made of. She is a real ideal, and an ideal real.

Recently while in Washington, without any knowledge on her part, she was given well-deserved honors. First, she was elected vice president of the National Officers' Club, this club being the quintessence of all the inside workings of the national society. She was elected counselor of the "Daughters of the Barons of Runnymede" and president of the Officers' Club of Georgia. The national society was fortunate enough to have Mrs. Talmadge as chairman of the magazine committee and also as chairman of the student loan fund. Always gracious, always true, always charming, is May Talmadge. She uses her God-given personality for the good of those with whom she comes in contact.

The beloved state regent, Mrs. Bun Wylie, has returned from the Continental Congress in Washington. En route home she stopped over in Richmond, Va., for a visit. Georgia daughters have Virginia to thank for giving such a splendid regent. Mrs. Wylie was Virginia born but Georgia raised, and Georgia is indeed delighted to claim as her own this popular new regent.

John Ball chapter, of Wilkinson county, met at the home of Mrs. J. H. Duggan, at Irwinton, at 4 o'clock Friday, April 11. It being the annual election of officers, the following were chosen: Regent, Mrs. Victor Davidson, Irwinton; first vice regent, Mrs. J. W. Hooks, Gordon; second vice regent, Mrs. John Porter, Jr.; recording secretary, Miss Willie Davis, Irwinton; corresponding secretary, Mrs. A. C. Todd, McIntyre; registrar, Miss Addigene Cason, Toomsboro, Ga.; historian, Mrs. C. G. Kitchens, Danville, Ga.; treasurer, Mrs. J. H. Duggan, Irwinton, Ga.; reporter, Mrs. Gertrude Carswell, Irwinton, Ga.; chaplain, Mrs. N. H. Bacon, Irwinton. Reports were given from committees and the historian, Mrs. J. W. Hooks, reported the county history was in the hands of the publisher. The associate member, Mrs. M. T. Nichols, of Boston, Mass., attended, and a response to roll call with names of Revolutionary battles was followed by a reading by Miss Willie Davis.

Thomasville chapter met at the home of Miss Sarah Margaret Woodson, and Miss Bessie Hopkins was joint hostess. The chapter welcomed two new members, Mesdames J. K. Harper and F. C. Jones. The election of officers was held and the following elected: Regent, Miss Evelyn Cockrell; vice regent, Mrs. J. R. Lockhart; secretary, Mrs. W. D. Hargrave; treasurer, Miss Ruth Burch; registrar, Mrs. F. L. MacIntyre, and Miss Bessie Merrill was elected historian. The chapter is studying historic spots, and along this line Miss Bessie Hopkins told of Meadow Garden, the home of George Walton, and of St. Paul Episcopal church. Both of these historic shrines are located in Augusta. Miss Hopkins has in her possession a copy of the original Declaration of Independence. This copy was exhibited at the meeting.

William Marsh chapter of LaFayette met recently at the home of Mrs. W. A. Enloe. Miss Sarah Enloe assisted her mother in entertaining. Miss Sara Hackney, vice regent, presided, and Mrs. A. B. Arnold reported plans for bookcases to be placed in Gordon hall and Mrs. B. W. Stiles, chapter historian, gave her report. The program was as follows: "The Cherokee Indian," subject of the historical program led by Mrs. J. E. Patton, was as follows: "The Cherokee of Northwest Georgia," Mrs. Tom Lee; "Santula, an Indian Legend of Western North Carolina," Mrs. W. A. Enloe; "The Land of the Cherokees," poem, Miss Sara Hackney; "Interesting Incidents of Indian Life in This Section," Mrs. D. W. Stiles. The musical program was directed by Mrs. Caroline Arnold. Miss Sarah Enloe gave a talk on Indian music. Miss Laura Frances Steele, dressed as an Indian maiden, san "By the Waters of Minnetonka." Song, "Land of the Sky Blue Waters," Miss Clarentine Knox.

Stephen Heard chapter, D. A. R., of Elberton, met recently with Mrs. R. E. Hudgens at her home. The rooms were beautiful with a variety of spring flowers. The regent, Mrs. T. O. Tabor, Jr., presided over a short business session and appointed a committee from the chapter, consisting of Mesdames Z. W. Copeland, W. H. Paine, Addie Grogan and Miss Edna Rogers, to co-operate with a committee from the Chamber of Commerce in the erection of a suitable monument honoring Governor Stephen Heard. Mrs. Tabor gave a resume of the year's work and the delegate, Miss Mary Lizzie Wright, gave a report of the recent conference in Newnan. The following nominating committee was appointed: Miss Edna Rogers, Miss Ellie Fortson and Mrs. W. H. Paine. A paper was given by Mrs. W. H. Irvin on "A Pilgrimage to Historic St. Simon's Island." This was made more interesting by reason of the personal impression of Mrs. Irvin, who had recently visited the island. An instrumental selection was rendered by Miss Olive Edwards.

General James Jackson chapter of Valdosta met recently at the Woman's building. Mrs. Alex Peeples, the regent, presided and gave a brief history of gift scholarships. Mrs. Di Ingram also discussed this subject. A report of the conference held in Newnan was given by Mrs. Peeples, especial attention being called to the strong address made by Congressman Wright on national defense. The report of the nominating committee was then given and was unanimously accepted. The following program was rendered by young ladies of the Georgia State Woman's College: Solo, "Cradle Song" (Kreisler), Miss Mary Elaine Flannagan, accompanied by Miss Alimae Temple; reading, "The Bath," Miss Mildred Winship; vocal selection, "Song of Songs" (Moya), college glee club, Miss Lois Ford, soloist. A report was made on the loan scholarship by Mrs. Di Ingram. There are 14 young ladies maintained at the Georgia State Woman's College by this fund. The following were hostesses: Mesdames E. White, J. B. Copeland, T. A. Baker, W. R. Strickland and Miss Anne Hopper.

Accorded Many Honors

Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, of Athens, has been accorded many honors by the Daughters of the American Revolution. She is an ex-vice president general from Georgia, and recently was elected vice president of the National Officers' Club. She is counselor of the Daughters of the Barons of Runnemede and is president of the Officers' Club of Georgia. She is also chairman of the magazine committee of the national society and chairman of the student loan fund.

Georgia University Faculty Give Many Entertainments

ATHENS, Ga., May 3.—Numerous entertainments were given this weekend by officials and members of the faculty of the University of Georgia for the distinguished visitors in attendance at the sixth annual religious welfare conference, which was held Friday. Chancellor Charles M. Snelling entertained with a beautiful dinner at his home Thursday evening in honor of Dr. Charles R. Brown, dean emeritus of the Divinity school at Yale University, who was the principal speaker at the conference. Another entertainment given by the Chancellor and Mrs. Snelling was the buffet luncheon Friday, to which more than 50 of the distinguished visitors in Athens were invited. The faculty of the University and their wives were hosts Friday afternoon at a reception at War Memorial hall, to which the guests of the university were invited. A special musical program was rendered at this reception by the Girls' Glee Club.

High School Journalists.

Preparations for the entertainment of the high school journalists of Georgia, who are expected to attend the third annual convention of the Georgia Scholastic Press Association at the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism Friday, May 9, have been completed. Official delegates will be entertained at a luncheon which is being sponsored by the Georgia chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, national professional journalistic fraternity. Members of this organization and the women students in journalism who are members of the scribes will act as escorts to the visitors on a tour of the Georgia campus. Adolph Rosenberg, Albany, president of the Georgia Scholastic Press Association, and Miss Barbara Baker, of Girls' High school, Atlanta, will preside at the sessions of the convention, which will include addresses and lectures by members of the university faculty and round table conferences on problems of high school journalism, to be participated in by the student journalists and their faculty advisers.

Dr. R. P. Brooks, dean of the school of commerce, attended the annual convention of the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Commerce at the University of Iowa, Iowa City. The announcement of the Georgia School of Commerce for the 1930-31 session has just come from the press, and is available to those interested. The April issue of the Georgia Business Review, also published by the school of commerce, through its bureau of business research, in conjunction with the Citizens & Southern National bank, was released the first of the week.

Members of the Demosthenian Literary Society were entertained by the Pioneer Club, a group of women students. The Demosthenians offered their regular weekly programs of debates and declamations for their hostesses, who in turn provided the entertainment.

Dr. T. H. McHatton, head of the division of horticulture at the Georgia State College of Agriculture, was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Blue Key council Monday. Other faculty members in attendance were Professor John E. Drewry, of the Henry W. Grady School of Journalism, and Professor Merritt B. Pound, of the history department. The following new members were admitted to the Georgia chapter of this national advisory council at this week's gathering: John Oliver, Valdosta; Frank Costangy, Atlanta; Frank Phinizy, Augusta; Frank S. Lesser, Rome; Richard W. Murphy, Savannah; John T. Carlton, Decatur; Marvin Cox, Waynesboro; John Maddox, Rome; Cecil Hurst, Newnan; Hamilton Lokey, Atlanta; Pierce Hughs, Newnan; Preston Rawlins, McRae; Eugene Baldwin, Dublin; George Miller, Birmingham, Ala.; Sandford Sanford, Augusta, and Herbert Haffet, Atlanta.

The Atlanta clearing house has offered a prize to the student in the Lumpkin Law school preparing the best model will. The winning manuscript will be printed in leading banking magazines.

Sophomore Winner.

Richard Montgomery, Cave Springs, has been announced as winner of the annual sophomore declamation contest at the university, and will be given a silver loving cup. Alex B. Russell, Winder, and Emory F. Robinson, Ochlochnee, won second and third places.

The Society of Contemporary Verse of Ithaca, New York, has invited students of the university to participate in a national poetry contest that it is now sponsoring. It is understood that several local persons will enter the contest.

Theta chapter of the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity celebrated its first anniversary with a banquet at a local hotel Friday evening. Among those invited were Dean S. V. Sanford; H. J. Stegeman, director of athletics and dean of men; E. L. Secrest, secretary of the university Y. M. C. A., and officers of the Pan-Hellenic council.

The annual banquet of Alpha Omega, pre-medical fraternity at the university, was held Friday evening, with Starr Ingram, Griffin, president, in charge. Dr. James B. Mitchell, associate professor of zoology, was the principal speaker. Honor guests include Dr. Mitchell and Mrs. Mitchell; Dr. George H. Boyd, head of the zoology department, and Mrs. Boyd; Professor C. J. Brockman, of the chemistry department, and Mrs. Brockman.

Members of the Chi Psi fraternity entertained Friday evening with an informal house dance at their chapter home. Chaperons were Professor and Mrs. M. H. Bryan and Captain and Mrs. E. W. Godbold.

Among those in attendance at the student training conference, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. college groups of the state, which was held in conjunction with the religious welfare conference, were O. R. Magill, southern regional secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Miss Carrie Meares, national Y. W. C. A. secretary, New York city; W. N. Cashion, Georgia Tech, and H. W. Rohrer, state Y. M. C. A. secretary.

Miss Olivia Dunbar Weds Willis Snell.

At a quiet home ceremony, the wedding of Miss Olivia Eugenia Dunbar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William May Dunbar, to William Edward Snell, took place at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, May 1, at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Willie Bicks Snell, 1971 Palafox drive.

Rev. W. H. Cooper performed the ring ceremony, the bridal couple being attended by Miss Lucy Dunbar, sister of the bride, and Thomas N. Snell, brother of the groom. Only relatives and a few close friends of the bride and groom were present. The bride wore a costume of blue crepe, becomingly designed, with a close-fitting hat and accessories to match.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Snell left on an automobile tour through the mountains of western North Carolina, planning to make their home in Atlanta upon their return.

Military Set Dine and Dance At Series of Social Affairs

FORT McPHERSON, May 3.—A number of social affairs are interesting the garrison contingent in spite of the lull in entertainments which usually follows the colorful opera season. Monday evening Lieutenant Walter Scott Winn, Jr., and Mrs. Winn will entertain at an informal dinner party at their quarters in the garrison. Covers will be placed for 18 members of the garrison set.

Lieutenant Charles R. Landon and Mrs. Landon entertained Monday evening at dinner at their quarters at the garrison. Covers will be placed for Brigadier General George H. Estes and Mrs. Estes, Captain William Sharp and Mrs. Sharp, Mrs. Robert Shuffleberger and Lieutenant Landon and Mrs. Landon.

Friday evening Captain Lowell Rooks and Mrs. Rooks will be hosts at an informal buffet supper at their quarters in the garrison. Covers will be placed for 24 members of the military set. Later in the evening Captain Rooks and Mrs. Rooks and their guests will attend the hop at the Officers' Club.

One of the gayest parties of the week was the dinner-dance given at Cascade terrace by Captain Druid E. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler. The guests, numbering 35 members of the military set, were seated at a U-shaped table, where jade green bowls of pink roses and white snowballs were placed at intervals and slender tapers burned in jade green holders. The clever favors and the nut cups added additional color notes.

Captain Charles Brice and Mrs. Brice entertained Friday evening at dinner at their quarters. The perfectly appointed table was centered with a wicker basket filled with blue corn flowers and pink roses, while pink tapers glowed at intervals. Covers were placed for Colonel George L. McKeeby and Mrs. McKeeby, Captain Thomas H. Ramsey and Mrs. Ramsey, Mrs. John R. Dinsmore, Captain William Sharp and Mrs. Sharp, and Captain Brice and Mrs. Brice.

Saturday evening Captain Brice and Mrs. Brice were again hosts at dinner at their quarters. The dinner color motif of blue and yellow was carried out in the blue larkspur and yellow iris and slender green candles were placed in silver holders. Covers were placed for Major J. Vincent Falisi and Mrs. Falisi, Mrs. G. Kirkwood Tunnah, of Little Rock, Ark. Captain Druid E. Wheeler and Mrs. Wheeler and Captain Lowell W. Rooks and Mrs. Rooks.

Saturday evening Captain William Sharp and Mrs. Sharp entertained at a box party at the Erlanger theater preceded by an informal supper at their quarters. The perfectly appointed table was centered by a low bowl of spring flowers in pastel shades. Covers were placed for Brigadier General George H. Estes and Mrs. Estes, Major Harvard C. Moore and Mrs. Moore, Mrs. John R. Dinsmore, Captain Thomas H. Ramsey, Lieutenant Walter Scott Winn., Jr., and Mrs. Winn.

The opera season attracted a number of the military set and their guests. Major General E. J. Peyton and Mrs. Peyton were opera patrons accompanied by their lovely daughter, Mrs. Norman Matthias, of Fort Humphrey, Va., and their guest, Mrs. George P. Harrison, of Opelika, Ala. Colonel Clyde C. Abraham and Mrs. Abraham and their sister, Mrs. Arthur E. Crow, of Uniontown, Pa., and Major G. B. Ferris and Mrs. Ferris, of Fort Benning, were a congenial group attending the opera. Miss Dorothy Tebbetts and Miss Patrice Donahue were also interested patrons during opera week.

There was a general exodus Friday for the infantry school at Fort Benning, where a polo tournament will take place with three teams, the Governor's Horse Guards, the McPherson squad and the infantry squads taking part. The fort team, including Major Gustav H. Franke, Captain Albert G. Wing, Lieutenant William Biddle, Lieutenant Frank Spettel and Oscar Shubert, motored to Columbus Friday, while a number of the army set plan to leave this week to return to the garrison Wednesday.

Pony Show and Dancing To Feature Egleston Hospital Pet Parade May 10

Entries for the mammoth pet parade which will be staged on the grounds of the Egleston Memorial Hospital for Children Saturday afternoon, May 10, are coming in rapidly. This parade will be the second annual affair given by members of the woman's board of the hospital under the chairmanship of Mrs. Stacy E. Hill and Miss Yolande Gwin.

Major Trammell Scott will act as ringmaster and the judges for all events and classes will be J. Carroll Payne, Hal Lindsay, John K. Ottley, Morris Brandon and Earl Green.

Recent Entries.

Fifteen different animals have been entered and prizes will be awarded in each class. Special prizes will be given for the oldest animal, the youngest, the fattest, the thinnest, the smartest, the largest, the smallest, the unique pet, the best cared for animal which has been rescued from the streets and the best stunt.

A feature of the parade will be the pony parade with the riders in costume. Trammell Scott has offered a handsome trophy for the best costume regardless of the pony. A prize will also be given for the best pony. Among those who will ride will be Josephine Clapp, who will wear the costume in which she won the first prize in Savannah in representing a Knight of the Holy Grail. William Candler, Jr., will be Robin Hood; Peter Drummond will ride a donkey dressed as a clown; Jean Oliver will be a charming Bo Peep, Mary Trammell Scott will wear an attractive farmerette costume; Bob Alston will represent a pirate and numerous others will add interest to this unique performance.

Following the parade, 84 children will give a finished exhibition of dancing on the lawn under the direction of Mrs. Sarah Wagstaff Rogers.

Assisting Mrs. Rogers will be Mrs. Frank C. Owens, Mrs. H. H. McCall, Jr.; Mrs. Walter Wellborn, Jr.; Mrs. Murdock Equen, Mrs. William E. Campbell, Jr.; Mrs. C. F. Palmer and Mrs. Frank Carter. The parade will start promptly at 2:30 o'clock on the grounds of the hospital on Forrest avenue road. Mrs. Robert Cotton Alston and Mrs. William Healey are chairmen of ribbons and prizes.

Junior League.

Mrs. William E. Campbell and a group of Junior matrons will sell balloons and refreshments during the afternoon and members of various garden clubs throughout the city will sell flowers.

Those assisting Mrs. Campbell will be Mesdames William Healey, William McKenzie, Albert H. Dowling, Deloney Sledge, Frank Ownes, Charlotte M. Fletcher, Wayne Martin, J. B. Lenhart, Edgar Dunlap, James Dunlap, Lauren Goldsmith, Emily Robinson Head, Eugene Black, Jr.; C. B. Daniel, Reginald Pope, Ivor Kenway and E. K. Davis.

Mrs. Paul Hulfish and a group of Girl and Boy Scouts will be in charge during the afternoon to keep the various pets in the right booths and to be in charge of the gate. Admission will be 25 cents with or without pet, and tickets may be obtained during the coming week from Mrs. Henry Troutman or may be bought at the gates the day of the parade, the proceeds to be used in the maintenance of the hospital.

Miss Mathews Weds Mr. Holden Thursday, June 5

Cordial social interest is centered today throughout the south and east, in the announcement of the engagement of Miss Margaret Angelin Mathews to Frederic Addison Holden, of Washington, D. C., the marriage to be solemnized Thursday, June 5, at the Druid Hills Methodist church.

Miss Mathews is the oldest daughter of Mrs. Zadoc Walter Mathews and the late Mr. Mathews. She is an attractive young woman, her charming personality and graciousness of manner having won for her a host of friends. She received her education in the schools of Atlanta and Washington, D. C.

Mr. Holden is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Frances Holden, of Washington, D. C., and is at present connected with the navy department of the United States government in that city. He is a graduate of Emory University and the Candler School of Theology and is a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity.

"The Charm School" To Be Presented.

"The Charm School," a comedy in three acts, will be presented by the senior class of the Girls' High school on May 10 at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon and 8:30 o'clock in the evening, in the Woman's Club auditorium. For many years it has been the custom of the senior class to present to the Atlanta public each spring, a play, usually of a light and humorous character. This year a most amusing and entertaining presentation of "The Charm School" will be given The plot which is both ingenuous and humorous, deals with the experiences of a young man, Austin Bevans, who has been bequeathed the ownership of an exclusive girls' school. He takes charge of the school with the stipulation that none of his attractive pupils succumb to his charms. The temptation proves too great, however, for one of the young girls, the heroine, Elise Stafford, falls in love with him. The havoc wrought by this unfortunate occurrence is happily adjusted and the daring hero and charming heroine are victorious over seemingly insurmountable obstacles.

The cast is one which assures the play great success, since all of the roles are filled by girls of unusual ability. Miss Eunice Howsmon, as the handsome and irresistible hero, plays the role of the principal of the Fairview school. As heroine, Miss Martha England brings out all the winsome and charming characteristics of Elise. There are many others whose ability fits them for the roles which they act. Much humor and enjoyment are added by the twins, Jim and Tim Simpkins, played by Misses Gladys Pratt and Olivia Harris.

Dr. and Mrs. Miller Attend Rose Show.

THOMASVILLE, Ga., May 3.—Dr. and Mrs. Royal J. Miller, of Atlanta, celebrated the anniversary of their marriage by attending the Thomasville rose show. Mrs. Miller was formerly Miss Belle McLendon, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. William McLendon, of Thomasville, and sister of the late Guyton McLendon, who was for many years secretary of state for Georgia. Dr. T. M. McIntosh, a prominent physician of Thomasville, is a cousin of Mrs. Miller.

TWO Moods in Spectator Slippers

BY I. Miller? Naturally! For who else could have conceived the distinctly feminine type of spectator slipper pictured above? With its bandings and appliques in contrast? Its smart perforations? Its graceful heel? To be the perfect companion for the "dressmaker" ensembles of the moment? And for that matter—who but I. Miller could have retained all the swanky swagger of the leather-heeled Sofia below and still have refined its lines—with such nicety? . . . But after all, one grows to expect so much from I. Miller!

In seasonable combinations of white and pastels—both contrasted with deeper tones.

Month of May Filled With Activities for Girl Scouts

Every day in May will be a busy day for Girl Scouts in Atlanta. Mrs. Frank D. Holland will entertain at her home on Eleventh street Monday afternoon, May 5, in honor of Girl Scout council, and Miss Katherine Park, of the national staff, Troup 5, will spend week-end of the 10th at Civitania. Mrs. William F. Talley entertained the Leaders' Association at tea Monday, May 12, in honor of Miss Park. The fourth annual conference of the leadership in Girl Scouting in the states of North and South Carolina, Georgia and Florida opens at the Biltmore hotel May 15, continuing through Saturday, May 17. On Friday, May 16, the outstanding girls in scouting in these states will come together in conference for a two-day session at the Biltmore. West End troop will spend May 17-18 at Civitania. St. Mark's troop will be in camp week-end of May 24 with R. L. Hope and Druid Hills Troop 32 spending Saturday, May 25. Washington seminary troops with Miss Florence Perkins as leader and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Root as guests, will be at camp May 27 and 28. Week-end camping will close on May 31 with Druid Hills Troop 1 in camp. The first two weeks of the camping season has already a waiting list with the month of July reservations rapidly filling.

The oak grove of Colonel Peyton H. Shook on Cleburn avenue was the meeting place of Druid Hills Methodist Troop 32 Wednesday afternoon. Gladys Irene Cook, daughter of Gladys Hanson and a member of the troop, was hostess to Miss Adelaide Nelson and 50 Girl Scouts of Troop 1. Nature games were enjoyed and a lesson in woodcraft. Thee formal gardens of Mrs. Arthur Harris on Ponce de Leon will be the scene of the troop meeting Wednesday afternoon, May 7, with Leila Harris as hostess. A study of the garden flower merit badge will be followed by the Scouts with a walk through the gardens that have hundreds of familiar and rare species of flowering plants and shrubs. Troop 38 meets Thursday in Mr. Tufts' gardens.

Girl Scouts throughout Georgia are co-operating with the state board of health in its program, "Child Health and Play," promoting activities through the month of May. In the Fulton County Health and Field Day, celebrated at Lakewood park on May 9, Girl Scouts of R. L. Hope school on Piedmont road, will present before the court of the king and queen of health the heritage of the American Girl Scout. The scene will present the forbears of the American girl, the Indian maid with her knowledge of the out-of-doors, the Puritan maid with her thriftiness and home-loving nature, the French and Spanish girl with the inborn love of music and art and the spirit of America, typifying the land of opportunity in education, health and recreation. Jean Johnson will be the reader. Elizabeth Jones the page and Charlotte Ripley the spirit of America. Members of Troop 22, under direction of Mrs. C. H. Cushman, will portray the Girl Scouts, the Indian, Puritan, French and Spanish maidens.

First Presbyterian troop is spending the week-end at Camp Civitania with Miss Helen Forsdick as leader. Samuel Inman Girl Scouts spent Saturday at camp building outdoor fires for simple cooking and trailing wild flowers through the camp woods. St. Mark's Troop 10 hiked from Emory University campus to Wallace's mill with Mrs. B. H. Wagnon and Scout Lucile Taylor as guides. Lunch was cooked on a large flat rock on the edge of the mill stream.

Saturday afternoon Troops 20, 21 and 22 were hostess at a silver tea at the Peachtree Road Woman's Club library for the benefit of the children's department of the library. A musical program was given by members of the troop. Mrs. C. H. Cushman, Mrs. A. T. Hartford, Mrs. C. V. Logan and Mrs. Hugh Lester are leaders of these groups.

Miss Frances Parks Will Be Honored At Party Series

Miss Frances Parks, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Caldwell Lewis, whose engagement was recently announced to Frank Beaman Bruce, of Greenville, S. C., is being honored at a number of pre-nuptial affairs. Miss Parks will be honor guest Wednesday, May 7, at a miscellaneous shower, at which Mrs. W. L. McCalley, Jr., will be hostess at her home on West wood avenue.

Mrs. A. K. Kellam will entertain at a bridge-tea in honor of Miss Parks at her home, 1150 North avenue.

Miss Laura Slater will be hostess Saturday, May 24, at a luncheon in honor of Miss Parks.

Mrs. Fred Allman and Mrs. E. L. McCrory will entertain at a bridge-tea honoring Miss Parks the date to be announced later. Mrs. John Fleming Kellam, Jr., will entertain Miss Parks at a luncheon, the date to be announced later.

Cascade O. E. S. To Meet Tuesday.

Louise Stanley. The camp will be under the direction of Miss Margaret Thomasma, executive secretary of the Camp Fire Girls, who has had experience in directing camps in other sections of the country. The camp committee of Camp Fire Girls' board of directors includes: J. Frank Beck, chairman; Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, Luther E. Allen, Rawson Collier, Dr. Harvey W. Cox, William J. Sayward and H. H. Trotti. The camp closes August 11.

Camp Program.

The camp program will be divided into the following two and one-week periods: June 16 to June 30, June 30 to July 7, July 7 to July 21, July 21 to July 28, July 28 to August 11. Girls who can stay only one week may register accordingly for either of the one-week periods. If a girl cannot enter on any of the dates given above special arrangements will be made by communicating with the Camp Fire office. No girl will be permitted to arrive at camp on Sunday. Parents are asked to co-operate in this matter. Registrations are accepted for any number of weeks from one to eight.

Initial registration fee of $1, not included in weekly rate, must accompany application, and rates are payable in full on arrival at camp, unless otherwise arranged, with no refunds except in case of illness. Rates for registered Camp Fire Girls and guardians within Atlanta district will be $8 per week. Rates for registered Camp Fire Girls and guardians outside Atlanta district will be $10 per week. Rates for non-Camp Fire Girls will be $15 per week. Any guardian instrumental in bringing 10 girls to camp for a certain period will have her camp rate paid for the period the girls remain in camp. Blue Birds may register for the fourth period. They will form a junior camp of their own, with a program adapted to their age. Rates for Blue Birds will be $10 per week. Blue Birds are between the ages of 8 and 10 years. Camp Fire Girls are between the ages of 10 and 18 years.

May Basket Festival.

During May the Camp Fire Girls will celebrate with a May basket festival, and each group will select a certain May flower for its basket as symbolic of the new members who will join Camp Fire during the month the Girls' Council will meet, Monday, May 5, at Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose auditorium at 3 o'clock. The scribe and council representative of each group are urged to be present as the council meeting will be in the nature of a May basket party.

A training course for new leaders will be conducted by Miss Margaret Thomasma and a lecture on Camp Fire systems of honor will be given Thursday, May 8, at 3 o'clock, at Chamberlin - Johnson - DuBose auditorium.

Minisak group, Mrs. W. M. Wilks, guardian, plans a nature hike Tuesday, May 6, and will cook dinner in the woods, Cheschamay. Mrs. Carl Raper, guardian, meets Monday, May 5, at the home of Harriet Adams, 1176 Ewing place, and Miss Martha Flint will plan the meetings for May.

Wococharhee, Miss Melville Doughty, guardian, meets Friday, May 9, to work on headbands and symbols. Winota, Mrs. George W. Sheffer, Jr., guardian, was conducted through the Nehi Bottling Company at a recent meeting. Eluta, Mrs. Paul Cousins, guardian, elected the following officers: Miss Mary Frances Jones, president; Miss Nellie May O'Quinn, vice president; Miss Betty Cousins, secretary; Miss Nancy Hill, treasurer; Miss Helen Allen, scribe; Miss Jane Richardson, council representative.

Wesleyan Alumnae Give Fashion Show At Rich's, May 10

A tea and fashion show will be sponsored by Group No. 1 of the Atlanta Wesleyan Alumnae Association at Rich's tea room, Saturday afternoon, May 10. The fashion show, which will be under the personal supervision of Martin Amorous, well-known stylist of Rich's, incorporated, will feature the smartest of the early summer frocks.

Wesleyan Alumnae, chosen by Mrs. H. H. Ware to model the latest sports, evening and street costumes, are Mrs. Miller Van Allen, Mrs. W. R. Bentley, Miss Mildred Gower, Miss Allie Stephens, Miss Elinor McDonald, Miss Mary Claire Powell. Miss Marguerite Gunn, Mrs. Bigham Smith, Mrs. Fred Russell, Jr., and others.

Miss Merrill McMichael has appointed a committee to plan the refreshments while Mrs. Travis A. Stephenson will be in charge of the decorations. Mrs. A. M. Roan is superintending the sale of tables. Many of the alumnae from the entire Atlanta club have already made reservations. The public is cordially invited and reservations ($2 per table) may be made by calling Mrs. A. M. Roan, Dearborn 2092-W, and Mrs. A. Worth Hobby, Hemlock 8632.

Garden Hills Club To Meet Tuesday.

The Garden Hills Woman's Club meets Tuesday, May 6, at 2:30 o'clock, at the clubhouse on Bolling road. Mrs. Frank E. Matthews will speak on "Rock Gardens." The hostess for the afternoon will be Mrs. H. McC. Stanford, Mrs. Lake Quillian, and Mrs. Lafayette Butler. Mrs. H. Dumas will represent the club at the State Federation of Women's Clubs at Macon. Other members will attend during the week.

Uncle Sam's Children

Chairman of the President's Committee Outlines the Hopes of the Conference on Child Health and Protection

By Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur

Secretary of the Interior of the United States

THE family of the better organization of our modern civilization are becoming increasingly necessary because of the longer time now required for the human being to attain social maturity. The artificial standard of twenty-one years for males and eighteen years for females, determined on the basis of biology and past experience ,has become embeddied in the law. To provide food, protection and training for a eriod of twenty to twenty-five years for youth demands reasonable stability of conditions in the home and in society. With the great advances, made through discovery, invention and research, we are developing a more intricate and complicated civilization. With this there is a gradual lengthening of the preparatory period of life.

Through the capture of the power of the machine we have taken much of the world off the backs of human beings and draft animals. Through this use of power we have more wealth and more leisure. Alongside of this, though, is the increasing difficulty of operating the enormous enterprises science has given us and which are often world-wide in scope. Much that we have done to advance civilization has brought about a multiplication of our difficulties. The old days when the child was one of the principal sources of the wealth of the family have largely gone by in our present era in America. Large families were requisite two or three or four generations ago in order to do the manifold work of the farm and the household. The possibilities of a family upon a piece of land depended largely upon the number of human and animal workers that could be provided.

The day of the bound-out child has gone by, but he was an important soucre of labor during much of our country's development. In general, instead of the apprentice system and the bound-out method of dealing with surplus children in the home, we have now a most widespread costly and important educational system offering to most of the children of the land a period of training at least up until the sixteenth year, and for those of more enterprise, training for many years beyond. Our whole tendency is to delay the maturity of youth, in so far as reaching a plane of self-support and family support is concerned.

It now takes an average of twenty-five years to prepare properly a physician, lawyer, minister, teacher, or an expert in the field of business administration. It requires also much study beyond that period to provide the experts for the trained service of our community life. Our future safety will rest on the number of these we can find, train adequately and put into service.

The child is acquiring a new significance with this extension of responsibility and opportunity. We are sensing the values of the child in many new ways. Our present democracies are the result of a definite shift in human thinking. The more imperialistic conceptions of providing cannon fodder and drudge labor through an advancing birth rate, while still in the world, are of less significance. We see in the proper training of the child the opportunity for continued advance in our social mechanism. We see in the failure to give such training the crashing of our hopes and the degradation of our opportunities.

Great advances have been made in every phase of the handling of childhood from conception to maturity. But there is a very uneven use of the knowledge we possess. President Hoover, in setting up the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection has brought together a group of several hundred experts to consolidate the gains that have been made in handling children in the years that have gone by and to map out the next great campaign which will move us forward.

One man alone—Pasteur—through his discovery of the relationship of microorganisms to disease, did more for children than any one is ever likely to do again. Before his discovery, all children had to pass through a series of tragic and dangerous periods due to infectious disease, many of them now known to be preventive. We are free from many of the terrors that kept mothers in anxiety and filled the cemeteries with little coffins, and we can now extend the range of interest and assistance to children to many other fields. The White House conference will begin with the beginning and extend through to maturity.

One of the sections of this conference will study the whole question of medical service for children. Dr. Samuel McC. Hamill is chairman of this section. Another, under the chairmanship of Surgeon-General Hugh S. Cumming will study the Public Health Service and its administration, with subcommittees specializing on communicable disease control and milk production and control.

The education and training of the child will be the subject of a third section of the conference. Dr. F. J. Kelly will head the study. Separate groups will consider the problems of family and parent education, the infant and pre-school child, the school child, vocational guidance and child labor, recreation and physical education, special classes and the problem of youth outside of home and school.

Problems presented by the handicapped child will be studied by a fourth section under the chairmanship of Dr. C. C. Carstens. The state and local organizations for the handicapped will be investigated and other sub-committees will seek ways of bringing relief to the physically mentally and socially handicapped and the delinquent child.

The participation of the conference in the domain of health is of vital importance. This will form, necessarily much of the basis upon which results for the child are to be obtained. The conquest of the various diseases while well on its way, is far from complete. Each day the unselfish, patient workers in the laboratories of the world are providing more and more information which can be put to the service of the child in the prevention of disease and in the relief of those who are ill.

More significant, perhaps, than anything else is the new conception which our people are developing of health as a source both of wealth and happiness. The former conception of illness as unavoidable and due perhaps to acts of Providence is rapidly passing from the public mind. We are conscious more and more that disease in a child means that something has gone wrong which need not have gone wrong.

The nutrition of the child is fundamental to health. With the decrease in the capacity of the human mother to nourish her infant, there has come the compensation of accurate studies on other forms of feeding. The bottle fed child lacks certain qualities that come from the mother's breast, but can still be vigorous, strong and resistant to disease. The relationship of nutrition to sunshine and to proper food is now sufficiently understood so that diseases such as rickets no longer need occur, and tuberculosis is subject to control. We can provide vitamines from known sources in foods and can ,to a considerable measure, even with our present incomplete information understand and deal with deficiencies of exaggerations in the physiological action of the various and powerful glands of the body.

There is no glory that approximates the glory of a perfect child, perfect in body, mind and mental reaction. It is sad, indeed that we must face in our country the misery of the blasted child, damaged perhaps before birth in body or in mind, or damaged by disease later. We can not escape the fact that we have a considerable number of mental culls and physical culls to be considered as part of our child population.

In so far as we can see, there will always be a certain number of idiots, of subnormal children and of the deaf and the blind. Nature does not always evolve a perfect product with any of its living organisms, but a study and control of habits, of parenthood and of eugenics can reduce to lower levels the human misery associated with these types. There will always be accidents to human beings. Legs and arms will be cut off, heart valves will be damaged by disease, nerves will be paralyzed, even when the child starts with a normal foundation.

With our concept of human life as something that mush be preserved at all costs for the longest possible time, we face the problem of salvaging those who are below the normal level. One of the great problems before the White House Conference will be to see how far this salvage work can go and how it can be most wisely and economically accomplished. In strictly physical fields it is more tangible, and there are many experts available to help us in this rehabilitation.

In the field of behavior lies perhaps our greatest salvage problem. It seems to me that the control of the will and the necessary self-management which all human beings must learn, are the most vital processes for the child to acquire if it is to go forward to a contented, health and successful adult life. Habits are based on developed nervous mechanisms and we become the prey to them. That quality which we call character is strengthened through repeated decision, accepting present discomforts for future values. There is an element of fraud in Freudism, since it leans to the side of weakness and not to that of strength in the inevitable decision that every growing person must meet.

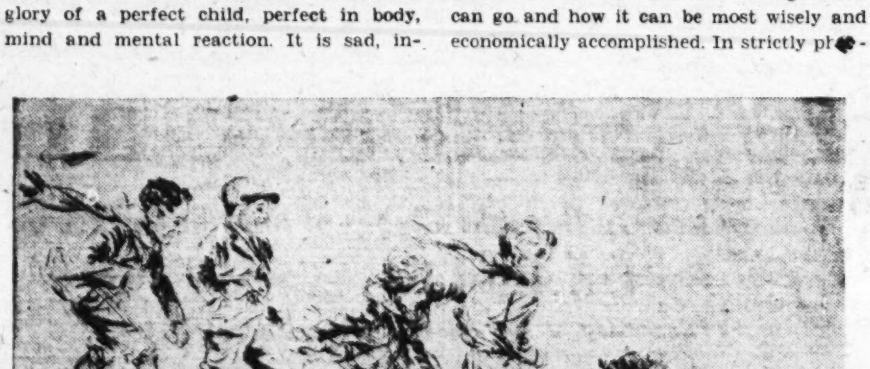

Soft-pillow bringing up leads to a mushy spinal marrow. Misdirected habits often lead to misbehavior, misbehavior to unsocial action and criminality. Youth is a period of trial and learning. Fortunate indeed is the child who does not have to try everything once, but who can let fools be fools and observe instead of imitate. With the growing child misbehavior must be taken at the child's level, not at the adult's level. We must view the juvenile period as one of self-training in which the adult must be helpful and sympathetic.

Significant in this period of training is what we call education. It now consumes a large portion of the time of youth. At the present time we marshal our children in schoolrooms, giving them set and similar exercises over a series of years, trying to impart to them the knowledge that has been gained in the past and to prepare them for the future. While we have had much experience, we are still far from understanding what the educational process should be for all of our children, and particularly what it should be for individual children. At the best, our results are mere averages. Many careful studies are going on in this direction. They need to be summarized and new ones put on their way.

With this prolongation of the child period of life, while there are new opportunities for training and education, there are new responsibilities in connection with the normal play life of the child and with what we now properly classify as recreation.

Our present attempt to bring up children in the midst of factories, apartment houses, paved streets, automobiles and machines, and in the absence of flowers, trees, grass, birds and animals, is a real test of our capacity to think in terms of the future. We can in no way escape biology. We have grown up through the ages under certain conditions. They were those of the open field and the open air, the sunshine and the rain and the natural opportunity provided for children under those conditions. The industrial world must be looked at coldly and critically and a place found in it where the children can develop normally to a capable, healthful and efficient manhood. Any failure on our part will be eventually disastrous. Dollars made in improved industry must be used to buy back a chance for children.

I doubt if there was ever a period in the history of the world when more was going on and when environment changes were more rapid than they are today. Since all of these changes have an effect in one way or another upon the mother and the child, a survey of just what has been done and what can be done, such as that offered by the White House Conference is, in my judgment, one of the most significant and important problems that human beings face today.

TRICKING ON THE MARGIN

A simple card trick that is often very effective consists of arranging the 12 coat cards in a horizontal row on the table. The performer, turning his back, asks someone to reverse one of the cards, and upon turning around names the changed card. The secret is found in the margin on the cards. You have no doubt observed that the margin at one side of a card is somewhat wider than at the other. When the performer arranges the cards on the table he sees that the narrow margins are all on one side of the row. Thue after someone has reversed a card a glance at the row will show which card was reversed. —The Pathfinder.

Joan Clement Boston Beauty

Daughter of Hub Editor Gives Rules for Handling "Romeos," Hard-Headed Business Men and Competition—"Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model" a Wild Myth

BY JOAN CLEMENT.

MANY romantic and glamorous stories have been written about the lives of models, both before and after the time of "Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model." And I, begin a Boston girl, the daughter of a Boston editor, and a young woman who has earned a good part of her yearly salary at modelling in New York, have put one expression upon my lips, whenever I read these fantastic stories.

It is a good New England expression which rushes to my lips for these yarns. I call them all "old foodle doodle." For the ordinary story about a model's life, whether it be fiction "straight," or whether it be the "continued in our next" serial of the Sunday supplement, is about as near to the real facts as Admiral Byrd is near to Chestnut street, Boston, at this particular moment.

But in case some of you do not recall these marvelous stories about models, let me help you to remember. In the fantastic tales, the model was always very fair and very frail, with one exception. She was Nellie, whom I have already mentioned, a paragon of virtue among models who were the very devil of the other thing. In winter all these fair and frail young ladies always wore ermine coats, except when they left their ermine at home in the closet and wore their sable coats instead.

The precious young creatures never rode out unless they were chauffeured about in a costly foreign car with a sterling silver hood that required no end of polishing. They always lived in luxurious suites at the Plaza—or the Copley-Plaza. And French maids who had left the employ of Madame the Duchess of Whatever You Wish, to make the hotel suites comfortable for the models, attended to their every whim.

Now, when we recall that until rather recently $30 a week was a pretty good salary for almost every model, we must admit that these models of fiction and the movies really Managed Their Money Very Well. Or else they had independent incomes, and only modelled for a hobby. Stuff and nonsense.

Whenever I read such "true stories at last," I break into a laugh louder than was the fashion in the days when Mrs. General was teaching the young ladies in a Dickens novel how to behave. And then I wonder if the credulous young flappers who read such nonsense would feel as the reporter felt, were I to tell them what it really means to be a model, much in demand, in our biggest American city, New York.

This gentleman was a reporter for an ultra weekly, that serves New York. He asked me to luncheon to get the "inside dope"—that was what he called it—about the life of a busy New York model. I told him all I knew about myself and about many lovely, busy, high-priced models. I gave him real facts. And the more I talked the longer grew his face, till he finished, as he paid the check—

"Darn it all," he said, "I always imagined there was real life, real color to the modelling profession."

Well, perhaps people might differ on what real life and real color may be. To be sure, no broken down duke or paunchy millionaire has ever drunk champagne out of my slipper.

If a girl wishes to get to the top of the profession, she faces a fairly competitive, aspiring life of constant study and endeavor to keep fit. Physical good looks and physical fitness of body are not all of the battle—but they are a good half. The other half is brains—the cool head, the proper self-respect, the constant insistence upon the dignity of the job.

"Quick as a flash she slapped his face for the —insult."

Which reminds me of a story. Now to be a really good model, the girl must feel a keen desire to exhibit at its best whatever it is that she may happen to be wearing. Women clients—men clients, may come up and examine closely her gown or wrap or hat or gloves or—even—her stockings and shoes, while she coolly and impersonally lends herself to the ultimate detail of inspection. Such close, burning scrutiny in private life would cause a certain sort of woman to send for a policeman. But—when exhibition—the closest observation is quite permissible, on occasion.

This girl of the story, it happened, was gowned in a new and very unusual silk which she was exhibiting for the first time for its wholesale manufacturers. It was the small ballroom of a smart hotel, and she walked up the aisle wearing the lovely creation. As she passed a certain buyer, he caught hold of her draperies. She stopped and held up a panel towards him, while she said a word about the fabric. He blurted out—

"Damn the fabric! You're the thing that interests me.

Quick as a flash, she slapped his face, for the insult. The man had crossed the imaginary footlights which should always separate the personalities of the models from their audience. And there was not a person at that fashion show—director, manager, model or audience but were with the girl when she inflicted her swift and not too subtle rebuke. The gentleman, I might add, was flushed with a drink not allowed by law.

Always Business.

A model in New York may make 35 or 50 dollars in a very few hours; on my biggest day I took in something over two hundred. But to make such a sum means patient punctuality, the flitting from one commercial studio or fashion show to another; often a luncheon omitted, and the most intense concentration always to grasp the spirit of the fashion show or fashion advertisement; to be able to hold a pose for three minutes, if it is a technicolor and —above all—to think of business all through the day and nothing but business. Sometimes that is hardest of all, when you are young, and living in a city full of your friends, and dearly enjoy to get away for luncheon or golf down on Long Island.

Now I suppose all the Boston girls who have ever wondered what it would be like to go to New York and try their chances, will feel that I have painted a hard, stern, uninteresting picture. And so I must hasten to add that to me the work is fascinating, and that it has its amusing features even though champagne has never come near my lizard skin slipper and—I believe—never will.

But there was a Spanish cavalier who did make me smile. At one time he also filled me with a little fear lest some day he would come tramp, tramp, tramping into my New York apartment, and shake the dust from his seven-league boots, and talk as romantically as he wrote in the one letter I received from him.

It happened a few months ago. He wrote me from Buenos Ayres that he had seen my picture adorning an advertisement for a nail enamel in the Ladies Home Journal. That he had gone to great lengths of cabling, to find out my name. That he would follow his letter shortly, and marry me at once and that—(this was his only hesitation)—he sincerely hoped that I would love Spain as much as I loved him.

I wanted to write back that there was a good chance I might love Spain much better than himself. At any rate, the tone of his letter was a bit alarming, and I could picture him breaking up a tea party when he swooped down, all too soon. So I hastened to cable him back—

"Forget me for all time! I am a happily married woman with six children!"

Need Cool Head.

Sometime ago I was one of a company of five New York models who were engaged for an out-of-town style show in a large up-state department store.

The manager had agreed with us on a certain sum for the afternoon show, and the same sum for the evening. At the conclusion of the matinee he paid us, remarking that thus he would save us time in the evening, since, being already paid, we would be able to catch the last train. That train was about as fast as a milk train! Besides, he had agreed, though not in writing, but over the long distance telephone, to pay us separately for each performance, to pay for our dinner, and to pay our expenses at the hotel since there was no decent train back to New York that night.

Now comes in the hard head. After he had paid us, as he believed in full, we did a little putting of our heads together, as they say in my New England. We all dressed in our street clothes, and most politely walked up to the manager, thanked him for our fee and wished him success with his evening's performance.

"But you were to appear in the evening," he said to us. I should have mentioned that the style show had been most successful and that every time the New York models appeared they had been heartily applauded.

"But," we answered him back, "you have just paid us the fee for one performance, with the explanation that there would be no more money."

He caught his breath for a moment; he tried to smile; he nearly choked; then he beamed with his ultimate decision—

"Oh, my dear young ladies, if that is all that is worrying you, I will pay you the same for the evening.' '

"No," we said, ever so politely, then added, "there are also our expenses—dinner and the hotel."

"Oh my dear young ladies, just add up the total and tell me, I will gladly pay everything that is reasonable to keep you on for the evening."

He paid—and we stayed.

I have often wondered why more New England girls, more girls from Boston, in particular, do not come to New York and try modelling. I find everywhere that New England girls and Boston girls are well received. Just recently Mrs. Chandler Hall, who, by the way, is a Boston woman, went to considerable pains to locate me. She explained I had that Boston look!

And she wanted me to find four other models who also "had the Boston look." Many she had already interviewed were "to definitely vaudevillians."

Of course, I only model part of my time, in hours I can spare away from the theater, or between engagements. But still, though I look forward to the theater as my lasting work, I am proud to be a model, too. And, taking a comprehensive last look at this model business, I think we will all agree—the old style model may have had more thrills. But today we make more money.

Labrador: First to Be Discovered, Last to Be Explored

QUICK frozen fish for world markets, newly discovered water-power sites, the most unsophisticated salmon and truot in the world; these are factors which along with radio and airplanes are tying Labrador to civilization, according to Sir Wilfred Grenfell, famous medical worker.

Dr. Grenfell told the National Geographic Society, when he was in Washington recently, that Labrador will soon follow Alaska on the road to progressive development of her resources.

Fish that Labrador could use only as fertilizer may soon become favorites of the American table by virtue of improvements in refrigeration.

Labrador fathered the new quick freezing process which makes it possible to ship fresh fish thousands of miles, he pointed out. It was noticed while fishing through the Labrador ice on a very cold day that the fish, which froze instantly upon being taken from the water, began to flop about when taken into a warm room.

Experiments revealed that by quick freezing the flesh of fish could be kept more firm and strong than by the older slow freezing method.

Although Labrador was the first land of North America to be discovered by Europeans, it is the last to be explored. Recently college boys from the United States discovered one of the finest water-power sites on the continent, a remarkable falls over to the sea. Grand Falls, in central Labrador, twice as high as Niagara, has a million horse power waiting to be harnessed. Vast inland forests of virgin pine await the inevitable demand of civilization for their timber.

No "Movies," Only One Auto.

Labrador has as yet no movies. It lacks other appurtenances of civilization. It has no roads but has one automobile; the car brought in recently by Donald B. MacMillan, arctic explorer, who is building himself a home in northern Labrador.

With nothing to speed on and nothing to speed in except a boat, and no movies to go to, the Labradoreans remain very much the same kind of people their English, Scotch and Irish ancestors were who came to the coast hundreds of years ago. Among the "liveyeres," as the permanent residents are called, there are also no suicides, no murders, and no nervous breakdowns.

Dr. Grenfell upset the popular error that Labrador is a far north county. No part of it, he said, is farther north than any point of Scotland. Battle Harbor, one of the principal ports, is in the latitude of London, England. Therefore Labrador has just as long a day as have England and Scotland.

Has Heat Waves, Too.

Heat waves regularly hit the country in summer. While the refrigerating effect of the Labrador Current keeps the coast cool, the weather gets very warm in the back country. On a day when it is 40 at Battle Harbor the thermometer may rise to 93 in the forested inland.

Only 900 to 1,000 Eskimos are still living in the country and they occupy the lands fartherest north where the Moravian missionaries have served them for 170 years. White men's diseases hit the Eskimo hard. Ills contracted by Eskimos who were on exhibit at the world's fairs at Chicago and Buffalo spread sickness and death in the northland when they returned. While the influenza raged in the United States few years ago a steamer sailed into a port where 360 Eskimos and a few whites lived. On board were two seaman convalescing from influenza. Within a few days 300 Eskimos died from influenza.

Forty years ago there was not a single resident doctor on 1,000 miles of Labrador coast. Today Dr. Genfell supervises a chain of four modern hospitals, eight nursing stations, one hospital steamer and four hospital boats.

Able pupils of Labrador have been encouraged to go to United States and Canadian technical schools for instruction. Of one hundred sent by one association ninety have returned to take an active part in the development of the country. The new hospital at St. Anthony, modern down to the last bedside electric push button, was built by returned students. Some of the trades they learned have never been practiced in Labrador before. One is a plumber, another a mechanical engineer, another an electrician. In their ranks are shoemakers, teachers, stenographers, nurses, dressmakers, dieticians, tanners and clergymen.

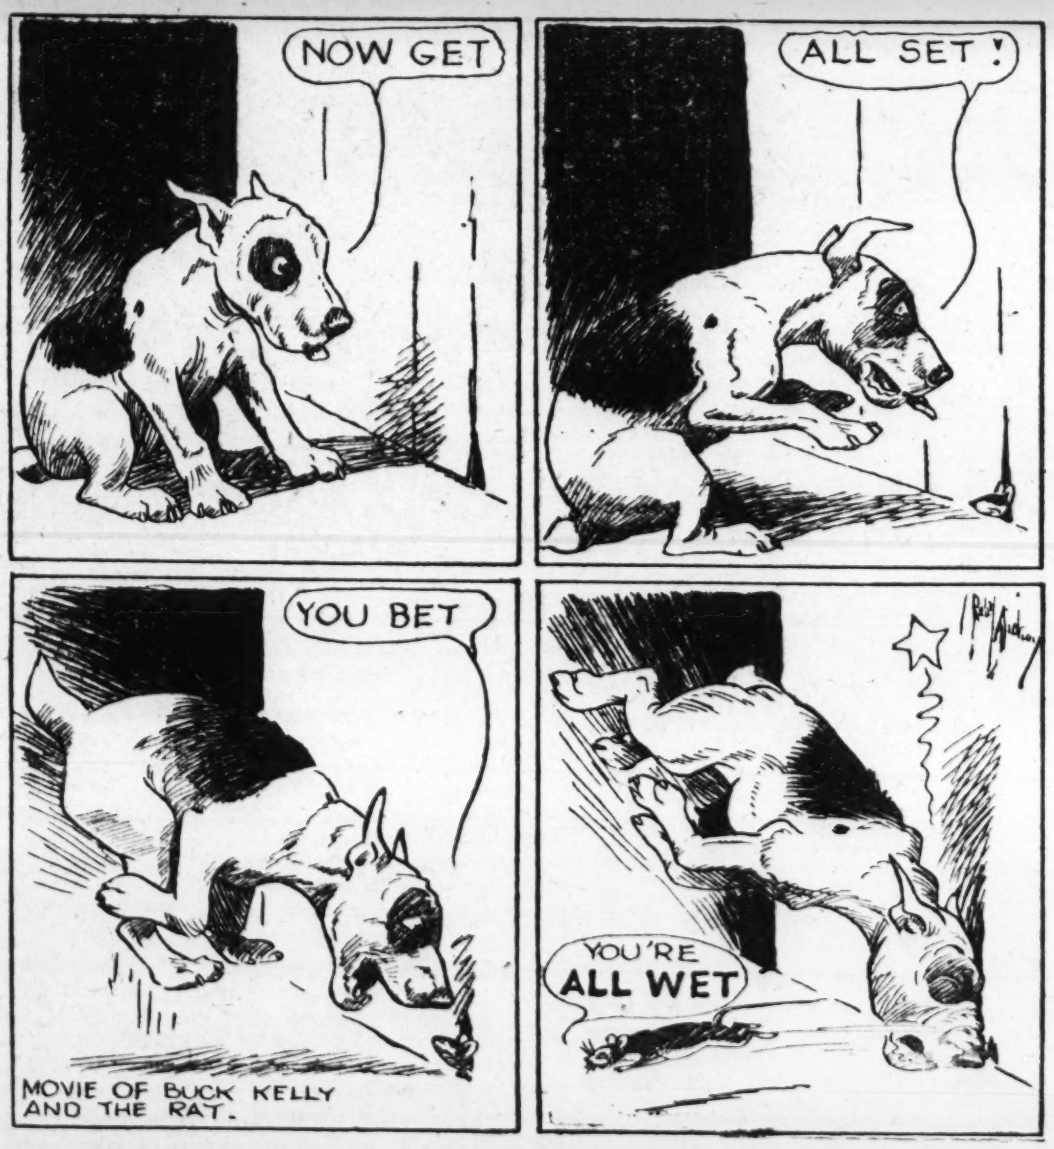

Much attention has been given the making of hooked rugs and weaving, two native crafts introduced by the early settlers from England. Labradoreans make exceptional hook rugs and there is now demand among Labrador women for discarded silk stockings from the United States for use in this industry.

At a meeting in the United States a speaker declared "No one has ever been inside a whale." "I have," protested a man in the audience. "Where?" asked the speaker. "In Labrador," replied the man, who was a well-known student of glands and a frequent visitor to the region where he spend much time at a large whaling station. When whales are brought in he goes in after certain glands that he wants for study. Glands that may be an inch long in man and difficult to study because of their small size are two feet long in a whale.

Greenhouses have been established at various settlements to help the people solve a problem of diet. Lack of vegetables with necessary vitamins have made certain diseases prevalent. What Labrador needed badly was cabbages. But the short summer made cabbage-growing impossible until the greenhouses were built. Young cabbage plants started early under glass are now transplanted when summer comes and head up properly before frost.

"Secret Conventions" Are More Unfair, Dishonest and Cowardly Than Stacking Cards

By Shepard G. Barclay

NOTHING ever done at the bridge table is quite so reprehensible as the use of a "secret convention"—making a bid which has a special meaning, understood by the partner but not understood by the opponents. It is the extreme degree among all the various "dishonorable practices" referred to in the preamble to the laws and for which "ostracism is the only remedy."

If a player wishes to make a certain bid on a hand which is entirely different from what that bid would naturally imply, he has a perfect right to do so. But if his partner understands the peculiar significance of the bid it is an entirely different matter. The partners may agree to make any unnatural bid they wish to, so long as they explain the meaning of the bid to their opponents, but otherwise they are taking an unfair, unsportsmanlike and dishonest advantage of the opposition.

Seldom does such a thing occur in the cardrooms of prominent clubs, where capable and experienced players understand the simple principles of ethics and fair play. When it does appear, the result is generally immediate action by the officials in charge—immediate withdrawal of the rights of the cardroom from the offender and perhaps his expulsion from the club—or else an explanation of the ethics of the game, on the presumption that the guilty ones did not fully comprehend what they were doing. If anything of the kind came up in a championship tournament—in which entrants are presumed to know "what it is all about"—the chances are that immediate disqualification would be supplemented by refusal of entries from the offenders if ever they attempted to become participants in any other formal competition.

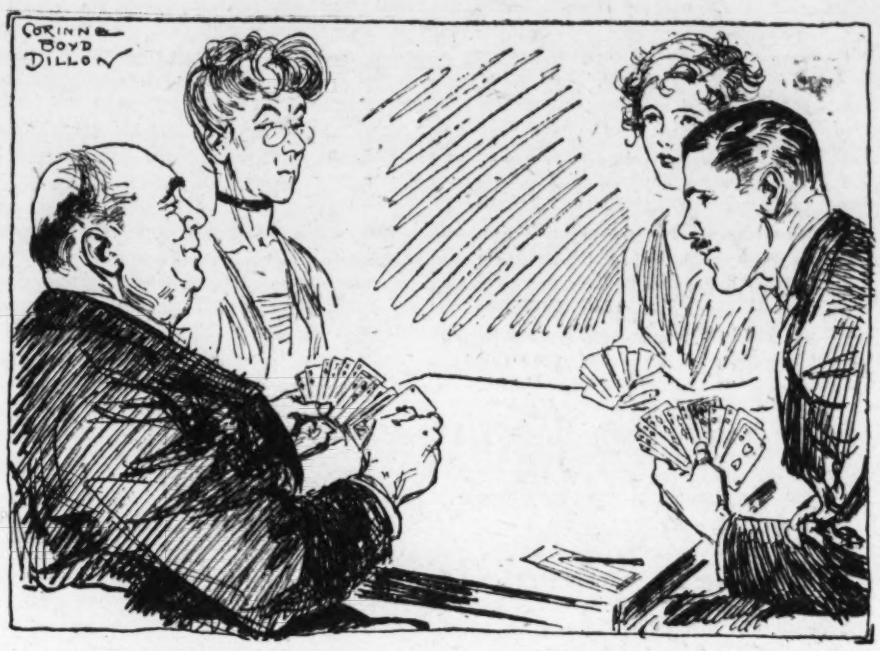

In most cases where artificial bids are used by agreement with partner they are explained to the opponents, which makes them perfectly legal and proper in every sense. When they are not thus explained it is generally due to the players' unfamiliarity with the situation and their failure to appreciate what an unfair method they are using to gain success. When relatively inexperienced players offend in this respect it is a duty of the more experienced to explain the matter in a kindly way and counsel the others either to cease using such conventions or else explain them to opponents.

Anyone who reflects even a moment will see the injustice of secret conventions. If the opposition uses bids with their natural meanings only, the possessors of secret conventions will always know what is going on during the bidding, whereas their rivals will be in the dark. This will give the conventioneers an advantage not only in the bidding but also in the play, for they will know the location of certain cards about which they have misled the other side.

One of the peculiar bids frequently encountered—which is always explained to opponents by players experienced in the ethics of the game—is the original one-club bid of the Vanderbilt contract bridge system. This merely proclaims the presence of three high-card or quick tricks in the hand, and the partner is obligated to respond; if his response is one diamond, he is merely saying he has less than two quick tricks but says nothing about diamonds; if he has two quick tricks or more, he makes a natural bid. This, of course, would give the side an amazing advantage if it were not explained to opponents and they thought it merely indicated a natural club bid.

Some contract players use an original bid of two of a suit to proclaim great high card strength and force partner to respond; if his hand is worthless, he says two no trumps. There was a case recently of a player of this method bidding two hearts. His partner bid three no trumps, and when the original bidder laid down his hand as dummy it contained only one little heart; he had used the two bid, by agreement with partner, to show weakness in the suit named and great strength in the other three. The committee in charge at that club warned the pair to explain that bid if they used it again, and gave them a score of zero on the hand.

Occasionally auction players use similar unnatural conventions — particularly with original bids of two—but unless they wish to be branded as either ignorant of the principles of ethics or else deliberate cheaters who are merely too cowardly to attempt stacking the cards it is up to them to acquaint the other side with the meanings of their artificial bids.

Slave or Master?

One player gets his greatest thrill from piling up the score,
Though aces, kings and queens abound, he always yearns for more;
The tried and proven bridger lets the hands be as they may,
He gets his greatest kick from clever bids and skillful play;
The first must hold a lot of cards, or else his joy is done,
The other's always certain of a chance to have his fun.
It's up to you to choose which type of player you would be—
One kind is just a slave to luck; the other one is free.

Perfect Perfection

W. E. Webb has stood the shock and lived to tell the tale. It happened in his home in Larchmont, N. Y., where, as he relates it: "I dealt four hands in the usual method and found that mine contained 13 hearts, the next 13 spades, the next 13 diamonds and the last 13 clubs: The cards had been shuffled twice and cut in the usual way." He comments: "This certainly does not happen more than once in a person's lifetime," and he is probably right. Many a person would make that comment true by dropping dead when he found what he had done.

A Law a Week

Compulsory New Deal—There must be a new deal by the same dealer with the same pack if the cards be not dealt to the proper players into four distinct packets of 13 cards each; if, during the deal, any card be found faced in the pack, or exposed on, above or below the table; if, before play begins, it be discovered that more than 13 cards were dealt to any player; if, during the hand, one player hold more than the proper number of cards and another less. There must be a new deal by the same dealer with a correct pack if, during the hand, the pack be proved incorrect. In that event the current hand is void, but all previous scores stand. The pack is not incorrect on account of a missing card if found in the still pack, among the tricks, below the table, or in any place which makes it possible that the card was part of the pack during the deal. Any player may search for it; if it be not found there must be a new deal by the same dealer with a correct pack.

SOUTH (Dealer)
♠ 3 2 ♥ A K 5 3 2 ♦ A K 4 3 2 ♣ 2

Straightaway system—Dealer, with eight probable tricks, nevertheless cannot bid three because he cannot guarantee sufficient trumps for the entire side, so bids two hearts. Partner, lacking normal support, but with seven no trump count, two other suits stopped and at least normal number of cards in the remaining suit, has enough to call two no trump. Original bidder now has his chance to bid diamonds. If he says three, partner should call four and he then goes to five; if he says four, which is justifiable after partner's no trump, North bids five.

Vanderbilt system—South one club, showing at least three quick tricks; North one diamond to deny two quick tricks, after which the bidding is the same as in straightaway method.

Forcing system—Even those who normally require five quick tricks for an absolute demand two bid will usually make it with only four when there is a great number of probable tricks in a two-suiter, and hence most of them would start with two hearts. Partner would bid two no trumps with a worthless hand, three no trumps with one containing at least one sure trick and two unbid suits stopped, as in this case. South next bids four diamonds, N orth five diamonds.

Semi-forcing system—South opens with two hearts. North, with a bust would pass in this method, but would bid two no trumps with the strength held, distributed as it is. Thus, for different reasons, the same bids would be made by this method as in the straightaway system.

What would you bid on the following hands if opponents constantly pass?

South bids one no trump. West passes. North wil bid two clubs if he has a partner who may bid no trumps with a worthless doubleton. But if he knows his partner is conservative and will not bid no trump with an unstopped suit unless that suit contains at least three cards, he can safely pass, knowing his partner can take at least three club tricks at no trump. However, if he bids the clubs, his partner will overcall with two no trump.

West would lead his longest suit, hearts, choosing the jack. With a so-called "honor combination"—at least three cards as good as nine or better, at least two of which are "touching"—the top of the touching honors is a conventional lead unless the touchers be the ace and king, when the king is led.

South first counts his tricks. Two sure in spades, three in hearts and one in diamonds make six, so he needs three in clubs for game. Protecting himself against a bad four-one break, he deliberately gives the other side the first two club tricks and the remaining three are assured. If he required four club tricks, he would have to play for a three-two break, so would throw away only one trick and then play his ace and king. In this case, trying for a fourth club in that way would prevent his making game. Moral—Do not go after extra tricks if doing so risks game.

HOW TO MAKE A MILLION DOLLARS —By RICHARD CONNELL—

WOULD you like to make a million dollars? I thought not. But there are still some who would, and this is addressed to them. Personally, money means so little to me that if you were to drive up to my door this very minute with a million dollars (cash) as a gift for me, I wouldn't care. Well, I might care a little. You see, there are better things in life than money. Gilt-edged bonds, for example.

For the benefit of those who would like to know how to make a million dollars I have done some research and am in a position to give them tips straight from the oat-bin. Armed with a note-book, I recently visited three men who, starting with nothing but the will to win, have made themselves at least one million handsome green engravings of G. Washington.

My purpose was to ask them their recipes for making a million.

I first called on Mr. Hosmer G. Deeter, known to you all, no doubt, as the Puppy-Fodder King. His office was also his bedroom and kitchen. It was full of tin cans and filing cabinets, in one of which, apparently, Mr. Deeter slept. Also I gathered that he lived on his own product. The millionaire proved to be a stringy man of 60, weighing 98 pounds in his seersucker suit, which had been presented to him by the late Admiral George Dewey. He made me as welcome as if I had been a subpoena server. After a bit of wheedling, he consented to tell me how he had made his fortune.

"I went to work at six," said Mr. Deeter, "as an owl-stuffer in a taxidermist's shop at three dollars a week. Out of my wages I saved four dollars a week. This I invested in first mortgages on farms which nobody else would touch. Why?"

Mr. Deeter's laugh was like the opening of a rusty safe.

"Because I knew the owners would not be able to pay the interest and I could foreclose them. By the time I was 16, I was chief-stuffer in the company, and did moose and elephants. I saved my money. That is the real secret. I slept under the counter among the alligator skins, thus saving on room rent, and I ate nuts and herbs, which I could pick myself without cost. I am proud to be able to state that I have never spent more than one dollar a day in my life. Of course, I never touch spirits, tobacco or candy in any form No man who dissipates can hope to become rich.

"When I was 20, I bought the formula of my Puppy-Fodder from a fellow who was hard up for 11 dollars. I began to manufacture it; but I went ahead carefully. I have been called conservative, but believe me, the man who forges ahead is one who never takes a chance. Naturally, I never married. What good is a wife, anyhow? Takes a man's mind off his business. I did not let success turn my head. I kept right on saving. I never bought on margin in my life. Good solid 4 per cent bonds—and first mortgages—those, young man, are the pathway to financial security. By the time I was 40, I had made my first million, and I still have it. My advice to those who would like to follow in my footsteps and make a million is: Save, save, save—and use self-control. Now please go away. My fee for this interview will be 20 dollars. No, I won't take a check. Yes, cash will be all right. Close the door after you."

Next I approached Mr. L. Cabot Tigget, who made his in a number of ways. He lives in a 49-room penthouse, with 37 baths, and fountains which gushed champagne. He weighed 310 in his crimson silk pajamas. He sent four Japanese servants to bring another tub of champagne and spoke, in part, as follows:

"Lissen, egg. Gamble. Take a chance. I did. Look at me. I started without a dieted dime. I bought a two-hundred-thousand-dollar apartment house, paying 50 dollars down and the rest in hooey. I sold it a week later and cleaned up forty grand.

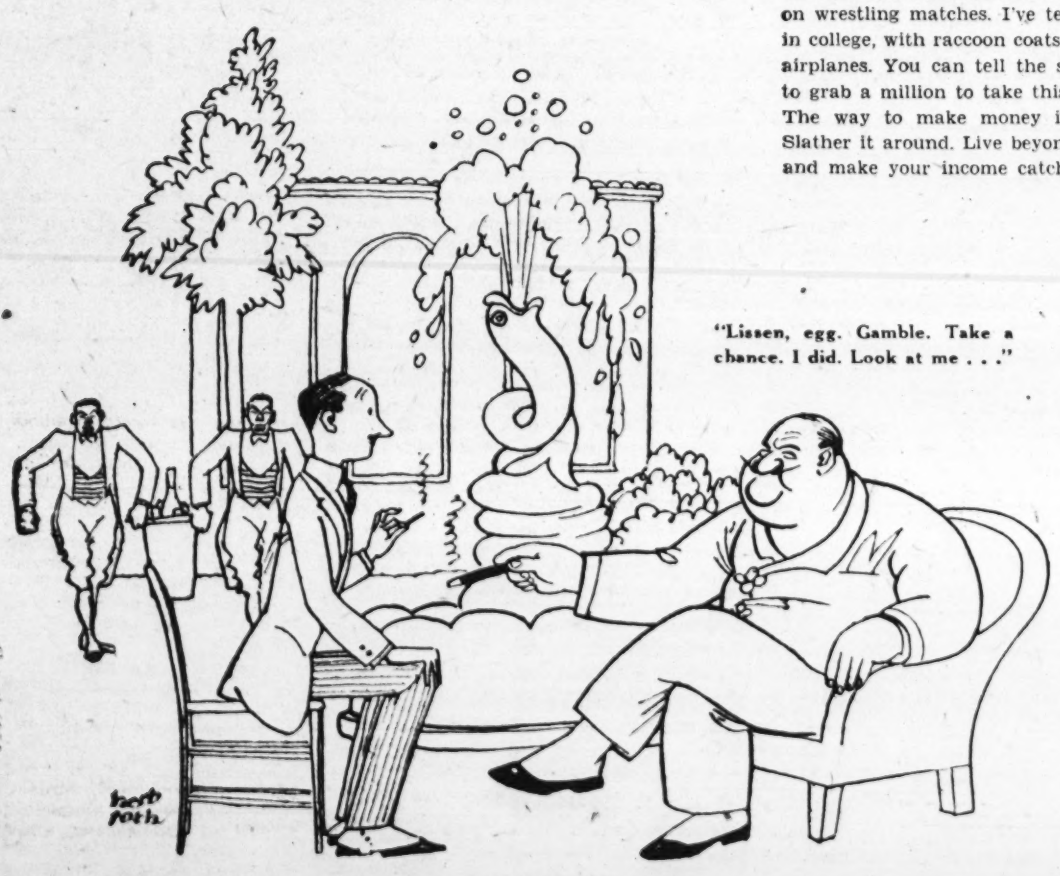

"I went to work at six," said Mr. Deeter, "as an owl-stuffer in a taxidermist's shop at three dollars a week . . ."

I made a medicine to cure the collywobbles and sold it for a dollar a bottle. It cost me six cents to make, and five of that was for the bottle. I sold that business to a sucker, and made plenty. I don't believe in work. I never worked more than an hour a day in my life. If I net, say, two hundred thousand a year, I spend two hundred and fifty, and that keeps me on the hop. I smoke 15 cigars a day and I coudln't tell you how many cigarettes. I've backed musical shows, played the races and even bet on wrestling matches. I've ten children, all in college, with raccoon coats and their own airplanes. You can tell the saps who want to grab a million to take this tip from me: The way to make money is to spend it. Slather it around. Live beyond your income and make your income catch up with you. When you get a hunch, back it to the limit. Remember, if you don't like your life, it's the only one you have and you might just as well enjoy it. Eat a lot, drink a lot, love a lot, and sleep a lot. I may be wrong, but I think it's wonderful. Ito, roll in another barrel of champagne. You got to go- Too bad. Drop in some time and stay a week."

My third call in search of the secret of wealth was made on Mr. Virgil Berry, indubitably a millionaire by reason of his activities in honey, cheese, perambulators, pearls and zinc. An ordinary man. Mr. Berry received me in an ordinary way in an apartment so ordinary that I can't remember a single detail of it.

"You want to know how to make a million," said Mr. Berry, thoughtfully. He pondered six minutes, then he said: "Well, I'll be durned if I could tell you."

CAN THERE BE A GRAMMATICAL ERROR?

Some writers hold that "grammatical error" in the sense of "an error in grammar violates precision and is incorrect," because "grammatical" means "in accordance with the principles of grammar" and accordingly an error cannot be grammatical. However, the propriety of the phrase is no longer questioned by the majority of good writers and speakers. The objection to "grammatical error" is based on the mistaken notion that the adjective "grammatical" has but one meaning, namely, "in accordance with the principles of grammar." As a matter of fact the word also means "pertaining to grammar" and is used in that sense in the expression under discussion. All reputable dictionaries give this meaning of "grammatical." Because a word has one meaning is no reason why it may not acquire another. Language is in a state of constant change and growth and frequently an expression that is erroneous in its inception becomes correct by long usage. Good usage is the final arbiter of propriety in language and it has decreed that the convenient phrase "grammatical error" means "an error in grammar."

Lonely Women

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

—By Struthers Burt—

Content With the Company of Their Own Sex, Mrs. Charlton, Mrs. Bickitt and Miss Speare Lived a Flat and Peaceful Existence in a Little French Town Until Along Came An Attractive Young Man From the States.

MRS. CHARLTON, Mrs. Bickitt, and Miss Speare lived in a small town in southern France called Le Lavandou. At least, they lived there during the winter. Le Lavandou, so named from the lavender that covers the slopes around it, is a fishing village, very picturesque, about 12 miles east of the fairly large town of Hyeres and about 25 miles east of Toulon. It is at the beginning of the Riviera, but far from the fashion of it, and on the Corniche road.

Mrs. Charlton lived in the finest villa of all, high up above the town on a separate rounded little mountain of its own, and the villa was so fine and the garden about it, bright with roses, so spacious that Mrs. Charlton had all the sense of superior isolation necessary to he rwell-being and the production of her art. In the summer Mrs. Charlton went up to Brittany, where she had a real chateau. Mrs. Charlton was a novelist. A brilliant novelist and a famous one.

Mrs. Bickitt and Miss Speare, comparatively new comers—they had been in Le Lavandou only three years—lived in a small and inexpensive villa at the foot of Mrs. Charlton's hill, just as you left the town to take the lane, golden dusty, that wandered up between walls and overhanging olive trees. Twice a year, in the winter and summer, Mrs. Bickitt, having saved in the intervals, went to Biarritz or Deauville, from whence she returned with tales of the delightful Frenchmen, Italians, or Spaniards who had pursued her, but without success.

Miss Speare stayed on at Le Lavandou and kept the villa open. Miss Speare wanted to be a writer, too, like Mrs. Charlton, but a writer as unlike Mrs. Charlton as possible. She kept this desire entirely to herself, except for Mrs. Bickitt, who was sworn to secrecy. Violet Speare was exceedingly pretty, approaching 28, the height of woman's beauty, with crisp bronze hair, blue eyes, and a warm skin overlaid with the tan of swimming and walking. She walked for miles by herself and swam for hours by herself. A figure that otherwise might have been too full was thus kept lithe and strong.

Mrs. Bickitt had picked her up in Paris during Mrs. Bickitt's first year in Europe, when she had spent six months on the east bank of the Seine, a pseudo-artistic adventure that did not at all suit Mrs. Bickitt's idea of "the great life" in pursuit of which she was. She did not altogether understand or approve of Violet's apparent utter lack of interest in men, but she was content with it, because otherwise Violet might get married, and that would disarrange Mrs. Bickitt's pleasant and carefully arranged existence. In fact, the three ladies—the elderly one, the mature one, and the young one, each in her own way—seemed, at least on the surface, as contented as human beings can be; as if, in this snug harbor, they had found some solution of life.

Mrs. Charlton was easily explained. She was famous, and that was all there was to it. She merely had to sit still and things came to her. Mrs. Bickitt was, to all intents and purposes, separated from her husband. Four years earlier, after a couple of years of growing discontent, she had left Kanesville, Ind., and her husband, Julius, both in the unpleasant process of expansion and increasing riches to seek the shining world she had so often heard about—a world, of course, which can be found only in Europe. Miss Speare was supposed to have had an unhappy love affair—which was correct.

On this May afternoon—early May—Mrs. Bickitt and Violet Speare had walked up to Mrs. Charlton's and, finding her in, were having tea with her on her terrace, which overlooked olive dotted slopes, the town, and the Mediterranean. Mrs. Bickitt had just returned from Biarritz and Mrs. Charlton was anxious to hear some details of the delightful Frenchmen, Italians, or Spaniards who, according to their semi-annual habit, had pursued Mrs. Bickitt, but without success.

For some reason, however, Mrs. Bickitt was not as expansive as usual. She laughed deprecatingly, flushed, turned away from Mrs. Charlton's cold, searching, amused gray eyes.

"It can't be, my dear," suggested Mrs. Charlton, "that you are losing your taste for innocent philandering?"

She delighted in Mrs. Bickitt's ingenuous recitals of her conquests, but did not believe a single word of them. All people had their mild insanities, and this quaint little Bickitt woman's were a belief in her own instantaneous irresistibility and a passion for counts and marquises. Mrs. Charlton had no doubt that she met all the counts and marquises of a certain kind she wanted, but that these gentlemen perpetually annoyed Mrs. Bickitt except with dinner checks, or when the poorest of them occasionally made honorable proposals to her to divorce her husband and marry them for her money, was not credible.

Mrs. Bickitt was not devastating and she was patently respectable. Respectable in an obvious way that is at present difficult—such is fashion—for any woman under 40, no matter what her character, to achieve. It would take a bold or insensate count or marquis to assail this respectability of Mrs. Bickitt's. Mrs. Charlton did not know, none the less, that this was exactly what had happened to Mrs. Bickitt on her latest trip to Biarritz, only it was not a count or marquis, but an Englishman. Englishmen are frequently both bold and insensate, and this Englishman had told Mrs. Bickitt certain bald facts that had left her disturbed in a way she had never been before. Also, he had used certain terms that Mrs. Bickitt would not repeat even to herself. In short, he had asked Mrs. Bickitt just what she thought she was doing and what sort of creatures she thought men were.

All people had their mild insanities, and this quaint little Bickitt woman's were a belief in her own instantaneous irresistibility and a passion for counts and marquises.

A long distance from the security of America, where men, except the younger ones, permitted women to do just about what they wanted and, if they had impolite thoughts, seldom mentioned them!

Mrs. Bickitt was small, dark, rounded and pleasing, about 40 years old, but looked younger, and she had a delightful and quick smiling way with her fine, shy eyes. She was not, however, as Mrs. Charlton rightly decided, devastating.

"Personally," continued Mrs. Charlton in the disinterested but oracular manner that frequently overtook her, "I have never understood, my dear Emma, your attitude toward life. Of course, if you have no money of your own and are entirely dependent on what your husband sends you, that makes a difference, but, otherwise, I should think you would divorce him and marry one of these charming creatures."

Mrs. Bickitt looked out to sea and said nothing. Mrs. Charlton was a wonderful woman and she meant a great deal in Mrs. Bickitt's life. She meant that apex where the best of literature crossed the orbit of the best of the great world.

But there were moments when Mrs. Charlton was hard and unsympathetic. Mrs. Charlton had never had to live in Kanesville, Ind., to discover, at the age of 38, that youth and good looks were slipping away from her, with nothing to show in return.

Mrs. Bickitt did not want to divorce Julius. What would she do without the thought of Julius in the background? In the beginning she had not had the faintest idea of staying away from Julius as long as she did. It was his fault, anyhow. He could have come over to see her. And as for her going back to Kanesville now . . . she had lost touch with Kanesville, her ideas of life were different.

These things were very intricate; you could not sum them up in a sentence or two, even if you were as wise as Mrs. Charlton. There was much to be said on either side. Julius had been unfair in other ways beyond this not coming over to see her. He had been unfair when the final decision had been made. He had said practically nothing; had behaved as if he didn't care whether she went or not. She had not noticed the spasm of weariness that had disturbed his already fairly wearied face. But he had taken off his glasses, and that, whether he knew it or not, was bitterly unfair. It made you feel, somehow, contemptible when you knew you were perfectly right.

Julius was bald and short and inclined to rotundity, but he had beautiful eyes, pathetic with the groping softness of the near-sighted. They had not changed since his youth. Few people ever saw them except Mrs. Bickitt. There was something terribly intimate about the taking off of his glasses.

"Very well," he had said, "you'll never get it out of your system by staying here. You run away and enjoy yourself, and come back when you feel like it."

Easier said than done. Mrs. Bickitt had often missed Julius, but you got in the habit of drifting in Europe. It was difficult to tear up the new roots you had grown. And Julius would not come over. She had written to him once or twice asking him to do so, but he was always too busy.

What harm was she doing? What harm was there in anything until this terrible Englishman had come along? He had made everything harsh and horrible. He had told her you couldn't run around Europe without a husband and flirt with men unless you had a good excuse for not having a husband. Flirt with men! What had she ever done except smile amiably at them and occasionally hold the hand of some lonely one and—but very seldom—permit, perhaps, a fleeting good-night kiss? Flirt with men!

Mrs. Charlton seemed to be reading her thoughts.

"I think you'll find," she said, "that sooner or later you'll have to make up your mind. Now, if you were like Violet here"—she smiled at Violet—"you would be all right. Violet has all the ravishing beauty's lack of interest in the other sex."

Violet looked embarrassed.

After they had gone, Mrs. Charlton sat for a long while smiling at the dusky olive groves and the dusky sea. How stupid and confused people were! They wanted always to have their cake and at the same time to eat it. Why couldn't they take a line and hold to it? She supposed, however, it was unfair to judge other people by the fairly simple rules that applied to artists, especially great ones . . , Mrs. Charlton prided herself upon looking at life starkily. She knew she was great. Why make any bones about it? And, of course, to the great artist nothing meant anything but his or her work. The great artist used people as he or she saw fit. Just, for example, as she, Harriet Charlton, used this silent, pretty girl and this quaint older one to amuse her idle hours, to motor with her, to come to tea in the simple, self-chosen isolation of Le Lavandou.

But as for allowing any one really to complicate your life! What a silly, feverish proceeding. It had been years since she had done that—years. You did not notice her asking Violet Speare or Mrs. Bickitt up to Brittany, did you? Where there were always so many of her old friends and she participated in what little social life she permitted herself. No, everything in its place. That was the secret of contentment, and at last she had found it.

On the lane leading down to the town, Violet and Mrs. Bickitt walked in silence.

Suddenly Violet broke the silence.

"You never mentioned Mrs. Walsh, did you?" she asked.

"No," said Mrs. Bickitt weakly. "I—I couldn't. I—I was thinking so much of other things."

"I think it's rather important," suggested Violet. "I don't believe Mrs. Walsh is going to live such a very long time."

"I wonder if it's worth while?" reflected Mrs. Bickitt. "You know what Harriet Charlton thinks about wasting her time that way? She's quite ruthless. And she does so hate stray Americans."

Violet stopped in the dusk and faced Mrs. Bickitt, her eyes wide and angry. "It's a question of ten minutes every now and then, and a little well concealed condescension," she said in the quick, breathless tones that sometimes broke through the soft, a trifle absent minded calmness of her voice. "People have different values. To me it would make no difference whether our literary goddess called or not, but to Mrs. Walsh, for some odd reason, it means everything."

"I'll speak to Harriet Charlton the very next time I see her," said Mrs. Bickitt, but she never did. She was afraid of Mrs. Charlton's contemptuous and half angry dismissal of such a proposal. Yet she knew that Mrs. Charlton was fully aware of Mrs. Walsh's presence in Le Lavandou. Nothing went on that escaped Mrs. Charlton's pale gray eyes.

For two months, ever since she had mysteriously appeared and had begun to occupy an unkept villa, Mrs. Walsh had been a subject of debate between Mrs. Bickitt and Violet Speare. Mrs. Walsh was obviously what she was—a lady who had run feverishly along all the dangerous and unimportant byroads of life and had at last come, abandoned, to the crossroads of despair. She was very ill, very faded for her not too numerous years, and she lay all day long in a cane chair out in her straggling garden, the paint on her cheeks badly applied and an unread French novel open on her knees. Violet found her almost unbearably touching; Mrs. Bickitt, with a very kind heart, despite her love of counts and marquises, found her touching and also a triple frightening. There, but for the grace of God, the remains of a midwestern conscience and—but only perhaps—Julius, might some day be Mrs. Bickitt herself, or any other American woman who lacked a sense of self-protection.

That was it, and Violet was right when she said that a certain amount of self-protectiveness was necessary, especialy in Europe. "It is insensate generosity about yourself or your goods that ruins people," Violet had said. "If you could just take Mrs. Walsh and Mrs. Charlton and mix them together in nice proportions, you'd have something magnificent. I wonder what's become of al the people to whom Mrs. Walsh has been overly generous? They seem to be singularly lacking, now that she needs them."

Gradually, shyly, there had emerged a curious thing about Mrs. Walsh. It developed that years before, when her fortunes had been better, when, newly arrived, she believed for a little while that she was actually conquering Europe, she had met Mrs. Charlton, and Mrs. Charlton had shown her by her manner, quietly, effectively, perhaps without knowing that she was doing it, just what her pretensions amounted to. Mrs. Walsh had never for-

The Spring Drive in Britain

Determined to Fight to the Last Putt, an A. E. F. of Golfers Is About to Invade Great Britain's Links—the Strongest Array of Men and Women Players Ever to Represent America in the Annual Battle That Rages From the Heathery Hills of Sunningdale to the Sea

Miss Collett and Other Feminine Stars Will Go in Quest of the Ladies' Championship

Bobby Jones

DURING the next few weeks thousands of Britons and Americans are going to think and talk of par more often than they have been thinking and talking of parity. The cables that clicked all winter long with unexciting news of proposals to sink blueprint ships will soon be chronicling the actual sinking of putts. For the golf stream is flowing eastward across the Atlantic again, as it has flowed each spring since the cannon ceased digging divots on the western front. Between now and the middle of June it will carry to the rolling fairways of King George's green and bunkered isle the largest and most skillful aggregation of golfers, male and female, amateur and professional, champions, ex-champions and seekers after championships ever to leave our shores in one season.

Already the ladies of America's golfing ensemble are on the ocean—Glenna Collett, Maureen Orcutt, Helen Hicks, Virginia Van Wie and more than half a dozen others—all of them headed for the rolling heathery hills of Sunningdale and a team match on May Day with their British sisters of the straight left arm and the follow through. It is the first time a team match ever has been arranged between representative women golfers of the two countries, but it will not be the last.

This week Bobby Jones will pack Calamity Jane and the rest of his cherished clubs and embark with his colleagues of the Walker cup defense to engage the British amateurs in biennial battle for the trophy. They will fight it out with woods and irons in the middle of May among the high dunes and terrifying hummocks of Sandwich, where men go down to the sea in plus fours.

When these ladies and gentlemen start tramping the fairways of England many of us who became a bit bored with the cabled chatter over eight-inch guns will relish news of eight-foot putts. Away with your endless columns about cruisers and submarines, pacts and parleys and fur-coated stenographers residing at the Ritz and eating in the Lyons Corner House! Let us hear of low-flying brassies whistling down the wind. Let us hear of long drives and short pitches, of green grass, yellow gorse and purple heather, of Scotch mist and English showers, of the sand hills of Hoylake and the auld grey toun of St. Andrews, where Bobby Jones is going soon to seek another crown.

Three days before the golf master of Atlanta leads his squad into battle for the Walker cup. Miss Collett and the other feminine stars will be going around the links of Formby, near the mouth of the Mersey, in quest of the ladies' championship, the only capital trophy in British golf that never has yet been won by an American. Miss Collett is making her fifth attempt to capture it. Twice she has been beaten by miserable weather and twice by Miss Wethered. Miserable weather may bother her again this year, but Miss Wethered wil not, for that incomparably fine golfer again has retired from championship play. Neither wind, rain, cold nor the gloom of a bad English spring ever kept her from the swift completion of her appointed rounds in something near to par figures. But one must not expect the same indifference to the elements on the part of the American women, for they have a habit of passing their winters in the Florida sunshine.

Ten days after the ladies have disposed of their tournament at Formby the men will gather at St. Andrews for the amateur championship. After that Jones and some of the other players of the American Walker cup team will remain for the open championship in June. In that latter competition, amid the brightest constellation of stars that Great Britain and Europe can provide, they will be joined by a powerful contingent of American professionals.

To some of these American professionals the trip across the north Atlantic has become almost an annual afair. They are the envy of the stay-at-home British pros. They pass their winters gadding from tournament to tournament all the way across the southern half of the country from California to Florida. The winners of some of these tournaments reckon their prizes in thousands of dollars.

Unlike the pros of Britain, the Americans seem always to travel first class. Snapshots taken in mid-ocean picture them driving expensive golf balls off the boat deck into the sea. They arrive at the course in "motors for private hire," and spurn the half-a-crown lunches in the professionals' tent on the championship grounds for the four-course meal in the visitors' marquee. Their working clothes are almost invariably fresh and expensive, if a trifle gay in color for the British atmosphere. And they have a habit of appearing in a different ensemble each morning, while Vardon goes about in the same old knickers and Ray in the same old slacks.

The wardrobes of the American professionals and the social standing which they assumed rather bewildered the conservative British onlookers in the early postwar years. The galleries used to pay as much attention to Sarazen's daily change of sweaters and Hagen's selection of shoes as they did to the clubs these golfers chose. If Britain's pros felt envious of their prosperous American rivals, they also had cause to admire their skill, if not their sweaters. Of the last nine British open championships, six have been won by American professionals and two of the remaining three were captured by Bobby Jones. Since 1921 the championship cup has remained only one year in its island home.

Unlike the tourists who go to Europe to take in cathedrals and capitals, the globe-trotting golfers of America are a strictly post-war development in international intercourse. Championship trophies seldom crossed frontiers in the years before the war. American entrants in British tournaments were decidedly rare and little esteemed. Up until the war Arnold Massey, a Frenchman, was the only foreigner who ever had won a British open championship, and the late Walter J. Travis, from America, was the sole outsider to capture the amateur title.

Travis' victory was achieved in 1904 at Sandwich. The British consoled themselves with the thought that Travis had been born in Australia, even though golf was unknown to him until long after he entered the United States. There grew up a legend that Travis had won not so much by good all-around golf as by magical, not to say miraculous, and and lucky putting. He used a center shaft putter, called a Schenectady for short. After he had gone home with it, and the championship as well, the wise and worthy gentlemen who sit in the parliament of golf at St. Andrews decided that a Schenectady putter was not a fit and proper implement for inducing a golf ball to drop into a tin cup, and, so deciding, barred its further employment in the United Kingdom and the dominions beyond the seas.

Years of championship games went by after that without another serious threat from acres the ocean. Then came the war and the suspension of championship play. Each summer since the peace American golfers have crossed the Atlantic and added brilliant pages to the honored history of the eight celebrated courses of the championship rota Sandwich, Deal, Westward Ho and Hoylake, in England; St. Andrews, Muirfield, Troon and Prestwick, in Scotland. The fillip given to the competitions by the entry of the Yankees quickened the interest of the public to such a point that the galleries grew and grew, until on a Friday afternoon in June, of 1925, more than 30,000 men, women and school children swarmed and scurried over the links at Prestwick in the beloved Ayrshire of Bobby Burns, to see one Scottish-born American, MacDonald Smith, try to win the championship. Special trains rolled down from Glasgow, packed with golf enthusiasts, and all the schools and factories in the near-by towns were closed.

Partly, perhaps principally, because the crowd was so big and so bothersome, Smith, who needed only a 78 to win, took 82 distressful strokes. After that the British adopted the American practice of charging admission to championships. Since then the crowds have been smaller and more manageable.

When Smith lost at Prestwick it was to another American, Jim Barnes. Until their arrival in Prestwick for that championship of 1925 the lowest medal score that ever had been made on the course was 72, and championships had been played at Prestwick since 1860. Barnes, in his very first round, turned in a 70. Smith went out the same day and cut the record down to 69. Such is the Americans contribution to the long story of the Ayrshire golfing country.

Sandwich has recorded a longer and more brilliant page of American victories. Eighteen years after Travis took the amateur trophy away from England the Britsh open was won for the first time by a native-born American, Walter Hagen. That was in 1922. Jock Hutchison, of Chicago, had won it the previous summer at St. Andrews, but St. Andrews was Jock's birthplace and that is where he learned his golf. Besides, as the Scots will remind one to this day, Hutchison would never have been in the play-off and never would have won if Roger Wethered had only kept his foot off his own ball—a clumsy accident which incurred a penalty that permitted the American to equal the young Englishman's score for the four rounds. But when Hagen won at Sandwich the two players who finished closest to him were both Americans. From that windy afternoon dates the beginning of American supremacy in international golf.

The Americans were back at Sandwich again in 1923. All the amateurs of the Walker cup team were there that year to play for the St. George's vase, the oldest and most treasured trophy for medal play among amateurs. Two of the visitors, Francis Ouimet, of Boston, and Dr. O. F. Willing, of Portland, Ore, led the field with a tie On the play-off Ouimet won.

It was at Sandwich, five years later, that Hagen captured the open championship for the third time, and had his picture taken with the Prince of Wales, who has a handicap of 16 strikes.

Now, in little more than a fortnight, the amateurs of Britain and America will be playing at Sandwich again. Sandwich is a pleasant spot and a glorious course. The shore of Peg Well Bay lies just off some of the fairways, and from the higher tees the players can see the chalk cliffs facing the channel. But most of the time the player cannot even see the flag near which he hopes to lay his approaches. The fairways roll and swell, rise and fall, like the choppy Channel itself. Sometimes the recommended route from tee to green is hemmed in by great hills of sand, dotted with tough clumps of turf, and there are bunkers of such awful immensity that they seem to the duffer to be veritable deserts. One of them, indeed, is known as the Sahara. In its vast stretches of sand many a player has hacked away with a niblick until his last chance of winning the tournament was gone. Sandwich has been played in 68 strokes, but when the wind is howling in from the channel, as it often is, the man who can break 80 is usually pleased with himself.

Sunningdale, where Miss Collett and her colleagues will play the British women's team in a few days, is less than an hour's run down from London, either by train or car. It is esteemed as one of the best inland courses in England, a formidable test for any golfer's skill. Bobby Jones whizzed around it one day with a 66, followed by an afternoon score of 68 to lead the pack qualifying for the British open. No one ever had treated Sunningdale that way before, and nobody is likely to treat it that way again, for the course is a long one over hilly country, with trees and sand and heather to trouble the man who strays from the straight and narrow path between tee and green.

Whatever the weather, the American women's team is likely to feel far more at home on the fairways of Sunningdale than later on at Formby, where the ladies' championship begins on May 12. Formby is a true championship test of golf by the best of British standards. It looks out upon the sea and is situated on true linksland. The holes at the start and those at the finish are on flat terrain, but most of the course from the fifth tee to the 16th green runs along among high sand hills. One fairway is in what seems a veritable canyon. There is a green on the homeward half that sits in a crater formation of hills, in the fashion of Lake Louise. The American professionals who went over for the championships of 1924, which Hagen won at Hoylake, know Formby well, for it was used in the qualifying tests that year.

Hagen may be back at Hoylake in June, seeking his fifth British championship. Whether he wins or loses, he will not be likely to create any impression strong enough to dim or replace the memory of his triumph in 1924. No one who saw him play the last nine holes in that tournament will ever forget, I imagine, those seventy-five minutes of tense excitement, shared by 12,000 admiring duffers. It was as gallant and thrilling an effort to make nine holes in 36 strokes as ever a golf gallery looked upon.

It was late in a gray afternoon and a fierce wind was rushing inland from the mouth of the Dee when Hagen drove from the high plateau where the ninth tee is placed and walked down into a trough between two waves of rolling fairway to pitch his approach over one of them onto a punch bowl green. When he had sunk his putt he knew that he had taken 41 strokes for the nine outward holes. On his card were three 6s and a 5. Over the hills that surround the 11th green, hills so high that they are called the Alps, trooped hundreds of spectators who had been following Ernest Whitcombe, Britain's hope. They brought the news that Whitcombe had finished with a 72-hole total of 302 strokes. Hagen would have to go home in even 4s—36 strokes for the last nine holes—to beat him. Some one—several some ones in fact—told Hagen the job that was cut out for him.

"Thanks," he said, and started out to accomplish it.

Now, the last nine holes at Hoylake measure 3,640 yards, and when the wind is blowing hard they are about as difficult a nine holes as a golfer may find anywhere on this bunkered planet. The wind that afternoon was so strong that a man instinctively bent his head and shoulders down in walking against it.

Starting home, Hagen was in trouble on each of the first four holes, but he got the proper figures on all but one of them. Then he faced those five long holes that are said to be the most exhausting finish on any golf course in the world—holes known to all the golfing folk of Hoylake as Field, Lake, Dun,, Royal and Home.. Their combined par is 22 strokes. Hagen had to do them in 21. He did. In doing it he got off two of the finest shots that a gallery could ever hope to see. Straight into the teeth of a gale he shot a 240-yard brassie onto the 15th green. At the narrow, slippery 17th, also straight into the wind, he dropped a full iron shot near the pin. Needing a 4 at the 18th, his approach scampered over the green into the rough and his chip back left him a downhill putt of seven feet over undulating turf. He made it, and several thousand women saw his wife rush out and kiss him.

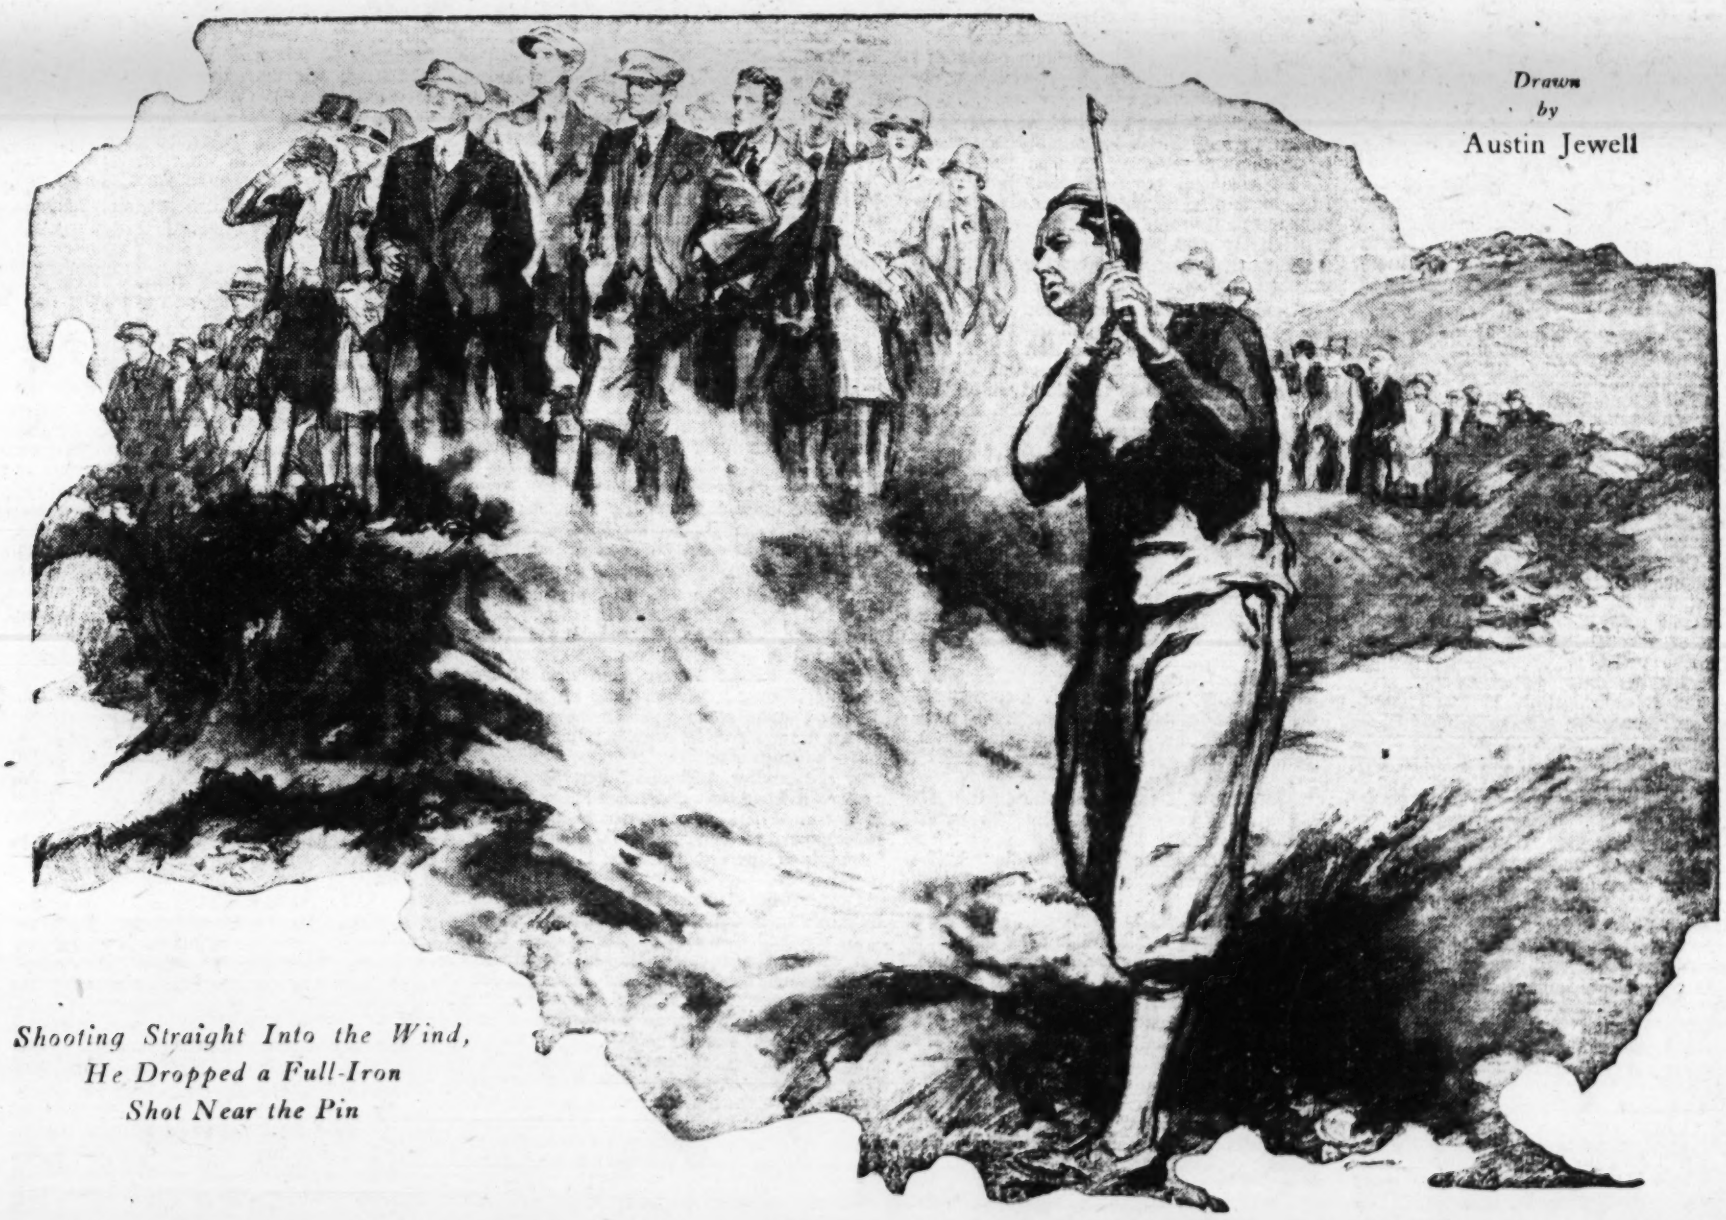

And now we come to St. Andrews, where Jones, Ouimet, Jimmy Johnston and the rest of the boys will be trying to win the British amateur championship in the last week of May. Most of them have been there before. What Jones accomplished there in 1927 when he won the open with a score of 285—six strokes under the lowest previous winning total since the championships were started in 1860—is not likely to be forgotten so long as St. Andrews has a golfing soul.

Nor will it soon be forgotten, there in the gray stone clubhouse or in the shops of the clubmakers on the other side of the 18th green, how bravely Jess Sweetser won the amateur championship in 1926, the first American to win it since Travis went home with his Schenectady putter. And the Scots of St. Andrews, with whom golf is as universal as porridge, are likely to remember for a long time the sunny afternoon in 1923 when Ouimet squared his match with Roger Wethered by scoring birdies on each of the last three holes. Perhaps some of them still recall that George Rotan, of Texas, on a chilly morning earlier in the same week, when the wind was blowing down from the snow-covered Grampians, wore five sweaters over his woolen shirt as he drove off the first tee toward the Swilcan Burn. That, too, was a record and so was the 34 that Miss Collett scored in the first nine holes of her match at St. Andrews with Joyce Wethered in the finals of the ladies' championship. No lassie ever had reached the turn in 34 until Glenna did it, nor had many men.

If Bobby Jones wins the amateur championship next month St. Andrews will rejoice in his victory as happily as though he were a Scot. "May the best man win" is a genuine feeling that is general in the town, where golf was born. Many a winter's night in the pubs of St. Andrews when a raw, wet wind from the North sea is beating on the windows, there is high argument for hours between citizens who consider Bobby Jones the greatest golfer that ever lived and those who hold that Vardon never will have a peer. Old Tom Morris himself could scarcely have known in the far away days when he trod the famous links such adulation as St. Andrews gives to Bobby Jones.

He is known and admired by the whole

Count Anthony Traveling Incognito, Recognized by a Wandering Friar, Is Seized and Returned to Court Under Guard, by Order of the Governor of the Province.

SECOND INSTALLMENT.

There he found Mistress Johanna, all in grey . . . from . . . ich demure color she appeared to gather an increased demureness.

THE next morning having risen betimes, he had gone forth into the garden. There he had found Mistress Johanna, all in grey this morning, from which demure color she appeared to gather an increased demureness.

"You are early astir, mistress," was his comment when she had made courteous inquiry touching his repose.

"It is our custom. We are industrious folk. As industrious as we are peaceful."

"I should be pained, madam, to restrain your industry"—and he waved a hand towards the tulips upon which he had found it exercised—"as to trouble your peace."

She smiled as she answered him: "You would not be suffered to do either."

"Oh, I believe you. You would know how to defend your own."

And then came Mynheer Claessens to join them, and bid them in to table, where Danvelt waited with the impatience of the healthy trencherman.

Count Anthony, during breakfast, drew the conclusion that a match was already settled between Johanna and Danvelt. He was conscious of a little chill at his heart, and suddenly was marveling at himself. He was a prince of the House of Guelders, after all, and heir to its throne. If it chilled him to discover a burgher's daughter fittingly betrothed to one of her own class, the sooner he departed the better for himself and others.

And so he spoke of England, and desired to know when Mynheer Claessens could afford him a passage.

But the weather turned stormy and for a week the gales persisted in the narrow seas and kept Count Anthony in the Claessen home. More than once he spoke of seeking quarters at the inn. But Mynheer Claessens sturdily opposed him.

Then, one day, news of the death of his father reached Philip Danvelt in Flushing and sent him in haste to Middelburg.

The event pointed to consequences which Mynheer Claessens mentioned on the morrow to his daughter. He spoke gently, a note of regret in his voice.

"Now that Philip is master of his fortune, I shall be losing you soon, Johanna."

"I don't think I want to leave you, father."

There fell a long silence, and he saw that her eyes were full of trouble. "May I speak frankly, father?"

"I should not know you if you spoke otherwise."

"I am not sure that my happiness lies with Philip."

"Not sure?" Claessens was startled. "But you are promised to him."

"I was no party to the promise, father."

"Nor was Philip. But he's fond of you. Old Danvelt and I knew what was good for both of you. Your fortunes united will make you very rich."

"Is wealth the only consideration?"

"The chief consideration, as you'll come to discover. And, for the rest, Philip's a good fellow, good-natured, kindly. He'll make you a good husband, never doubt it."

"Not if I do not love him, father."

"Love! Love comes with habit, child. Take my word for it."

She shook her head. "I must judge for myself in this; judge as my heart bids me."

"But what ails Philip?"

"Heaven forbid that I should have a fault to find with him."

"Why, then, all's well. A solid lad. Not perhaps of the grace and airs of such men as Master Egmont, but of a worth that seldom goes with such outward virtues."

"Master Egmont's virtues are not outward only," she said, and flushed at her tongue's too-ready betrayal of her mind.

He frowned. "This stranger isn't the cause of your looking coldly upon Philip? It isn't that . . .?"

She made haste to interrupt him. "No, no. It is only that I like and respect Master Egmont. Therefore I will assume nothing unflattering to him. That is all."

Claessens said no more to Johanna just then on the subject of Philip. But that evening after supper, sitting alone with his guest, he returned to the subject of his daughter's coming marriage, informing the count that from childhood she had been promised to Danvelt. And Count Anthony perceived quite clearly the merchant's object in this confidence.

Claessens knew of his guest no more than was to be read in his actions and externals. From these he judged him a man of courts, of noble blood, of a different clay from himself, and he had a strong and well-justified prejudice against unions where such disparity existed. So he prayed for the fine weather that should permit his guest's departure.

These prayers were answered at last on the morrow. The leaden pall of the heavens broke, the sun shone clear and warm, and the wind died down. Claessens was able to inform his guest that the sloop which had been waiting to leave port would sail on the next day. Count Anthony thanked heaven, and was downcast. Thereafter he wandered in the garden with Johanna, a sad garden, damp and battered by the storm.

Next day he sailed for England, and her world was empty; empty because of the going of a man of whose existence ten days ago she had not been conscious. For comfort she clung to the hope that he would come again, a hope begotten of his last words.

"I leave my horses, by your father's favor. My Schimmel is a gentle palfrey that would bear a child in safety. Use him freely until I come again, and, if I do not come again, retain him for your own as an earnest of the gratitude I bear you."

"Gratitude?" she echoed, who desired almost anything but that of him. "For what are you grateful?"

"To you, for more than I could tell," he said. "To God, for having known you, Johanna."

While she stood stricken dumb by that, his lips touched her hand for the first and last time, in all reverence, and he was gone.

* * * *

A fortnight later Philip Danvelt returned from Middelburg, and he was not quite the same man who had last gone thither. His accession to a fortune far greater than he had suspected had wrought a change in him. He seemed more aggressive than heretofore; he was more ponderous of speech and of manner. Although in black, he was dressed with a richness beyond a merchant's station, and he wore his finery none too well. Immediately he broached the subject of marriage to Claessens

"It's my belief," he announced ponderously, "that a man should settle early."

"Ay, ay," said Claessens drily. "You'll have had enough of travel."

Philip did not consider the interruption amusing.

"I need a wife, and I've a fine house up there in Middelburg awaiting a mistress. If you're willing, then, good Master Claessens . . ." He spread his hands, deeming it unnecessary to complete the sentence.

Good Master Claessens felt that he was being used with patronage, and was between amusement and resentment.

"It's not my willingness you must ascertain; but Johanna's," was his answer, calculated to give pause to the young man. It had, however, no such effect.

Philip laughed shortly, very self-assured. "Oh, that!" Airily he dismissed the possibility of Johanna's having any but one opinion in the matter. "I'll speak to Johanna in the morning."

In the morning when Philip asked her to fix a day for their wedding, she rose and confronted him frankly, calm save for a gleam of distress in those clear eyes. "Philip, I have a friendship for you; even affection. But it is not the kind of affection that should exist between husband and wife if they are to be happy."

He laughed through his perturbation. "But all that will follow. It always does. Trust me, Johanna. I understand these things: life and the rest. I love you, Johanna," he said again, and now at last became a lover in earnest and began humbly and with some warmth to woo that which unopposed he would phlegmatically have appropriated.

It moved her, distressed her, shook her resolve a little, but did not suffice to beat it down. When she had made this clear, he collapsed in dismayed amazement. "Then all that our parents planned is to come to naught!"

Gently she stroked his head, as he sat hunched in his chair. "I am sorry, Phillip."

So touched was she by his distress that, out of charity, to allay it, had he pressed the matter then, she might have yielded. As it was, she found it in her heart to wish that Master Egmont had never crossed her path to reveal her to herself.

Philip bore his lament to her father. Gravely Claessens heard him, and thought in his heart that what had happened was very good for Philip's soul and might yet shape him into such a man as Johanna should ultimately be content to marry.

"You've ruffled her, my lad. That's all," Claessens comforted him. "You are too downright and blunt. Women need to be coaxed." Philip snorted impatiently. "Oh! A good woman's worth coaxing. Take my word for it. I am twice your age. And a maid will often say no to a man at first, and be glad enough to say yes in the end. Johanna is not a girl to be constrained, nor am I the man to constrain her. But I'll advise her—cautiously. She'll have you in the end. But give her time."

His dejection mitigated by such hope as he could gather from what her father had said, Philip went back to Middelburg.

In the first days of June, Master Danvelt received from his prospective father-in-law this letter:

"Dear Philip: Master Egmont has just returned from England, and is lodged here at the Zeelanderhof. If we looked to see him ever again, at least we did not look to see him so soon, and I must suppose the cause of this early return to be that he did not find England to his taste, although I perceive that other reasons may exist."

There was a good deal to be read between the lines. Claessens stressed the fact that Master Egmont's return so soon had not been expected, hinted that the reason for it was to be sought elsewhere than in the vaguely apparent reasons he mentioned, and almost succeeded in suggesting that the gentleman's presence was not welcome.

Master Claessens certainly intended to convey all this and more to Philip; but he could not bring himself to use more precise expressions or to disclose the source of his disquietude. This had begun in the very moment of Master Egmont's arrival. The burgher and his daughter had just dined and they were still at table when they heard his voice in the courtyard. At the sound of that voice, Johanna's breathing had stood suddenly arrested, her face had gone white, and her hand had fled instinctively to repress the tumult of her breast.

Her watchful father observed these signs. Nevertheless his welcome of the traveller was cordial. Master Egmont was bidden to table. He was pale and a little careworn; but his dark eyes glowed as they met Johanna's; his lips laughed readily, and soon there was a return of that radiance that men remarked in him.

He had landed, he informed them, an hour ago, and he was lodged at the Zeelanderhof, in the market-place. Father and daughter protested against this in different keys. But the count was firm. Enough already had he burdened their hospitality. He remained, however, all day with them, en-

When Justice Triumphed

Silence Follows Screams in the Little Peacox Apartment, While A Man Staggers Into the Night

By Peter Levins

Peacox and the wife he slew. Picture shows him at time of arrest.

WHERE there had been screams and sudden, violent thuds, now there was a dead silence in the little apartment on the upper floor of the house on Edison avenue, Mount Vernon. The Clarks and their son-in-law, Albert Smith, living on the ground floor, had heard the sounds and wondered—and dozed off again. Now it was 3 o'clock—and the whole house seemed asleep.

Softly a door opens upstairs and a young man, pale, terror-stricken, stands in the doorway, peering into the darkness of the hall. There are stains on his hands and face and clothes. He stands there motionless for a moment, panting, sweat dripping from his face, then steps back into the room, leaving the door open.

A brief interval. Then he staggers out with a bundle in his arms, something large and unwieldy, wrapped in an overcoat. He moves cautiously to the stairway, stops to listen, plods slowly down the steps with his burden.

He reaches the street door, opens it, and again listens. The street is deserted. The April breeze, sweet with spring, sweeps through the open doorway. The young man takes a fresh grip on his bundle and hurries across the sidewalk to a small sedan parked at the curb.

Laboriously he lifts his burden over the rear door. He works feverishly in his efforts to pack the thing into the bottom of the car. There is panic in his face and movements.

He arranges the overcoat so that it completely covers his bundle. He goes back into the house. When he comes out again his hands and face are free of stains. He climbs into the car and drives away.

As has been said so many times before, it is often the most infinitesimal of accidents that will change the whole course of a human life. In this instance, we may wonder what would have hapepned if the young man, ere he climbed into his car and drove away, had seen the face of Albert Smith framed in a window of the lower floor apartment. It is not unlikely that the young man would haye killed himself within the next hour.

QUEER LOOK ON FACE WHEN HE CAME BACK.

That early morning scene took place on Monday, April 22, 1929. On the following Saturday afternoon, April 27, Joseph Silvey, 26, a steamfitter's helper of White Plains, was driving with his brother, Nicholas, in the latter's car along the Ardsley road in the town of Greenburg, a mile or so north of Yonkers. The car stopped in front of the estate of the late C. A. Edwards and Joe Silvey got out, climbed over the low stone fence and stepped into the field.

Near by he saw an apple tree in early bloom. He approached the tree, attracted by the blossoms.

Joe Silvey had a queer look on his face when he came back to the car. He was pale and frightened looking.

"What's the matter, Joe?" his brother asked.

"Matter? How do you mean?"

"You look sick."

Joe nodded. "I—feel—sick," he said. He climbed in beside his brother and they resumed their journey home. He sat staring straight ahead, saying nothing.

Six hours later Patrolman Roy Turner, of the White Plains police, called at his mother's home. Joe Silvey boarded with her. Soon after Turner arrived Silvey went to him and said he wanted to talk to him, wanted to tell him something.

"Fire away," said Turner. "What's on your mind?"

The words poured out of Silvey. Since his visit to the tree his mind had been tortured with indecision; he hadn't wanted to "get mixed up in this." But it was too much to hold back. He told the officer how he and his brother had been driving along the Ardsley road, how they had stopped, how he had gone into the field and walked to the blossoming apple tree.

"I saw a body under the tree," he gasped. "It was a girl—a woman! God, I almost fainted!"

Turner immediately telephoned Chief of Police John J. Joyce, of White Plains. Joyce notified Captain Philip J. McQuillan, of Greenburg. McQuillan and some other officers set out for the scene.

Within a short while they found the body of a young woman of about 20, dead several days and partially burned, 100 feet in from the highway.

The girl's shoes had been removed—just recently Campbell, the Jersey torch murderer, had been captured because he had failed to take this precaution—and the rest of the clothing, except for a pair of gray silk stockings rolled down around the ankles, seemed to have been burned from the body. The killer had evidently made a special effort to destroy the features, for a scorched remnant of bath towel, smelling of kerosene, lay beside the head.

An empty milk bottle, reeking of kerosene, was found a few feet away.

CRETONNE DRESS WAS BEST CLEW.

What turned out to be the best clew appeared as soon as the body was lifted from the ground. This was a portion of a cretonne house dress, bearing a design of blue cornflowers and reddish leaves. The murderer apparently had not realized that this part of the dress, pressed as it had been against the damp grass, would not burn.

The body was removed to White Plains and there presently Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire performed an autopsy.

His examination showed that the young woman had been strangled before she had been burned. Moreover, there was a wound in the head, made by some blunt instrument, which may have stunned, but could have not killed her. He thought she had been strangled with a narrow strip of cloth or flimsy garment.

That was Sunday, the 28th. On Monday the newspapers printed pictures of the remnant of cretonne found under the body. The pictures plainly showed the design.

Mrs. Edith Rees, wife of a Bronxville policeman, opened her newspaper that morning and her eyes became riveted on the picture on page 3. It is doubtful if Mrs. Rees saw any more of the paper that morning, for she recognized the cretonne as strongly resembling some material that a neighbor, Mrs. Alphonse Heinzelman, had made into a dress for her daughter, Dorothy.

That was the beginning of the end of this particular attempt at covering up a murder.

Mrs. Heinzelman identified the body as that of her daughter, estranged wife of Earle Peacox, 21-year-old radio repairman. Soon afterward a traffic officer recognized Peacox as the latter was driving through Bronxville and he was taken into custody. District Attorney Frank H. Coyne and associates questioned Peacox throughout the night.

Before they had gone very far in their grilling they were pretty sure that they had their man.

Young Peacox, described by his mother-in-law as a steady, sober and reliable boy, admitted that he had become separated from his wife, whom he deeply loved, but he insisted that he had not seen her for several weeks. He had met Dorothy in April, 1927, and eloped with her in April, 1928, but as for the third great event in this cycle of April happenings, he said he knew nothing.

DOROTHY HAD MOVED TO ANOTHER APARTMENT.

The young couple had lived with Mrs. Heinzelman until February, 1929, when they moved to a small apartment on Edison avenue, Mt. Vernon. Then suddenly, after only a few weeks, Dorothy had left Earle, told her mother they couldn't get along, and moved to an apartment on West 143d street, Manhattan.

As the relentless inquisition wore on, the prisoner lost his self-control. Several times he became violent, upsetting tables and tearing up notes that had been taken of his answers. "I had nothing to do with this murder," he cried out time and again. "I tell you I loved my wife."

But in the meanwhile Captain M. I. Silverstein, chief of detectives of Mt. Vernon, visited the Edison avenue dwelling.

Mr. and Mrs. John Clark told the officer of the screams and other noises they had heard upstairs, and Smith told of seeing Peacox carry something out to his car at about 4 o'clock in the morning. None of them had seen Peacox since then.

Silverstein went up and entered the apartment. It wasn't long before he found more than enough evidence to clinch the police's case against the young husband. Peacox had had a whole week to eliminate every possible shred of evidence from the apartment, yet the chief found a large spot that looked very much like a bloodstain on the linoleum in the kitchen, a fully loaded .45 caliber revolver in the bedroom and——

Tucked away in a corner of the bedroom closet was an old suit which smelled strongly of kerosene.

Chief Silverstein communicated his discoveries to Coyne in White Plains and shortly after dawn, April 30, the district attorney announced that Earle Peacox had confessed that he had killed his wife. He said he had killed her not deliberately but in the heat of rage and frustration, occasioned by his wife's behavior. It was a typical and-before-I-knew-what-had-happened-she-was-dead killing. There have been a great many others like it.

In his confession Peacox stated that when his wife left him to live in New York he felt terribly depressed. On that Sunday night, April 21, he had visited his mother-in-law, he said, and while he was there he suddenly remembered that it was his wedding anniversary. He had an irresistible desire to see Dorothy, so he climbed into his car and went to her apartment on 143d street.

He reached there about 10 o'clock. Dorothy was home. He suggested that she go for a ride with him and she consented. They started out.

"IT LOOKS LIKE THE SAME OLD DUMP."

"Finally I suggested that we go to the Edison avenue apartment," he continued. "To this she agreed and we went there. We went upstairs. All the lights were out. I turned them on. As soon as she entered, my wife looked around the place and sneered. She said, 'It looks like the same old dump.'

"I resented this. I said, 'Well, it's better than what you've got now.' This seemed to anger her greatly. She turned on me suddenly. I don't know just what happened that instant but she started in to claw me about the face.

"We struggled about the room. I had a fully loaded automatic pistol in my hip pocket and I took it out and pointed at her. She screamed. I hit her across the back of the head with the butt and she fell. Blood started to spurt all over the place. She continued to scream madly. She managed to get to her feet and we started struggling again. She knocked the gun out of my hand and got the gun herself.

"I guess I was mad. I put one hand over her mouth so she could not scream any more and the other over her throat. I just hung on. Finally she seemed kind of helpless. She seemed to be getting cold. Her legs felt as cold as anything. I didn't know what to do."

How much of all this was true and how much false no one knew, of course, save Peacox himself. It might well have happened exactly as he said. One can't help remarking, however, that it is rather a dangerous thing for a frustrated, passion-torn young husband to carry a loaded gun in his pocket.

To continue with his story.

He said that it was now 2:30 a. m. He was faced with the problem of getting her out of the house. He took off her shoes—he didn't know why he did this, he said—and put them in her hope chest. Then he took off his own overcoat—he said he had it on during all the struggle—and wrapped it around the cold body.

He reached the spot near the Ardsley road at about 3 o'clock, he said. After he had placed the body on the grass under the apple tree he wound a rope around the neck to be sure that she was dead, just as young Vincent Rice wound the cord of an electric iron around the neck of his sweetheart after he had stunned her. In the Peacox case,

"Pinched for a Notorious Gay Cat on the Road to t

By C. A. FREEMAN.

D ALWAYS had a yen to learn something about tramp life since the day when Chelsea Red. the tattooer, sat in my father's boat house at Colters beach in Dorchester and "jigged" a red star on my arm in exchange for a box of dad's cigars. Red's implements were crude, for it was long before the era of electrical tattooing appliances, and the artist did his work by hand with needles affixed to a stick. His inks were mixed in calm shells.

Gritting my teeth as the blood flowed, I almost forgot the pain in listening to Red's talk of the west. He'd travelled all over the United States without paying a cent of railroad fare. Hobo "jungles," wild night rides on the "rods," chases by "hostile" police all passed before me, but the man from Chelsea did not explain the various grafts by which the hobo existed. These I was to learn from myself in California, then and now justly termed the "hobo's paradise."

In the "Jungles."

I was "on the road" in California back in the early 1900's when Harry Tracy, the notorious outlaw, made his escape from the Oregon penitentiary. It was believed by the authorities that Tracy had made his way south and the police, incited by the immense rewards offered for the outlaws apprehension, were making arrests right and left.

The Java was bubbling merrily in the can when the bulls swooped on the "jungles" of a little town strangely enough called Tracy Junction and threw down their guns on me and several other hoboes.

There was a tense moment as the bulls sized us up. Then one of them evidently not a railroad detective but a deputy town marshal singled me out. "You there —you black guy—get up. I'm going to take you to the 'hoosegow' for investigation."

Silently I got on my feet and submitted to the irons. Words would only have brought me a bat over the head. Prodded by the Colts .45 I was marched to a small lockup where I was frisked and thrown in a cell. Twenty minutes later a grizzled sheriff arrived to look me over.

Now I opened up. "Why am I pinched," I demanded. "The boes with me were turned loose. I've done nothing wrong in your town."

"Hmp," grunted John Law. "Mebbe you're Harry Tracy. I'm going to hold you until I find out for sure." He bit off a chew of tobacco, and studied the descriptive sheet he held in hand. I could see the sheet over his shoulder but I saw no mention of tattoo marks. They would surely be there if Tracy had 'em.

Tattoo Lets Me out.

"Look here, Sheriff!" I shouted, stripping off my shirt. "Lamp this needle work. Tracy hasn't got this kind of stuff."

John Law turned around and got an eyeful. The original red star of Chelsea Red was there. And twenty other bits had been added. The sheriff saw a Nagasaki cootie, a full rigged ship, the American flag, crossed sabres, a palm tree, a monkey and a Moro "kris."

"Wotcher been doin', feller," he gasped. "Travellin' with a side show?"

"Nope,—just been to sea and in the army," I laughed. "Going to travel some more as soon as you let me out."

A turn of a big brass key and I stood outside the cell. The sheriff jerked his thumb in the direction of the railroad. "Beat it, kid," was his only comment. And I hit the road again.

At the time slot machines were legal over California, and the chances were so much against the player that many people did not consider it wrong to beat them. Some of the machines paid in ickels, others in quarters and even halfs. One ornate machine which I saw in San Francisco was as large as a piano and was played with silver dollars. Paper currency was rare on the coast.

Beating the Game.

It wasn't long before the hoboes devised systems for beating the machine. A large sized buck shot weighed about the same as a nickel. Intending operators flattened them with a hammer and laying a nickel over them trimmed off the rough edges with a pocket knife.

One man might beat the machine but it was better to have two. One went to the bar and bought a beer. Then engaged the bartender in conversation if the place was empty. The other slipped in the slugs and worked the crank. If he thought he was observed a good nickel could be slipped in so as to show in the glass before the bartender could arrive. Of course many of the slugs were losers but a few good nickels came. Twenty-five cent pots were fairly frequent. Sometimes half dollar and dollar pots came. Once in a blue moon the machine emptied ten dollars in the cup. With slugs the player could hardly lose. Even if he was caught he had only to run for the bartender dare not leave the saloon. The game paid well and was ideal for such small time workers as hoboes.

There was another method also. A hole was bored in a nickel and a thread attached. The nickel carefully greased was inserted, and the thread jerked. Sometimes the machine errupted its entire contents. Snatch and run was then the hoboes' move. And it was quickly made.

The more I railroaded in California the more I learned of vagabondia and its ways. My note book grew full, for I intended to write of tramps. But somehow I never did. And now Jim Tully has made a fortune as a tramp author. From what I've seen of the road I judge that Jim has set down his own experiences.

A few bums in California carried razors carefully tied up with string to prevent being charged with the possession of a deadly weapon in case of arrest. nal bums would not work, the cats" as they were called, would. At least for a few days or weeks at a time. And naturally I was a "gay cat." Landing a job as messenger in the laboratory of the California Powder Company at Pinole, in Contra Costa county I commenced to learn something about powder manufacturer.

Part of my job each morning was to bring to the laboratory samples of gun cotton from the different tanks. These samples were dissolved in long vials of ether and alcohol and subjected to various tests. Then the liquids were thrown away. The second day I was on the job I was approached by a delegation of bums from the railroad.

"Don't throw away that stuff, kid," said the leader. "Give it to me."

"But you can't drink this!" I exclaimed. "It'll rot your insides out. Gun cotton has nitric acid in it."

"Huh!" grunted the bum, scornfully stretching out his hand for a vial. "Look here—the ether rises to the top. The bit of acid does no harm." Skillfully he slopped the ether off and poured the alcohol into a quart bottle. From a smaller bottle which he took from his pocket he poured in a couple of ounces of sweet glycerine. Then he shook it up. "We'll go down to the jungles now," he told me. "With a touch of water this'll make a fine drink. Regular rock and rye. The guy at the glycerine house always slips us a bottle of that stuff!"

After that I always saved the waste alcohol for the bums. But I'll bet that the present messenger doesn't follow my custom. Not in these prohibition days.

In the Vineyards.

Red wine was the urge that induced many hoboes to soil their hands with honest toil. In the grape growing districts "stemmin's" might be purchased for 15 cents a gallon. Literally "stemmin's" meant third grade wine in which floated stems and skins. But these did not bother the boes who strained the stuff and drank it.

Those vineyards were a wonderful sight during the season of picking. Camped among them were men, women, and children who looked on the occasion as a paying vacation. Whole families picked. Butchers' and bakers' wagons came around. The pickers slept in tents or in the glorious open air. Sanitary arrangements were crude, but there was no sickness. Drunkenness of course was rampant, particularly in the camps of "gay cats," roving Mexicans and Japs.

There was music at night. Guitars twanged and accordians wailed. The decent element was savings its earnings while the others were blowing them in. Good wages could be made at seasonable occupations in those days. There were the oranges, the grapes, the peaches, the prunes, and finally the hops. The Filipino horde of which California white labor is now complaining had not yet swept in. Japs were the principal competitors. Now the Japs have their own orchards.

For a time East Indians managed to enter California, and these coolies who worked nude, but for a loin cloth and a turban, saved every nickel they made. California soon blocked further entry, but they were for some time a picturesque sight on American farms.

Every laborer carried his own blankets or quilts—and his own simple cooking utensils. Among the laborers were hoboes with trades. The willow worker had probably learned his basketry in prison but his wares met with ready sale among the women. Baskets and stools were always useful. So were hammocks in which to swing the babies while their mothers worked.

The Fakers.

The "wire men" turned out name pins in gleaming gold rolled wire, or twisted white wire around bristles to form bottle washers. The "mush faker" was there too with his soldering kit and strips of patching. He repaired umbrellas and sunshades for the women and patched pots. Wandering cobblers drifted in with their kits and strips of sole leather hung over their shoulders. And all hands drank wine.

Camps composed of workers at various trades were established among the vines. Barbers were there, too. Hair cuts were a dime and a shave cost a nickel. Of course fights were frequent and deputy sheriffs patrolled the vineyards. Many of the jails were said to be of the "boodle" type. Personally I knew of one.

The system was simple, a crooked magistrate and a crooked sheriff working hand in hand. The sheriff fed the prisoners, having a contract with the county. Deputies would arrest bums who, when brought before the judge, would be sentenced to 30, 60 or even 90 days' imprisonment. Perhaps that very night the bums would be released via the back door, handed a dollar and advised to "blow." Sometimes they only got a kick. But the result was the same. The bums got out of town and the sheriff merely charged up their meals to the county for the period of their sentences. Then he split with the judge and his deputies, although sometimes the deputies collected a dollar a head for arrests.

In "spuare" towns were the jail was "regular" this bounty was often paid in lieu of salaries and the John Laws would pinch their own grandmother if an opportunity offered. I remember riding in a box card loaded with peaches on the Southern Pacific. At a junction point the train was crashed into my another freight and several cars were derailed. My car was one and I crawled out sticky with mashed peaches but glad to be alive.

tertaining them with descriptions of England.

There chanced to be a second guest at Master Claessens' table that night: a Franciscan brother, one of those itinerant friars who wandered through the land. Rarely did one of these brethren pass through Flushing without seeking bed and board in the hospitable house of Claessens and in exchange for these comforts retailing to the merchant and his household the current events in the world.

Tonight this little brother of Saint Francis had a greater than usual store of gossip for them.

He was last from Bruges, he told them, where the duke had now established his court; and he began by speaking of the great preparations there for the duke's wedding to the sister of the King of England, shortly to be celebrated. Very subtly he created the impression that this was a union that boded ill for the land. An alliance with England, such as this marriage consolidated, could not be other than an alliance against France, an alliance aiming at the furtheranee of the Duke of Burgundy's insatiable ambition. This implied war, and, if the duke made war with Burgundian lances, he made it none the less with Flemish gold. It would mean a crushing burden of taxation upon the Netherlands already burdened to excess, and this at a time when their normal trade would be dislocated and their normal prosperity stemmed.

Listening to him, Count Anthony recognized him for a Frenchman by his accent, and suddenly asked himself was he one of the agents of the King of France sent thus to sow discontent through the duke's dominions and foment among these subject people the spirit of revolt?

Returning, however, to the preparations for the wedding, Friar Stephen told them how the looms were being driven at high speed in the manufacture of tapestries and other fabrics, how painters and artificers of every kind were hard at work upon decorations and embellishments that should be worthy of Burgundian splendor and Burgundian opulence.

He spoke fluently in well-chosen words that painted vivid pictures, yet so craftily that when most he seemed to admire and laud the Duke of Burgundy, the more effectively did he damn him in Flemish eyes. For the ultimate impression he created was one of a monstrous prodigality, of a reckless scattering of gold exacted for these empty splendors from those who had earned it by the sweat of their brows, the skill of their hands, and the laborious cunning of their invention.

And then, because it served his purpose—which to one listener at least grew plainer with every word he uttered—he passed abruptly from Anthony of Burgundy to another Anthony no less famous at the Burgundian court: Count Anthony of Guelders. He spoke of him with a sudden overclouding of his benign countenance.

"But what's here to sadden you?" wondered Claessens, alluding to the lugubrious tone in which the friar extolled the virtues of this prince of the house of Guelders.

"Alas!" sighed Brother Stephen. "He 's gone, the one good influence in that prodigal court; gone no man knows whither; vanished in a night. He quitted the court when it was at Brussels. There have been rumors of him, here and there, but the duke has failed to trace him, and it is thought that he has gone abroad. It is most sad. The duke, they say, is more morose and sullen than ever as a result of the affair."

"Why did he go?" inquired Johanna.

"Ah, that!" The friar fetched a sigh. "His highness would have had him marry where he did not love. He was formally betrothed to the duke's sister-in-law, the Lady Catharine of Bourbon. Yet for all her beauty my Lord Anthony would have none of her. He was very difficult, very exacting and fastidious where ladies are concerned, and, though many there are who were known to sigh for him, it is boldly assorted that he was never known to sigh for any. He is of an austerity such as finds no place in courts. The ribald make jests of it; unseemly jests, and suggest for him the cloister. The duke would have forced him into this marriage. To avoid it and because sickened in other ways—as so austere a man might well be—of courtly life, he disapepared."

"Why, that says more for him than all your eulogies, good brother," Johanna commented.

And then Claessens, knowing what passed in his daughter's mind, attempted to divert the argument.

"But his flight hardly savors of high courage, such as one would look for in the man you have described."

Count Anthony, who hitherto had sat a silent listener in the background and a little in shadow, laughed softly. Claessens turned to him.

"You laugh, sir! Why?"

"Because, Master Claessens, you do not know Duke Charles, of Burgundy, his indomitable will and his remorseless powers of persuasion."

"You speak with feeling almost, Master Egmont," said the burgher.

"Oh! based on common knowledge," was the count's disarming answer.

But it did not disarm the friar. "Egmont!" he had echoed, when that name was pronounced, and had continued to stare at the elegant figure sitting just beyond the edge of the light.

Almost at a glance he identified that tawny head and lofty brow with the descriptions he had heard of the missing prince of the house of Guelders. A moment later he had made a decision that was to have momentous consequences for Count Anthony.

Towards noon of that next day, at about the same time that Master Claessens' letter was being delivered to Philip Danvelt, Brother Stephen came, dusty and famished, into the grey courtyard of the Gravenhof, of Middelburg, the seat of the ducal governor of Zealand, and craved audience of that august personage.

* * * *

Brother Stephen, as soon as he was able to gain the ear of Sire Claude de Rhynsault, governor of Zealand by the grace of Duke Charles, of Burgundy, reported to the governor that he had seen Count Anthony. He added that Count Anthony—under the name of Anthony Egmont—had been much in the company of a merchant of Middelburg—Philip Danvelt.

Since the duke had promised a reward to the person who should reveal Count Anthony's hiding place, the governor lost no time in setting to work.

Within a few hours an officer waited upon Master Danvelt with a summons from his excellency.

Resentful, and grumbling to support his importance, Danvelt went.

The governor asked him whether he knew a man named Anthony Egmont. Philip replied that he did.

"Do you know where he is at present?"

"Why, yes: at Flushing, at the Zeelanderhof."

"Oho!" cried Rhynsault.

Danvelt was dismissed with scant courtesy. He now realized that he had blundered sorely in revealing his friend's whereabouts. Returning home, he ordered horses to be saddled, and, accompanied by a groom, set out for Flushing.

Now it happened that Count Anthony and Mistress Johanna were riding by the same road, returning from a little excursion along the dykes.

There had been little talk between them, and that little was confined to trivial matters. Then a long silence fell, which Johanna made no attempt to break.

For some time now their horses had fallen to a walking pace. Count Anthony leaned across and placed his gloved right hand on hers.

"It was you, Johanna, who compelled my return. You knew it, child."

She shook her head. "How could I have such knowledge?"

"How? It is the kind of knowledge that is imparted without words, in the silent language in which soul talks to soul."

She dared not look at him, but kept her eyes on the red towers and massive ramparts of the town of Flushing which they were fast approaching. And then she became conscious, as did he, of hoof-beats behind them. A moment later came a hail, and then two horsemen swept alongside, and the first of these doffed his bonnet and revealed himself for Master Danvelt, never more inopportune to her than in this moment.

"God save you, Master Egmont," was his greeting breathlessly delivered. "I have ridden hard to warn you."

"To warn me?" The count waited while Philip made a full announcement of his morning's interview with the governor of Zealand.

Count Anthony laughed when the tale was told. "Why, what have I to do with the governor of Zealand?" he asked.

"That you should know, sir. Whatever it may be, and lest it should bode you ill, my duty was to warn you at once, in view of what lies between us."

Laughter was dismissed from his lordship's countenance. "That, sir, was very worthy, very noble in you."

"It was no less than I owed."

"Indeed, a great deal more. You cannot be blind to the risk to yourself had your full suspicions been well-founded. If, for instance, the apprehension of my person were intended, and you frustrate it by this warning and so permit me to escape, you cannot be in doubt that you would be called upon to answer, and to answer grievously."

With Johanna's startled gaze upon him, Danvelt made an answer which suddenly transfigured him in her eyes, endowing him with a nobility hitherto unsuspected.

"Sir, I am well aware of that. But if my life should pay for it, it is no more than the life I owe to you. Moreover, it is through me and the service that you did me that you are tracked."

"My friend," said Count Anthony, "your action more than justifies mine in having served you." Then he smiled again. "For the rest, you need have no fear either for me or for yourself. I am no fugitive from justice. There will be messages for me. That is all."

Danvelt breathed freely again. He was pleased. He had worn the halo of heroism without any of its inconveniences. And from Johanna, too, there came a gasp of relief and a return of the color which momentarily terror had driven from her cheeks.

Together now they rode into the town, and parted in the market-place, Count Anthony and his servant going to the Zeelanderhof, while Johanna returned home accompanied by Danvelt and followed by Jan.

The count sat his horse at the inn door, and watched them out of sight. As they were about to turn the corner, they looked back, first Johanna, then Danvelt. They waved to him, and he doffed his bonnet in reply, little dreaming of the vastly different of circumstances in which next her eyes should discover him. Then he fetched a deep sigh, and walked his horse into the inn yard.

Into that same inn yard less than an hour later clanked a company of six men-at-arms, from the heads of whose lances fluttered purple bannerols bearing a white surcoat over his mail and a little scarlet plume in his steel cap. Dismounting, he inquired of the landlord for a gentleman calling himself Anthony Egmont.

The landlord, relieved that the business of these Burgundians was not with himself, promptly conducted the officer to the room where Count Anthony sat alone with his perplexities.

So overmastering had been his feeling for Johanna that, he now perceived, he had yielded to them blindly and in utter disregard to every other consideration. Relentlessly they had brought him back from England as soon as he arrived there, and remorselessly had they closed his senses to all perception of the circumstances in which both of them were placed.

It had remained for an act of generosity on the part of Danvelt to check him in his reckless course and bid him consider whither he was heading, bring him to ponder certain contingencies of expediency and of honor. At the risk, perhaps, of his own life, Danvelt had ridden to warn the man who would have stolen Johanna from her burgher-lover. That was how the count now regarded himself. If hitherto he had discounted without qualms any such aspect of his conduct, it was because Danvelt had appeared to him beneath consideration. In this, it was now clear to him that he had been guilty of misjudgment.

Then, too, it became necessary to ask himself to what end did he propose to snatch Johanna from another. Was he, a Prince of Guelders, prepared to make this burgher's daughter his princess? Even if he were, would such a thing be permitted him? And alternatively, was he prepared to marry her at the price of renouncing his rights to the throne of Guelders? Did the clear duty imposed upon him by his birth even permit him to do so much?

These were the questions he was again balancing in his mind to perplex and distract him. Answers he had not found to any when the governor's officer was admitted to his presence, unless it was a half-answer supplied by his romantic fatalism, that Danvelt's supervention at the very moment when he was about to give his love for Johanna full expression was in itself a sign.

Tormented and despairing, torn between his love for Johanna and his duty to himself, and to her, and even to Danvelt, he almost welcomed the interruption of his distracting thoughts which the officer's advent afforded.

"By your good leave, my lord, I have orders concerning you." Thus the officer, his manner a careful blend of deference and firmness.

"Concerning me? They are—?"

"You are to ride with me at once, my lord."

"I ride with you? Who are you, sirrah?"

"Fritz von Diesenhofen, lieutenant to the governor of Zealand, to serve you."

"You seem to know me."

"I do, my lord."

"Then what have I to do with your governor of Zealand?"

"They will tell you that at Bruges, my

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Glimpses of Life Among the Puritans PART 3

THE LEADERS OF THE PURITANS WHO MIGRATED TO AMERICA IN 1630 WERE MEN OF LEARNING AND CULTURE WHO WISHED TO SPREAD EDUCATION AMONG THE COLONISTS

AS EARLY AS 1642 THE MASSACHUSETTS AUTHORITIES PASSED LAWS MAKING EDUCATION COMPULSORY IN THE COLONY.

LONG BEFORE THAT TIME, HOWEVER, THERE WERE "DAME SCHOOLS" AMONG THE PURITANS,—PRIVATE SCHOOLS CONDUCTED BY CERTAIN HOUSEWIVES FOR THE SMALL CHILDREN OF THEIR NEIGHBORS

THE DAME SCHOOL WAS A FORE-RUNNER OF THE MODERN KINDERGARTEN. THE TEACHING INCLUDED LESSONS IN DEPORTMENT AND READINGS FROM THE BIBLE.—•

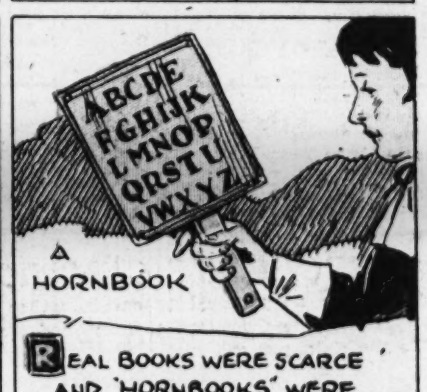

IF SOME OF HER LITTLE CHARGES GREW RESTLESS AND SHOWED AN INCLINATION TO RUN AWAY, THE "SCHOOL-MARM" WOULD TIE THEM TO HER CHAIR OR PIN THEM SECURELY TO HER SKIRT

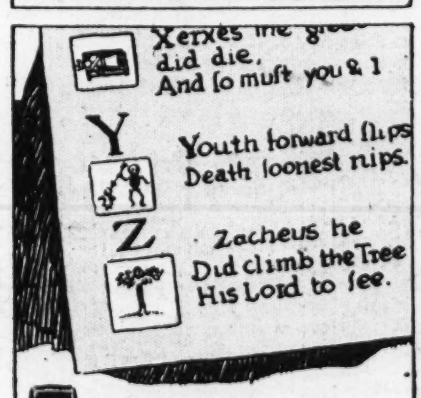

IN 1647 EVERY TOWNSHIP OF FIFTY OR MORE FAMILIES WAS REQUIRED BY LAW TO PROVIDE A SCHOOLMASTER TO TEACH READING AND WRITING.

THE SCHOOLHOUSES WERE ROUGH CABINS. THE PUPILS SAT ON BENCHES MADE OF SPLIT LOGS. THEY WROTE WITH CHARCOAL ON PIECES OF BIRCH BARK.

REAL BOOKS WERE SCARCE AND "HORNBOOKS" WERE MOSTLY USED. A HORNBOOK WAS A LESSON SHEET MOUNTED ON A BLOCK OF WOOD HAVING A HANDLE AND COVERED WITH A TRANSPARENT SHEET OF HORN FOR PROTECTION.

THE PURITAN CHILDREN CAME TO LEARN THE ALPHABET BY MEMORIZING QUAINT VERSES LIKE THOSE SHOWN ABOVE.

EDUCATIONAL TRAINING WAS ALL WORK AND NO PLAY IN THOSE DAYS. BIRCH SWITCHES WERE FREELY USED TO "INSPIRE" BACKWARD PUPILS.

THE OLDER BOYS WENT TO GRAMMAR SCHOOL, WHERE THE CHIEF STUDY WAS LATIN, A KNOWLEDGE OF THAT LANGUAGE THEN BEING CONSIDERED THE MARK OF A CULTURED MAN

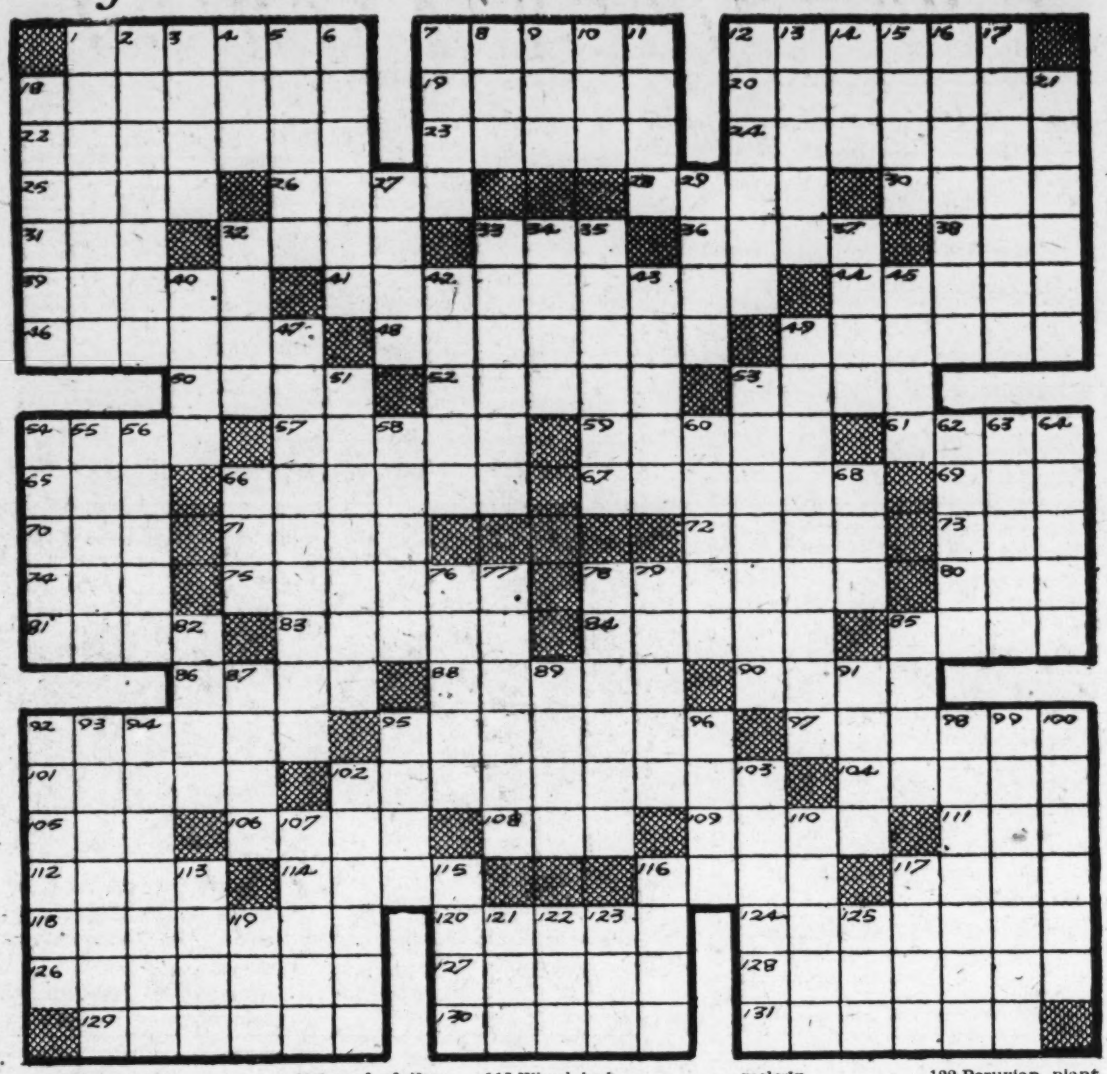

AT FIFTEEN A BOY WAS READY TO ENTER THE UNIVERSITY. THE FIRST COLONIAL COLLEGE WAS HARVARD, FOUNDED AT NEWTOWN (CAMBRIDGE) IN 1638.

The Story Behind the Opera

How Jules Massenet Came Across the Story of "Manon Lescaut" in the Library of the Director of the Famous Opera Comique, in Paris, and Promptly Suggested the Novel for an Opera. It Took the Composer Three Years to Finish the Score

By J. J. Geller

IN THE first half of the eighteenth century Abbe Prevost, a renegade monk, brought further ecclesiastical maledictions upon his head with the writing of "Manon Lescaut," a novel in which a woman abandons her true love for that of a pious, wealthy man and induces him to desert the religious life to which he had dedicated himself. After a series of adventures she expires in the arms of her faithful lover.

Notwithstanding Abbe Prevost's protestations that he wanted to prove the age-old biblical admonition that the wages of sin is death, his book was regarded at the time of publication as inimical to the tenets of Christianity. Nevertheless, "Manon Lescaut" ranks as a classic with the literati of France in its finely chiseled contrast of false love and an exalting sentiment.

For more than a century after publication "Manon Lescaut" reposed on the shelves of all true bibliophiles. During all those years there were innumerable attempts to dramatize the story or transpose it to the field of grand opera, but to no avail, until Jules Massenet pounced upon it for one of the most popular operas ever composed.

The story goes that one Carvalho, the director of the famous Opera-Comique in Paris, engaged Massenet to compose music to the libretto of "Phoebe," submitted by the well known authors and collaborators, Henri Meilhac and Phillippe Gille. An examination of "Phoebe" convinced Massenet that it could never make its way successfully to the operatic stage, and he rejected it. Before returning the libretto to Carvalho, the composer went to Meilhac's home and tactfully informed him that "Phoebe" lacked the elements of grand opera. Meilhac accepted the news cheerfully and invited the composer into his library. Suddenly Massenet saw the title of "Manon Lescaut" stamped upon one of the many volumes on the open shelves and promptly suggested the novel for an opera. Meilhac nodded his assent and made a luncheon engagement with his visitor for the next day.

When Massenet departed the librettist followed him out of the door and into the street, where he hastened to the home of Gille and discussed with him the matter of writing a libretto based upon Abbe Prevost's novel. Gille was won over to this plan, and both plunged into the writing of it, right then and there. It is recorded that within a few hours they finished the first two acts in long hand, which they titled "Manon." The rapidity with which they began this text can be attributed to the fact that the plot of "Manon Lescaut" was firmly intrenched in their minds and this facilitated the writing.

The next day, when Massenet and Meilhac met at a restaurant by appointment, the former found two acts of "Manon" beneath his napkin. The other three followed within a few days.

Although Meilhac and Gille delivered the complete text within a week, it took the composer almost three years to finish the score. A half hour before the curtain went up for the first performance on the night of January 9, 1884, Massenet wrote to a friend that he would soon discover whether his hopes were to be confirmed or illusions shattered. We may easily judge his gratification when it is taken into consideration that he lived to witness the 1,000th performance of "Manon."

Lonely Women

given her, but now that soreness had turned into a fever, almost an obsession, to meet Mrs. Charlton, or rather, since she was much too timid, fortunately, to call upon Mrs. Charlton, to have Mrs. Charlton call upon her.

"I am very ill now," said Mrs. Walsh, "and I am not trying to be any of the things that I used to . . . so foolishly . . . try to be. I think she would understand me now. She must be a wonderful woman. I have so much I want to ask her; so many questions."

Apparently after that first unfortunate and only meeting, Mrs. Walsh had taken to reading everything that Mrs. Charlton wrote. She knew Mrs. Charlton's books by heart, as if they were text books of how Americans should behave if they wished in France to be successful. It was clear, despite the fact that Mrs. Walsh was not markedly articulate, that Mrs. Charlton's personality and her books represented in Mrs. Walsh's mind a bland, successful American expatriation that Mrs. Walsh herself had signally failed to achieve. The characters in Mrs. Charlton's novels were just the sort of people Mrs. Walsh would have liked to resemble.

"It explains a mystery," Violet had commented wonderingly. "I never knew before what sort of person it was who actually believed in the realism of Mrs. Charlton's point of view."

Now, walking down in the dusk beside Mrs. Bickitt—a long swinging stride beside a short ambling one—she was reflecting how pitiful and absurd life was, and yet at the same time how splendid and interesting. To be human—that was the point. Human and eager and unpretentious. She was glad that she belonged to a younger generation which, whatever its faults, had at least lost the absurd and cruel inflations of the older generations. That—to some extent—knew where it was going. That, as Mrs. Charlton so often said, chose its line and stuck to it. Which was a good deal more than Mrs. Charlton did for all her talk. She thought she was so Olympian, so remote, and yet the slightest flattery would disarm her, the slightest criticism would annoy her. A very clay-footed goddess.

While as for Mrs. Bickitt here, with her constant nonsense about men, her lack of decision about what she was going to do!

They had come to the gate of their villa, covered with ivy and climbing roses, and Violet had her hand on the latch, when out of the dusk stepped a young man. He was a tall, thin young man in a motor coat and a cap, with very bright dark eyes, and a thin, big nose and a big wide mouth. He was not exactly handsome, but he was extremely presentable and graceful and brown and pleasant looking.

"I beg your pardon," he said, "but could you tell me if Miss Violet Speare lives here? I'm Richard Morton, of Philadelphia, and I have a letter of introduction to her from her cousins."

Mrs. Bickitt took the words out of Violet's mouth.

"This is Miss Speare," she said.

"O, really!" He smiled and shook hands. Mrs. Bickitt noticed the expression of surprised delight on his face.

"You must come in for dinner," she said. "It will be ready soon. No—just as you are. You needn't bother to dress."

"Thanks. That's awfully nice of you. You get lonely motoring by yourself. I've been a couple of months in Switzerland studying banking—we have a Swiss branch—and now I'm motoring back to Paris before sailing. I've a sister living near Avignon, and I'm going to stay with her for a while, and then go north."

They had dinner out on the vine covered terrace with the lights of the little town shining through the trees. They learned that Mr. Morton was in his father's bank, that he was conducting a branch of that bank in a country town about 50 miles from Philadelphia, that he lived in an old family house by himself, that he knew a good deal about flowers and horses and dogs, that he had a pleasant, shy sense of humor, and that he had been about the world a lot.

A rather dangerously attractive young man, thought Mrs. Bickitt. She wasn't sure whether she was glad or not that Violet, although polite as a hostess should be, did not alter her gentle absent minded manner. Mrs. Bickitt tried to make up for this lack of interest. She was gay, almost flirtatious. But she noticed as the dinner proceeded that the young man found it harder to respond and that at moments he studied Violet with deep, speculative eyes.

"You must have wonderful swimming here," said Morton.

"Why, yes," said Mrs. Bickitt. "Violet—Miss Speare—swims almost every afternoon."

"I think I'll stay over for a few days. I was going on to Hyeres, but Hyeres, they tell me, is far from the sea, and I'd rather swim than do anything I know. Would you let me swim with you, Miss Speare?"

Violet laughed. "Certainly."

It seemed to Mrs. Bickitt an unusual companionship that ensued, as if Violet had suddenly added a man to her life without being much aware of the fact. That Morton was in love with Violet became increasingly evident. Except in the mornings, when Violet wrote, he was at the villa constantly. He and she swam every afternoon together; at night, a full moon having come up, they motored along the Corniche.

But Violet did not return from these expeditions with the flushed, exalted manner of a girl who herself is falling in love. She came in calmly, said good night calmly, and, as a rule, picked up a book and read. Only once did Mrs. Bickitt perceive a break in this attitude, and that was one night when Violet sat for an hour or two by herself in the garden. From her window Mrs. Bickitt could see the still, thoughtful figure.

Mrs. Bickitt did not know what had happened between Morton and Violet. They had been sitting on the beach after swimming, three or four days following his arrival. They had that end of the beach all to themselves. Far down toward the town several French children and their quaintly shaped nurses waded in the quiet water. It was dusk. A steamer drew a trail of brown smoke writing along the horizon.

"I didn't think it could happen," said Morton suddenly.

"What?"

He turned quickly and leaned on his elbow. "I'm in love with you," he said. "I fell in love with you the first time I saw you. I didn't think it could happen."

The smile left Violet's face. "O, please!" she said.

"Please what?"

"O, please don't begin to spoil such a nice time. It's been so nice, motoring and swimming."

"But why wouldn't it be nice if you fell in love with me, too?"

"Because——" A grimace twisted Violet's face. "I—I, O, I can't explain. You wouldn't understand."

"Why wouldn't I understand? I'm pretty good at understanding things."

"Because——"

"You have been in love before?"

"Certainly—I am 27."

"Yes, anybody who looks like you—who is like you, would have been in love. It wasn't happy?"

Violet frowned and looked at the distance.

"No." She turned impulsively and laid a hand on his arm. "Please. It's taken me so long to get back to where I can enjoy things again. I don't want anything like it—ever."

"That's nonsense," he had laughed impatiently. "Do you think a person like yourself can keep away from it? Do you think even if you hide yourself away in a place like this you can avoid it? Look at my coming. You might just as well try to run away from the rain."

"Please."

"All right. I'll do anything you want. I love you so much, I'll even not make love to you. All right. It's a bargain. But I think when I leave you'll be sorry." Unexpectedly he became proud and stiff and resentful. He got to his feet. "Let's get dressed," he said shortly.

"I've hurt your feelings? I'm sorry."

"O, no, I simply made a mistake. I was foolish enough and conceited enough to think you cared a lot for me, too. Otherwise, I wouldn't have spoken."

"I do like you a lot."

"Thanks."

He kept his word. The remainder of the week he was cheery, companionable, far removed from any trace of courtship. The night before he left he came to dinner and, as usual, afterward asked Violet to motor with him. As usual, she accepted.

Morton and Violet sped along the twisting Corniche in the moonlight; to the east, toward St. Tropez and St. Raphael. The pines threw round shadows on the road, the open spaces were spining discs of silver. To the right, beyond the shining cliffs, the sea drew a moving white ring around the shores. Morton and Violet were silent.

"You're going too fast," she said at length

"I want to go fast tonight," he had answered.

Suddenly, and without knowing why, she found herself angry with him.

"Very well," she had commanded. "Go really fast, then—faster. If you're going to be brave, be brave!"

"Do you really mean that?"

He stopped his car with a suddenness that threw Violet forward. They had come to a part of the road where it left the sea and entered a dark patch of woods. After the rush of soft air the night seemed magically still and fruitless.

"What are you going to do?" asked Violet.

He laughed shortly. "I'm going to be brave," he said. And then he suddenly became fierce. "I'm going to try to make you human," he said. "I love you so much that I don't care what you think of me, so long, perhaps, as I can stir you enough so that when the next man comes along—as he will—you'll treat him differently from the way you treated me. A person like you can't live the life you're leading."

"What's wrong with the way I've treated you?" 'Not human!' How absurd!" She who prided herself on her interest in humanity; who wanted to write, in contradistinction to Mrs. Charlton, books full of the tragedy, pain, laughter and good honest aroma of life. She who prided herself on being released and tolerant and understanding.

"You've been very kind," he said gravely, "and very inhuman. Would you like me to tell you about it?"

"Yes."

"Very well, you nurse the sorrowful memory of a ghost, don't you? I'm not sure, but I imagine that the trouble, whatever it was, was as much your fault as his." Violet gasped. "O, yes, it wasn't that that made you inhuman—in that direction you've always been inhuman. You're a writer, aren't you? Mrs. Bickitt told me. Well, writers often substitute the emotions of their characters for their own emotions. But you mustn't. You weren't made for that."

"You know a lot for a banker," said Violet sneeringly. She was ashamed of herself. This angry break in her preserve. But she wanted to hurt him.

"Bankers are supposed to know a lot, nowadays. It's just as interesting a profession as writing. There are big bankers and little bankers."

"Well, go on."

He looked at her with grim amusement. "That's about all." He threw in his clutch. "Did you think I was going to kiss you? That would have been conventional, but slightly cheap. I only kiss women who show plainly they want to kiss me."

"It is a pity," said Violet, "you choose the last night we will see each other to be insulting and stupid."

He was silent for a long time, staring into the bronze night ahead of him. "I don't think it is the last time," he said finally. "I think you are in love with me. If I didn't think it, I wouldn't have done or said any of the things I have done or said, or what I'm going to do and say."

He was silent once more until they reached the gate of Violet's villa, then he reached into his pocket and brought out an envelope. "I'll be off early tomorrow morning," he said. "If I give you this letter will you promise not to open it until a week from today? Let me see—just at this time, say? It's about 10 o'clock, and that will be Wednesday—Wednesday a week."

Violet took the note and looked down at it.

"What a strange request."

"No, it's not so strange. Will you promise?"

"Yes, but how do you know I will keep my promise?"

His eyes, shining, smiled at her in the moonlight. "Because you will . . . You're that sort of person."

"Thank you. That's nice of you."

"No . . . true. Good-by."

She stood by the gate listening to his car creaking down the lane. Suddenly it occurred to her how empty her life would be for a while without him. It was like that—you never realized how much you would miss a person until that person was gone. Well, she wouldn't let him go out of her life for good. They had been warm friends although they had said so little to each other. She would write him. Then she remembered that she didn't even know his sister's name, let alone her Avignon address. Never mind, she would write to his Paris bankers.

But it might be years before they would see each other again. He was going back to America to settle down to work.

She slipped the note into the pocket of her overcoat and went into the house. Mrs. Bickitt, reading in the drawing room, looked up with eyes that seemed to have been crying. Violet had noticed that look several times in the last week. She wondered what was the matter with Mrs. Bickitt. She had asked, but Mrs. Bickitt had said, "Nothing."

Mrs. Bickitt had been crying; Mrs. Bickitt had been crying all that week, and she continued to cry the week that followed. She had come to the conclusion that Mrs. Charlton, as usual was right, also that terrible Englishman at Biarritz. And often the face of Mrs. Walsh gave added point to her reflections. She couldn't go on as she had been going. She must do something definite, either divorce Julius or else go back to Kanesville.

It would have been different if Julius really loved her, but Julius had shown that he didn't by refusing to come over to see her. No doubt he had been consoling himself quite happily in other directions. Men were shallow creatures. Finally, she decided that she must talk to some one. Violet would have to do. She would speak to her that night after dinner. . . . It was Wednesday night. Two weeks now, Mrs. Bickitt reflected, since this question had been bothering her.

Dinner on the terrace was eaten almost without a word. With the coffee, Mrs. Bickitt said, "Violet, I must tell you something very important. I have come to a very important decision. Let's go out and sit on the bench in the garden."

"Very well," agreed Violet disinterestedly.

The bench was under a great plane tree; the lights of the house wer hidden. Soft sand made the footsteps of any one approaching soundless. Mrs. Bickitt and Violet had their backs to the house.

"I am going to divorce Julius," announced Mrs. Bickitt.

She had expected some protest, some excitement, but none came.

"I have wondered why you haven't done it long ago," commented Violet calmly. "You can't love him."

"I did love him," retroted Mrs. Bickitt in a hollow voice. "I loved him as well as any woman ever loved a man. I loved him until a couple of weeks ago, and then suddenly everything became clear and I saw what a fool I was. To waste my time on a man who doesn't even know what love is; a man whose whole mind and spirit is taken up with the most sorbid kind of money grubbing. What am I to Julius? What is any woman to a man of his type?

"I tell you, my dear, you and I—any woman who knows men over here—have seen something finer and more self-sacrificing; a glimpse of what love can be. Now, I do not love Julius any longer," Mrs. Bickitt brought her small fist down on the

Starved Hair Roots Cause Baldness-Falling Hair

Many cases of baldness and falling hair are caused by starved hair roots.

The hair, as you may know, is nourished by the blood.

Poor circulation in the scalp means that the hair roots are undernourished.

Then hair falls out and baldness results.

Fortunately this cause is simple to correct. Merely rub the bald spot and spots where the hair is falling out with Japanese Oil. A few drops worked in vigorously with the fingers for 2 minutes every night generally starts new hair within 3 to 4 weeks.

Japanese Oil is an antiseptic liniment that has been successful for 46 years in relieving aches and pains.

Many people told us that it helped them to grow new hair.

We investigated these statements. We asked doctors and they told us what we tell you.

If poor circulation is the cause of baldness and falling hair Japanese Oil promotes new growth by stimulating circulation. You can feel the blood coursing through your scalp. The slight throbbing tells you that Japanese Oil is doing its work.

Give Japanese Oil a fair trial. Results may come slowly at first but patience will be rewarded.

THE GLADIOLUS

THE amateur gardener has a real friend in the shape of this beautiful flower that will grow under almost any conditions. The gladiolus has out stripped many of its rivals in the race for popularity within the last few years and this undoubtedly attributable to its hardiness. The average gardener without more than casual experience, may expect to have 95 out of each 100 bulbs planted, grow and bloom satisfactorily.

Another reason for its popularity lies in the fact that for some reason, pratcically every insect and disease passes it by. This grows to be more and more a factor for, apparently, each year produces some new insect that we have never seen before. The newer the insect, the less it cares for the old reliable gladiolus, and it continues merrily on its way towards beautiful blossoms.

So, the amateur gains much pleasure from the planting of this flower, for he is certain of a goodly measure of success. On the other hand, the semi-professional and the professional gain much pleasure and profit from the growing of this bulb, for through this extra experience, even finer flowers than usual may be grown.

There are few cut flowers that are more satisfactory for use in the house than the "glad." That is certainly a fortunate nickname that this flower has been given by its closer friends. A "glad" cut just as it starts blooming, will last in water oftentimes more than a week. The only thing necessary to be done is the cutting off of a bit of the stem each day and the removal of the dead flowers as they fade.

The "glad" has another use to which it is seldom put, except by real gladiolus lovers. This use is in the flower garden proper. So many times the poor fellow has to live out in the vegetable garden with the beans and corn, when he rightly belongs with his real friends the flowers.

This is done because of the fact that the "glads" are so often used exclusively for cut flowers.

The gladiolus may be used most effectively in the shrubbery border, in the perennial border, or even in more formal landscape effects. The use of this bulb under the three situations named above, is much more effective if they are planted in groups of 20 to 30 bulbs in each planting. The foliage itself is very attractive, both before the flowers have appeared and for some time afterward. These uses are becoming even more popular with the recent introduction of several "cut-and-come-again" varieties. There is one method of getting a succession of bloom where the bulbs are planted in these beds permanently. This is by the regulation of the blooming time from the depth of the planting. Some are planted at two inches, some at four, and some at six inches. This will allow a certain amount of variation in the blooming time.

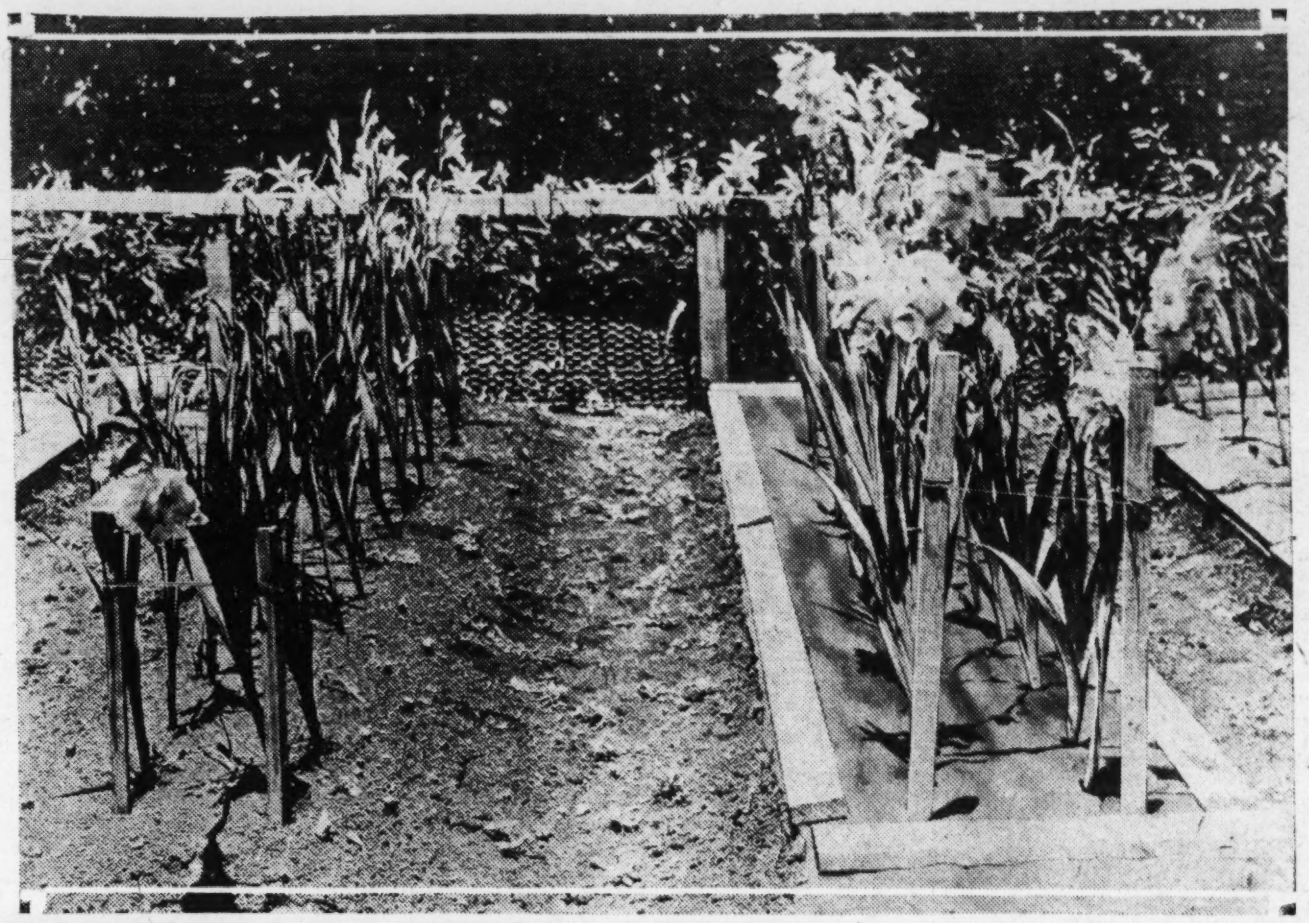

The method usually followed to gain a succession of bloom is by planting at intervals of one or two weeks. This is the best method and by planting every two weeks from the middle of April until the middle of July, the blooms will be in the garden from the early part of June until frost.

PREPARATION OF THE SOIL.

The preparation of the soil is not of paramount importance, but the better they are planted, the better they will bloom, the finer the colors will be. Any good, rich, garden soil will be fine for these flowers and the addition of well-rotted stable manure or sheep manure at the time of planting will help. After the plants have made their apeparance, a small quantity of high-grade commercial fertilizer, worked around them will help towards making fine flowers. This fertilization, after the plants are well set on the stalks. An application of liquid manure or nitrate of soda will be advantageous just as the flowers are about to open. This is always done in the case of flowers for show purposes.

For best results, the bulbs should be planted at a depth of four or five inches, unless the soil is very heavy. When the bulbs are planted deeply there is little danger of their blowing over during our summer winds. This often happens to those not planted deeply enough.

We are illustrating the use of a comparatively new process of cultivation. Or, to make a truer statement, illustrating a new lack of cultivation. The gladiolus on the left are grown in the usual manner, while those on the right or grown with the assistance of mulch paper.

(Two different methods of cultivation illustrated)
The Beautiful Summer Flowering Gladiolus.

The effectiveness of the use of this mulch paper is apparent in the earlier, larger blooms, without any of the labor of cultivation.

In the past there have been noted several distinct advantages in the use of this paper.

First: Practically all of the labor of weeding is eliminated.

Second: The paper protects the tilth of the soil and practically all of the work of cultivation is eliminated.

Third: The temperature of the soil is increased and consequently plant growth is more vigorous.

Fourth: The soil remains moist during periods that under ordinary conditions would amount to a drought.

Fifth: The yield is greater.

These results have been borne out in amateur trials as well as in government trials. The United States government has been conducting trials with mulch paper on various flower and garden plants since 1924, and they are recommending its use in practically every instance.

Mr. Charles F. Eckhart, conceived the idea of using some durable paper that had been impregnated with asphalt as a substitute for the old-fashioned mulch used in the pineapple fields in Hawaii some 15 years ago. This was tried with the hope that the weeds would be stifled. A pleasant surprise was in store for Mr. Eckhart. It wasn't long before he found that the newspaper showed very clearly that it could handle the weeds satisfactorily, but the amazing part was that the yield of pineapples was increased in his trial plot above that of the fields proper. The news quickly spread over the island and it is estimated now that about 90 per cent of the pineapple fields are using mulch paper.

Gladiolus is only one of a number of different flowers and vegetables that have been grown more satisfactorily under mulch paper. Dahlias are particularly adaptable to this method of planting, and to any one that sighs and frouns at the thoughts of weeding and cultivation, the use of mulch paper is quite a boon.

Practically all of the colors may be procured in the "glad" family, from the almost white to the very deep "blues."

The pinks are the favorites and some of the better and more satisfactory pinks are: America, lavender pink; Mrs. Frank Pendleton, rose pink with rich carmine blotches on lower petals; Halley, salmon pink; Marshall Foch; ruffled salmon pink; and one of the newer pinks—Mrs. Dr. Norton—delicate light pink shadings.

The reds include Mrs. Francis King, a brilliant vermillion; War, a deep blood red. Joe Coleman and Scarlet Wonder are both fine for massing, particularly.

The yellows brag about Schwaben, a canary yellow; Niagara, a primrose yellow; Golden Measure a fine golden yellow.

Orange Glory and J. A. Carbone are two fine orange colored "glads." The blues boast of Baron J. Hulot and Muriel and Louise, as their leading lights.

Kunderd has helped to popularize the ruffled gladiolus and a great many people are constantly asking for a list of the more satisfactory ruffled "glads." Some of the more popular and better known ruffled "glads" are: Anthony B. Kunderd, Sulphur Frills, Rose Glory, E. J. Shaylor, Fern Kyle, Purple Glory, Orange Glory, Joe Coleman, Marie Kunderd, Marshall Foch, Mona Lisa and Mrs. John R. Walsh. All of these varieties may be depended upon to give more than satisfactory results and every one is a real beauty. Of the varieties named, be sure and plant lots of Anthony B. Kunderd. It is truly a beauty, creamy blush in color and very heavily frilled and ruffled.

Of the so-called "cut-and-come-again" varieties, the most satisfactory is Los Angeles. Los Angeles is rich cream pink in color. It produces several side spikes and for this reason is usually called "cut-and-come-again." The lower petals are heavily flashed deep crimson. This is a fine variety to use in connection with the shrubbery border, the flower garden proper, or in the perennial bed.

Plant a lot of gladiolus, for we may all expect good results with a minimum of worry and work for a maximum amount of beauty. Plant enough of them so they will not all be used as cut flowers for the house.

WHAT TO PLANT IN MAY

VEGETABLE SEED: Practically all of the vegetable seeds may be planted this month, including such heat-loving ones as okra, squash, cucumbers, New Zealand spinach, watermelons and cantaloupes.

FLOWER SEEDS: All of the tender annual flowers may be planted out of doors: Zinnias, marigolds, petunias, phlox, ageratum, sweet alyssum, scabiosa, nasturtium and calendula.

BULBS AND ROOTS: Gladiolus, tuberoses, cannas, caladiums, fancy leaved caladiums, dahlias and all of the other summer flowering bulbs may be planted now.

LAWNS: Fertilize and repair bare spots. Sow Bermuda grass seed now.

PORCH BOXES: Enthusiasm runs riot this month over porch and window boxes as well as outdoor beds. Ferns, Wandering Jew, trailing coleus, Rosy Morn Petunias, balcony petunias, lantanas, trailing vinca, geraniums, verbenas, begonias, snapdragons, fuchias, salvias and dracena. All of these and more may be planted now.

FRUIT TREES: This is the proper time of the year to spray fruit trees, especially peaches and apples. These should be sprayed with a mixture of mulsoid sulphur and arsenate of lead.

When Justice Triumphed

however, the girl was probably dead when the frightened killer took this further precaution.

He said he didn't do anything for the next few days. Several times he called on his mother-in-law and they played cards—but his mind was not on the game.

Then, on the following Saturday morning, he was walking past a restaurant when he noticed some empty milk bottles. That gave him an idea, he said, and he took one of the bottles, bought a quart of kerosene, drove back to the scene where the body still lay undiscovered, and made his attempt to destroy the identification of his victim.

All in all, it was a good story, from a defense viewpoint. He had said that his wife had threatened him with the gun. He had made the statement, "I guess I was mad." Then there was also Dorothy's contemptuous remark, "It looks like the same old dump." Somehow, though they had no one's word but that of the killer himself, the public seemed to believe that Dorothy Peacox had said that—it seemed so natural.

Almost immediately public sentiment, which had been so shocked by the killing, began to veer slightly in the young man's favor. It had been a horrible crime, yes, but—well, that young woman should have had more sense. So the public reasoned, if one may use the word "reasoned" in such a connection.

Moreover, there was the pathetic matter of the young man's yearning to see the girl on their anniversary. No doubt he had hoped that the alluring glamour of romance would return on this April night, that the girl's love would be reborn again and flourish stronger than ever. And she had sneered!

Soon after Peacox had told his story, the police took into custody Miss Frances Newman, blonde Manhattan dance hall girl, who had been entertained at the Mount Vernon apartment several times, the last time on April 24, two days after the murder. She admitted Peacox had persuaded her to say, if questioned, that she had been the girl with him on Sunday night.

She said he told her that there had been a party at his place and that one woman got very drunk. He told her that the woman had screamed and carried on and in the end he had to carry her out of the house.

"If anybody says anything about it, say it was you, will you?" he had asked. And she had promised she would. She denied all knowledge of the murder.

In the ensuing days various other young people entered the case—Margaret Lord, a chum of Dorothy's; Gerald Bodine, Miss Lord's boy friend; Beatrice Brown, a telephone girl Peacox had once been engaged to; and Eugene Bussey, a Johns Hopkins student, who was said to have been quite fond of the radio repairman's wife.

COYNE HOLDS THAT THE CRIME WAS PREMEDITATED.

Justice began to move with leaden feet. Peacox was not indicted until May 20. The trial date was set for June 24 but when that day arrived, the trial was set back until September 16. During the summer Sydney A. Syme, the defense counsel, moved for a change of venue, but this was denied and on September 16 the young man went on trial in White Plains before Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins.

District Attorney Coyne, outlining the prosecution's case, stated he would strive for a first degree murder conviction, holding that the crime was premeditated. The defense, of course, declared it would hold that there had ben no forethought, but that Peacox had killed his wife while temporarily insane over her infidelities.

In his attempt to prove premeditation, Coyne put Miss Newman and Mrs. Heinzelman on the stand to testify to certain so-called threats the defendant had made against his wife. Miss Newman quoted Peacox as saying to her, some time in March, when she first heard that he was married, that his wife was "living in New York with a couple of fellows, and if I ever come on them together I'll finish them both."

Mrs. Heinzelman said that on January 19, the day after Dorothy left Earle, he came to the Heinzelman home and demanded his wife's address. When his mother-in-law refused to give it to him, he cried out angrily, "If you don't tell me where she is, I'll find out somewhere else and shoot up the whole place!"

The state closed its case with the reading of the defendant's long confession. Peacox, shorn of the little mustache he wore at the time of his arrest, sat with his head cupped in his hands, an occasional tear dripping down his pale cheeks. Near him was his mother, Mrs. Catherine Peacox, a large woman with a tragic face.

Syme opened for the defense with character witnesses, who testified that the accused young man had always been peaceful, quiet and industrious, followed this with testimony that two relatives had died in insane asylums, and then put Peacox himself on the stand to testify in his own behalf.

Earle wept continually as he told the unhappy story of his marriage. It was a story that has been told many times on witness stands, if not very often in romantic novels. He told it all from the beginning, how they fell in love and eloped, how Dolly's love gradually cooled despite all his efforts, and he came at last to the terrible events on the morning of April 22, 1929.

He testified that as soon as they were inside the apartment, and after she had made that disdainful reference to the place, he had berated her for going with other men. Then she said, according to him:

"Well, I'm getting more than you ever gave me."

"When she said that," he continued, "it flashed through my mind—the recollection of all I had heard and all I knew and all I'd done for Dolly. A panorama of all that flashed through my mind, and everything went black before me. The next thing that happened I was sitting in a chair and there was a dead silence before me and I saw Dolly on the floor up against the piano—and there was a pool of blood under her head.

"I said to myself, 'Good God, what have I done?'"

JURY WEIGHS EVIDENCE FOR SIX HOURS.

Defense medical experts on September 25 stated that in their opinion Peacox had been the victim of an "emotional storm" which had robbed him of his "psychopathic personality." In simpler words, they said he had not been able to distinguish right from wrong.

Three state alienists asserted that he was in their opinion an "average young man."

The jury weighed the evidence for six hours and decided that he was guilty of murder, though not premeditated murder. They therefore returned a verdict of murder in the second degree and Justice Tompkins immediately sentenced Peacox to serve 20 years to life in Sing Sing. It was a victory for the defense, though hardly a great one.

Young Peacox applied for a job as a radio expert in the state prison but this request was denied. He was instead put to work handling a shovel on the prison coal pile. Recently it was learned that he had enrolled in a correspondence course in electrical engineering. Eventually he may become one of the chief electrical workers in the prison.

In the meanwhile he will have plenty of time to develop his self-control.

The Romantic Prince

lord, whither you are to ride with me. Those are my orders. I am to deliver you, together with a letter from the governor, into the hands of the duke's highness."

"You perceive, I trust, that you are being a party to an act of violence which may have grave consequences. I am no subject of the Duke of Burgundy."

"Maybe not. You must argue it with others. I am a soldier, not a lawyer, my lord. I have my orders."

Count Anthony rose. "So be it," he said. "Give me leave to write a letter, and I shall be at your disposal."

But Diesenhofen shook his head. "Your letter must wait, my lord, until I have made safe delivery of you."

Count Anthony frowned. "I am a prisoner, then?"

"You may call it that. Besides, we must set out at once if we are to cross the water before dusk."

Thus abruptly ended Count Anthony's second visit to Flushing. He departed with Diesenhofen and the six lances, his servant going with him, and, while his departure was widely observed, reported, and a source of comment in the town, none supposed him a prisoner, seeing him ride beside the officer unpinioned and sword on thigh.

* * * *

Bruges, which Diesenhofen regarded as their destination, was to prove no more than the first stage of a journey that was to continue for close upon three weeks.

The duke, who had come thither a fortnight earlier and who had held there his first chapter of the Golden Fleece, had departed suddenly that very day to return to Brussels.

When in pursuit of him they reached Brussels on the evening of the morrow, it was only to discover that he had done no more than spend some few hours in the city, and that he was gone to Namur.

The place was full of rumors. It was being said that the King of France was arming for the recapture of the cities of the Somme, and that the Duke was taking order to resist this violation of the Treaty of Conflans.

Followed for Count Anthony days of tedious riding, now south, now east, now west, in the erratic wake of the swiftly moving duke. If the count was wearied by this and fretted by the necessity for submission to the automaton who held him captive, if inwardly he rebelled against the unlawful compulsion of which he was the victim, he realized the futility of remonstrance.

Each night Diesenhofen locked him into an inn bedroom with a guard outside his door and another beneath his window; and each night of the first week Count Anthony wrote a letter to Johanna, which next morning he destroyed. Such was the bewildered inconclusive conflict between his love on the one hand and what consequently, to her, that it was impossible for him to give it an expression at once clear and just.

In the end he wrote no more letters, but spent his nights making sonnets instead, in the Petrarchian manner, sad laments compounded of passion and despair, in the art of which he found some ease from the realities that tormented him.

Finally he abandoned even this vehicle for the relief of his surcharged heart, and before the end of that tedoius journey, in which they crossed and re-crossed their tracks, he had reasoned himself into a condition of sorrowful resignation. He came to regard the intervention of the Governor of Zealand in his affairs as a wise dispensation of Providence, to rescue him and to rescue Johanna from a situation of hopelessness. They belonged, he and she, to different orders, between which any honorable alliance was impossible, while his love for her was too fine to admit even the contemplation of an alliance of any other nature. He had lived, he now told himself, in a dream. Now he was awake again, rudely awakened and being dragged by the heels back to the world and the life to which he really belonged, of which he was a part and in which he had his allotted duties to perform, the life from whose hollowness and apparent unreality he had sought so vainly and futilely to escape. As if a man ever could escape his destiny and the obligations which his place in life imposed upon him at every step from the moment of his birth! To what, he wondered, was he returning? Would they put it upon him that his honor demanded the fulfilment of his betrothal to the Lady Catharine of Bourbon? Ah, not that! He would not so defile the real love which had come to blossom in his heart, even though fate denied fruition to it.

It was an uplifting resolve, and it took some of the burden of sorrow from his soul. The sense of sacrifice, the thought of vowing himself to an ideal, abstract love, exalted him. It was in the true romantic spirit.

His sorrow and his fond yearnings partly allayed by this resolve, he came at last upon the duke at Saint-Quentin. That was on an afternoon in June, two weeks after leaving Flushing and having followed a zigzag course between the pleasant wooded uplands of the east and the dreary flats of the west, which but for the dykes that shut out the sea would have been a morass.

Up through the town to the grim citadel rode Diesenhofen. Arrived there, he left Count Anthony in the guardroom of the barbican, in the care of his men, while himself he went forward to seek audience of the duke. An hour he waited in the spacious antechamber that was variously peopled by courtiers in silk and captains in steel, with here and there the scarlet flame of a prelate's robes, and where the only language heard was French. Booted and dusty as he had ridden in, the Lorrainer attracted some attention. It was assumed his busines must be urgent, indeed, that he should come thus into the presence of his prince. By one or two, indeed, he was questioned. But his short answers that he was from Zealand quenched all interest in him in an hour in which all eyes were turned towards France.

At length the curtained gothic door at the room's end swung open, and, while an usher held aside the arras, forth stepped three men, in the tallest, oldest and most elegant of whom Diesenhofen recognized the count of Saint-Pol, that constable of France, who strove to serve two masters. All eyes were turned upon him, and a sensitive witness must have been instantly aware of the general relief when it was observed that he was calm and smiling.

Diesenhofen was still admiring him, when he was roused by the chamberlain's voice.

Diesenhofen found the duke alone, leaning against the mullion of the tall gothic window which stood open to the sunlight. He was frowning thoughtfully, and it was a long moment before he condescended to become conscious of the soldier's presence.

"So," he said at last, "you are from Zealand with very urgent tidings. I trust they are not evil; at least not more evil than I am growing accustomed to."

"I think your highness will account my tidings far from evil." He bent the knee as he proffered the governor's letter.

Passing from the window to a table on which a map was spread beside some papers, the duke broke the seal and unfolded the parchment. As he read, his gloomy countenance lighted. Over the edge of the sheet his dark eyes glowed upon the Lorrainer. "You have brought his lordship?"

"He waits in the guardroom, highness."

Stolidly Diesenhofen explained that his orders were explicit, that he took no risks, and that, for the rest, he had used the prisoner with all courtesy and consideration.

He was curtly dismissed to fetch Count Anthony, and Count Anthony, once alone with the duke, restraining the embrance with which the duke would have received him, expressed himself freely and with righteous indignation upon this violation of his person and the constraint imposed upon him. At the end of it, he demanded instant liberty to go his ways.

"Liberty you shall have," said Charles, of Burgundy. "But what are your ways?"

"They are my own. I am not your vassal, Charles, and you have sanctioned a monstrous usurpation of right by might where I am concerned."

The haughty, tempestuous, and headstrong duke was patient and meek for once. Affection for his cousin and the perception that this indignation was entirely justified combined now with his own urgent need of every tried friend he could command. So he set himself to use conciliatory arguments, which if none too sound were the best at his disposal.

"There are rights of alliance, Anthony, as well as rights of vassalage."

"They include no right to subject me to duress."

"If you were so clear on that, why did you run away?"

"Run away! I departed your court when I grew weary of it. That was all."

"Without even the courtesy of craving leave of me. Are these the manners of a guest in Guelders?"

"I desired to go in peace. I desired no quarrel with you, Charles."

"On what grounds did you fear a quarrel?"

"On those of my betrothal to the Lady Catharine."

"That ground of quarrel, at least, has been removed. The Lady Catharine is no longer available. She has consoled herself with your brother Adolph."

The duke's grin was not entirely free from malice. He knew that the statement and its obvious implication would give Count Anthony something to think about. The marriage between Bourbon and Egmont had been projected for the consolidation of the political alliance between Guelders and Burgundy. To give full effect to this, the proper party to the contract on the side of Guelders was the heir to the duchy. That advantage should have been taken of Anthony's absence to substitute his younger brother as the bridegroom was hardly a good omen. It seemed to foreshadow the desire for a wider substitution. Count Anthony was taken aback. Indignation kindled in his long, fair face.

"Was this by your contriving, Charles?"

arm of the bench. "I hate him," she hissed. "Hate him!"

"Hush!" said Violet suddenly. "There is some one standing right behind us."

"Be-hind us?" repeated Mrs. Bickitt in a quavering voice.

"Yes." Violet stood up and turned about. "Do you want to see any one?" she asked in French.

"I—I," he began in a whirlpool of confusion, but in English spoken with an American accent.

Violet scrutinized him for a moment. Finally, with a high, queer note in her voice, she said, "Sit down, Mr. Bickitt."

He collapsed into a garden chair.

"You wish to see your wife alone? I will leave you."

He waved a hand in the air. "O, no, please don't go. Not until I apologize. I didn't mean to creep up on you. I—you see—well, I got things at last arranged so that I could come over, so I thought I'd take a little holiday and surprise Emmy here. It was foolish of me, but—well—I thought it would be fun. I ought to have let her know. But I didn't mean to overhear your conversation. Honestly I didn't."

He paused abruptly. "Now, you stop crying, Emmy," he said sternly. "Stop it, d'y'hear! It's perfectly all right." He leaned over and patted her limp hand. "Maybe it's a good thing I did overhear you. It'll save a whole lot of unnecessary talk. I've got your point perfectly, and I don't blame you a bit. I'm no figure of romance and I've had to work so hard I hardly know what to say to a woman, but you made one mistake—I do love you and most of that work was done for you.

"And now that I've cleaned up you're going to share in it just the same. You're going to get paid for those 15 years you put up with me. That's just business. So don't you worry. I've often wished I could be romantic, but I suppose I was made for other purposes. Maybe you thought it queer I didn't come over before? Well, I couldn't leave my busines for one thing, and for another I wasn't going to come until you really wanted me. I made a mistake this time—I thought recently your letters had been a little bit homesick."

Violet drew in her breath with a hissing sound.

"Beat her, Mr. Bickitt," she begged. "Tell her to go to the devil. That's what a modern man would do, and she'd love you for it."

Julius looked at her sadly and mildly. "I wish I could," he said, "but I guess I belong to another generation. I couldn't tell Emmy to go to the devil, no matter what she did. Well——" He took off his glasses, rubbed them, and looked at his wife. His eyes were soft and gropingly nearsighted—"I suppose I'd best be going. I'll go back to the hotel and come up tomorrow and talk things over. And don't you worry, Emmy. It's all right. I understand perfectly."

He stood up. "Goodnight, Miss Speare. You are Miss Speare, aren't you? Emmy's written about you. Good night." He turned on his heel and walked toward the gate.

Mrs. Bickitt raised her head and listened. Julius' departing footsteps were perfectly audible now; they diminished on the gravel path leading to the lane. Mrs. Bickitt raised her head, made an inarticulate sound, and, jumping to her feet, ran as hard as she could into the darkness.

Violet, after an immobile moment, walked slowly toward the house. She was not elated, merely wearied by life and the spectacle it presented, and especially marriage. Julius and Mrs. Bickitt wouldn't be happy. They would patch things up somehow, but they wouldn't be happy. In the drawing room the clock said 10. She could read that note, then, that Morton had left her. But now she had lost all interest in it; almost all curiosity. She went upstairs, took the note out of her bureau drawer and, going to the window, opened the envelope.

"When you read this," the note said, "I will be back here again at the Hotel de la Mediterranee. I wil leave Avignon in time to get her about 9. I will make no attempt to see you, but if you want to see me you will come to the hotel. I will wait until dawn. Think it over."

Violet peered into the darkness for a long second, then she hurried to her closet, but on a light cloak, sped downstairs, through the garden and down the lane toward the hotel.

Mrs. Charlton strolled out on to her terrace after luncheon. It was a warm bright day early in June. In three weeks now she would be going to Brittany. Mrs. Charlton looked down at the town and frowned. Absurd what habit did to you. It annoyed her to find how much she missed that quaint little Bickitt woman and that Speare girl. Unfortunate creatures, to run off—one with a fat, bald, stupid little husband, the other with an unknown young man. And what a nice life they had been leading—all of them.

Well, she supposed she ought really to do something, before she left, for that pitiful Walsh woman. See that she had enough to live on, anyway. She had been meaning to do something for a long while now.

She sighed and rang the bell. A footman appeared.

"Robert," she said, "I will want the motor at 3—and pack up for me six of those jellies I'm so fond of, will you?"

As Mrs. Charlton came through the gate into the unkempt garden, Mrs. Walsh tried to struggle up from the long chair in which she was lying.

"No," said Mrs. Charlton, "don't move. Stay where you are. I'll take his chair. Thank you. It's quite comfortable."

Mrs. Walsh stared at her, the red in her cheeks coming up under the red of her paint. "It—it's very good of you," she murmured in a choked voice.

"No," said Mrs. Charlton graciously. "No, it isn't good; I've been meaning to call for a long time." Suddenly a queer contraction took place somewhere near her heart and her eyes blurred. She saw the truth. "It isn't good," she said berathlessly. "I came because I had to. We're the only American women left in Le Lavandou—we'll have to stick together even if we don't want to."

She had said too much? No, she hadn't said too much. It was very relieving. She was glad that as always she could perceive things so clearly. Also she felt ennobled. She wished that Jean Rogniat, the charming young Frenchman in Paris, her very good friend, who was writing her biography, could have been present. Somehow, she would have to tell him about this little scene; it was historic.

"Pinched for a Notorious Outlaw When I Was a Gay Cat"

various reasons I won't name the town. At any rate the deputy marshals were active.

All for the law, of course. No thought of the dollars.

I entered a Chinese restaurant after washing up at a horse trough, and after enjoying a good meal I paid for it and sauntered out. In my pockets still remained five dollars. Legally I was not a vagrant in California. But the lure of arrest money was strong.

A train was making up in the yards and crawling beneath a passenger coach I planted myself on the trucks. "Come outer that yer bum! croaked a hoarse voice. I craned my neck and saw that a whiskered deputy had me covered with a Colt that looked as big as a Krupp. Out I came.

And I was pinched.

Next morning I tried to explain to the judge. "Your Honor," I told him. "I've done nothing wrong in your town. I was only trying to leave it."

"You won't leave for 30 days," snapped the magistrate. "Next case!" They led me away. That jail wasn't so bad. The prisoners had a "kangaroo court" over which a big man well known in fistic circles presided. I was brought before it and as the prisoners had learned from the "screw" that I was wealthy, I was sentenced to kick in a dollar for the tobacco fund. This I did.

We had no work to perform, and I absorbed much hobo lore. One morning a pasty-faced, well-dressed individual was brought in to serve 90 days. He was one of those rats, lower in the social scale than any hobo. In fact the vagabonds despised him.

"This guy's got $200 in the office," whispered the "screw" through the bars. "Sock it to him. Brought before the court the pasty-faced lad was assessed $10. "I won't pay a nickel," he snarled.

"All right," grinned the big man. "Jail order's is that all clothes must be boiled in order to prevent cooties, shirt rats, or seam squirrels. I sentence you to have your garments boiled. Seize him, you sheriffs!"

A gang pounced on the parasite and despite his struggles stripped him. He was tossed a pair of county overalls and a coarse shirt. And every stitch he owned including hat and shoes were boiled in a big vat. Of course, they were ruined, but his complaints never reached the sheriff's ears.

Hand-Out of Clothes

Tiring of idleness I begged for work and was assigned the job of sweeping the upper tiers of cells where criminals were confined. Only petty offenders remained below. Among the upstairs prisoners was a man who had killed his wife and was under sentence of death. Soon he was to be sent to Folsom or San Quentin for execution

Under the watchful eyes of an armed guard I cleaned out this man's cell. Noted that he was about my size. He chatted with me as I swept and finally I turned to him. "Say, pal," I said. "You won't need any clothes in the 'big house,' and I'm told you've got a coupla trunks. How about staking some of us 'bos?"

"Good idea!" he laughed. "I'll be wearing wings soon. Sure, I'll give away all my rags. Glad to do it." The sheriff was called, and the clothes were distributed. I'll say I got a flash front for the wife slayer had been a bartender. When I was finally released my luck held good for I won $60 from a bunch of orange pickers who were staging a crap game just behind the jail. Funny thing, too—that bartender was never executed. The governor commuted his sentence to life imprisonment, and I think he was pardoned a few years ago. Anyhow, he was a game guy. Never flinched when I made my request.

Wisely I bought a ticket when I left that town. Bought it for the next big burg. There I purchased overalls and a suitcase and stowed my expensive front. Shipping the outfit to Sacramento I grabbed the rods of a box car and "dangled" out. I was going to try my hand at the hop picking, of which I had heard so much.

I found conditions in the hop country about the same as among the vineyards although, naturally, there was less to drink.

Hop-Picking.

Securing a sack I started in to pick hops at seven in the morning. At noon I brought them in to be weighed by the woman who owned the ranch. She handed me a ticket for 75 cents. I handed it back. "Give me the cash please," I said. "I'm on my way."

The woman smiled. "Hop picking's an art," she said. "These people you see with the heavy sacks were up before dawn to pick the hops while the dew was on them."

"I'm willing to work," I laughed back, "but not before dawn." The woman glanced at my tattooed arms. "Ever been a marine fireman?" she queried. I nodded. And right there I landed a job firing a hop drier with wood. And it paid decent wages. I slept among the hops, bathed in the Sacramento river every day and stowed away three hearty meals at the ranch house table. Honestly, I was a bit sorry when the season ended and I drew my pay.

Wearing a good front and with money in my pocket I soon found a job on a San Francisco paper. And I was satisfied. I knew how tramps, gay cats, and migratory laborers "got by" in the pleasant land of California."

population, the university students in their black and scarlet cloaks, the wise old caddies who have been carrying clubs around the course for 50 years and more, the little children who take their mashies to school along with their arithmetics, the housewives who go shopping with a basket in one hand and a midiron in the other, clubmakers, the shopkeepers and the fisherfolk who haul in their nets before sundown so as to have a bit of golf before going home.

The whole town lives for golf. In getting off the train one may look in vain for a porter, but the chances are that a chap will rush up to where the passenger's valises lay and inquire, "Do you want a caddie, sir?"

SECKATARY HAWKINS

THE LOST SHEEP

There was a great crowd of people in front of the court house on Saturday morning. I had a hard time shoving my way through to Judge Granbery's office. Almost everybody in town had heard about the mystery of the red and green mansion, and how Detective Jeckerson had solved it. It was in the paper, a big story about how Jeckerson and I had gone into the mansion—yes, it mentioned my name just the same as though I had played an important part in it, although everybody knows Jeckerson took me along with him just to make it look as though our club could earn that part of the reward that he had promised us boys down in our little old clubhouse on the river bank.

Judge Granbery was already seated at the high desk in the big room next to his office. Jeckerson and several of his men were standing near the desk, talking in low whispers. In the chairs that stood in rows down the room sat a lot of people—but as I looked at them I knew they were strangers in our little town.

The judge gave me a smile as I came in.

"Ah, Hawkins!" he said, in a low voice, motioning for me to come up. Jeckerson has told me what a splendid part you played in this strange business. It is easy to see that you boys down in the clubhouse were of great help to him in discovering certain things that led him to figure out this mystery. It's my pleasure to tell you, Hawkins, that I am very proud of you boys. Once again you have proved yourself worthy of my junior police."

I started to thank him, but he turned suddenly away and spoke to Jeckerson.

"How much longer will we have to wait?"

"I understand the boys are on the way, your honor," replied Jeckerson. "Seems like my good lieutenant, Phillips, didn't have the heart to wake the youngsters. He knew it was their first day of freedom, sir. Can't blame him myself—the little fellows have had a pretty hard row to hoe for the last few years—"

"Have you all the necessary data to go with each boy?" interrupted the judge.

"That will be here in a few minutes, too, judge. One of your junior police has been given that task—"

"Which one?"

Shadow Loomis, sir. He took it upon himself to find out all about the Lucky Thirteen, as these little waifs called themselves. In fact, sir, I think Shadow Loomis deserves a gold medal for what he has done. He's been in the mansion ever since before the holidays—he got himself in so deep that the master wouldn't let him go. Here he is now!"

The door had opened beside the judge's desk, and Shadow Loomis came in.

"Hi! Hawkins!" he exclaimed, and grabbed both my hands and grinned at me. "Gee! It's good to see your fat face again, Seck! Oh, boy! And maybe you think I'm not glad that it's all over! By George, Seck, if I had to stand another week of it—say, remember that night when the old guy chased me to your clubhouse—remember? Aw, you know what night I mean—when old Turk shoved his head through the curtains—"

"You mean the tiger?" I asked.

"Sure! That was the old master's pet. Wouldn't bite a flea—but I didn't know he was tame till yesterday. Happer Nam showed him to me—and just a while ago I went in and told old Turk goodbye—he's a good old tiger—"

"Hey! Hey!" broke in Jeckerson. Will you two please postpone your talks about tigers and other such household pets until you hand us that information, Shadow? Got it all, I hope?"

"Everything!" announced Shadow proudly. "Some of the kids didn't remember—but old Mother Matin and Happer Nam put their heads together, and we got every name and everything you wanted to know. Here's the paper."

Jeckerson started to reach for the paper, but the judge bent over quickly and took it out of Shadow's hand. He opened it swiftly and began to read it, a frown bringing many wrinkles in his forehead. But I turned back to Shadow.

"I'm sure proud of you, Shad!" I whispered. "You sure are my best spy! You proved it!"

"Oh, fiddlesticks!" he exclaimed, in a weary voice. "I only did what I ought. Was no use lettin' those poor kids be cooped up like that. Even if it was only one—I'd have done it for him. I mean Stephen. He's the prince of them all, Seck."

"But your mother and father!" I said, suddenly. "They've been grieving—since you left 'em."

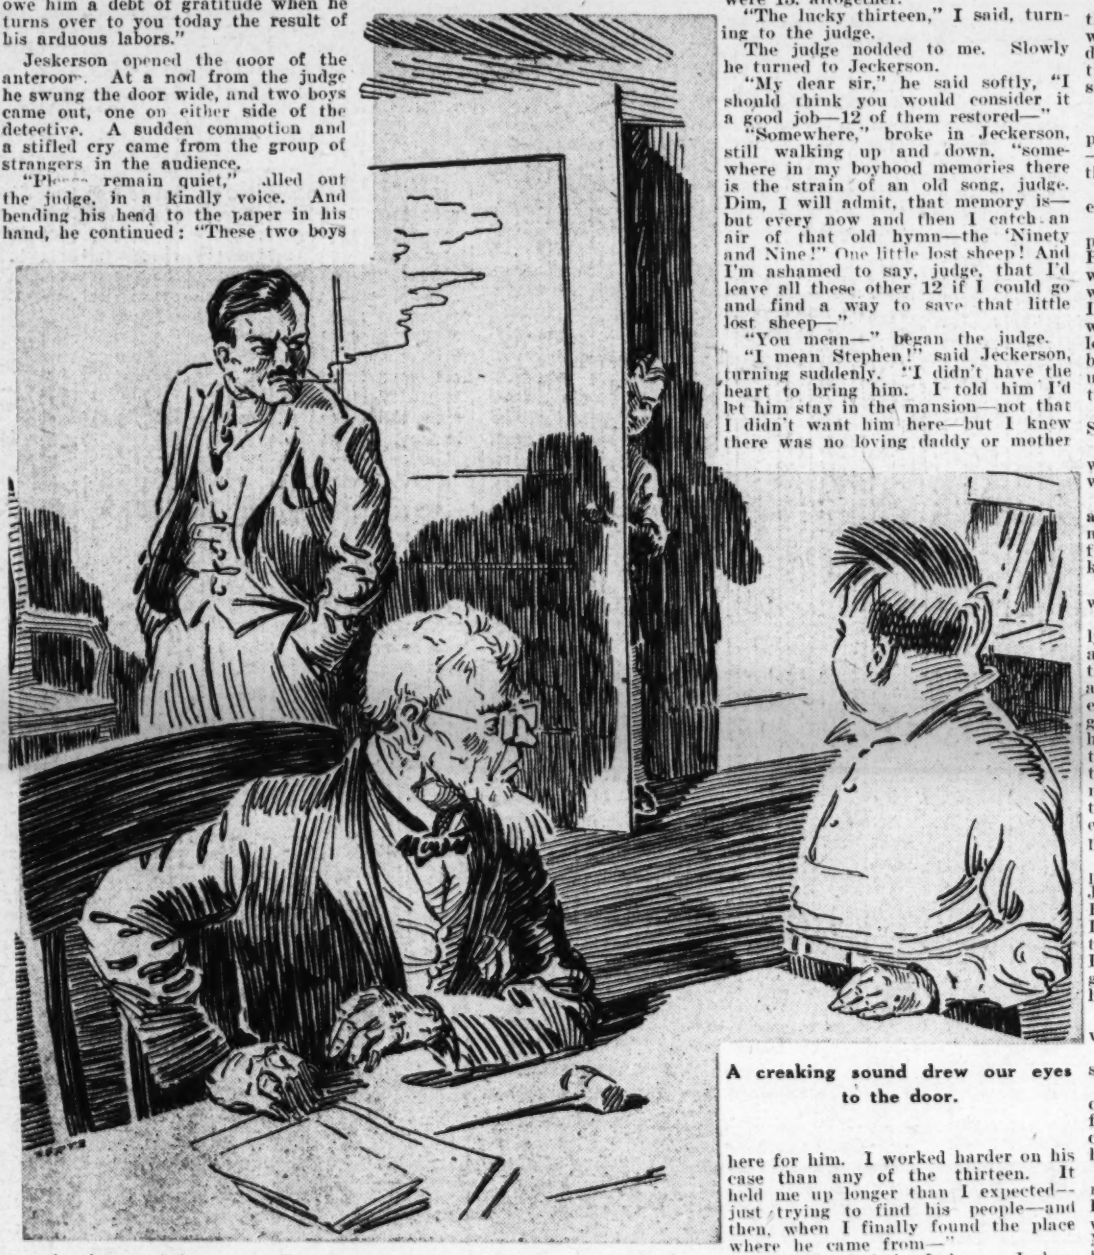

"They'll understand how it feels," said Shadow, nodding, "when they know all that I know."

The courtroom was now filling rapidly with spectators. The judge called for silence and rapped on his desk with his gavel. Jeckerson walked rapidly over to a side door and disappeared within an anteroom.

"This meeting," began the judge in a droning voice, "has been called upon request of Mr. Jeckerson, who has been diligently working for certain persons in this audience, and for many days past it has been a hard job to carry on, because these certain persons were far removed from this town. Some had moved from their original homes and had gone to other cities. Yet Mr. Jeckerson finally located them, and they are here today—I beg your pardon! I see there is one he has failed to find. I did not notice in my first reading—but I am sure you for whom he has worked will owe him a debt of gratitude when he turns over to you today the result of his arduous labors."

Jeskerson opened the door of the anteroom. At a nod from the judge he swung the door wide, and two boys came out, one on either side of the detective. A sudden commotion and a stifled cry came from the group of strangers in the audience.

"Please remain quiet," called out the judge, in a kindly voice. And bending his head to the paper in his hand, he continued: "These two boys are brothers; their names, Timothy and Theodore Dalvey."

A creaking sound drew our eyes to the door.

A man and a woman sprang up and rushed through the crowd, fighting their way toward the boys. Jeckerson saw them coming, and smiling, he waited for the two strangers to approach, and held out to them the hands of the two boys, whose eyes were wide with wonder.

"Timothy!" cried the woman, throwing her arms around the taller one. "Ted!" came from the man, as he gathered the little one in his strong brace. "Oh, my boys, my boys!" cried the mother. "Is it really true? You're not hurt, Timmy, are you, sonny?"

"One moment!" interrupted the judge. "Mr. Jeckerson, does this tally with your sheet of information?"

"Yes, judge," answered Jeckerson softly, with a little smile, "I know every one of them. I suggest we have no more scenes in public. Let us take the mothers and fathers of the other little boys into the waiting room—you won't have to find out which is which—they will know their own!"

The judge nodded.

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, addressing the audience, "we are happy to report that after many years these little homeless boys, who were lured or stolen away from their homes by a man who had the mad idea that he could make an invisible choir, will be restored to their parents through the untiring efforts of Jeckerson and his men—and—I am proud to add—the help of our junior police, the boys who belong to the Fair and Square Club and meet daily on the river bank. Therefore, I am going to ask those who expect to claim any of these boys, will they kindly follow Mr. Jeckerson into the room at my left. The other will please go quietly out of the building."

I never will forget that scene—when those mothers and fathers found back their boys in that side room. Jeckerson had everything arranged, papers signed, proofs given, and all of that sort of thing that is necessary. Shadow Loomis was the hero of the bunch. How they all ran up to him for one last farewell! Oh, boy, I felt envious of him, although I felt mighty proud of him, too. He had done more for our club than I could have done. Here was one time when I had to take a back seat in a mystery solution. Shadow had done it all, the way I looked at it. And he had held up our old Fair and Square motto in one great big good-hearted idea—"do unto others as ye would have them do unto you." His daddy and mother were there, too—Shadow's parents seemed just as overjoyed to get him back as were those poor souls who had missed their boys for years—while Shadow had only been gone for a few weeks. I knew, as I watched Shadow's daddy gazing at his boy, that he was mighty proud of Shadow.

So was I! And there's no maybe about that.

* * * *

Now the place was cleared—all the boys and their parents had gone. Some to the hotel to wait a day or two with other plans in mind, some to the railroad station to catch the first train home. Back in the emptied courtroom we went, Judge Granbery, Jeckerson and I.

"Well, Jeckerson," said the judge, with a smile at the detective, "you have done a noble work. You are entitled to the reward it brought you. Never in my life have I been impressed with a scene such as that. What a happy lot of people we have sent away from this courthouse today!"

"Yes," said Jeckerson, with a worried look. "I wish I could have done better, somehow."

"Better," repeated the judge, questioningly. "How could you have done it better, sir?"

"We sent 12 boys away with their parents in happy frame of mind," said Jeckerson, still moody, shoving his hands into his pockets and turning to walk up and down beside the judge's desk. "But, you know, there were 13, altogether."

"The lucky thirteen," I said, turning to the judge.

The judge nodded to me. Slowly he turned to Jeckerson.

"My dear sir," he said softly, "I should think you would consider it a good job—12 of them restored—"

"Somewhere," broke in Jeckerson, still walking up and down, "somewhere in my boyhood memories there is the strain of an old song, judge. Dim, I will admit, that memory is—but every now and then I catch an air of that old hymn—the 'Ninety and Nine!' One little lost sheep! And I'm ashamed to say, judge, that I'd leave all these other 12 if I could go and find a way to save that little lost sheep—"

"You mean—" began the judge.

"I mean Stephen!" said Jeckerson, turning suddenly. "I didn't have the heart to bring him. I told him I'd let him stay in the mansion—not that I didn't want him here—but I knew there was no loving daddy or mother here for him. I worked harder on his case than any of the thirteen. It held me up longer than I expected—just trying to find his people—and then, when I finally found the place where he came from—"

"Well?" asked the Judge, as Jeckerson paused.

"They were gone, Judge. His mother and father are dead!"

Poor Stephen! In the hush that followed, I glanced from Jeckerson's face to that of Judge Granbery. And both men had bowed their heads, and upon their faces I read the feelings that passed through their hearts.

"You left him in the mansion?" said the Judge, softly, after a while. "Is he alone, then?"

"No," said Jeckerson, with a shake of the head. "He has his grandfather—a poor old fellow who has been ill-used by the villain of the mansion. Laid low, too. And an oldish man—well, perhaps Stephen will get along. He knows no other than his grandfather—I suppose he will be content with the old man—I told Mother Matin to stay with the boy till I called for him. She loves the kid as if he were her own, although she is an old, wrinkled crone herself, much like a witch she seemed to me. But she is good to the boy. Stephen loves her. In fact, there is none that he doesn't seem to care for—even his enemies he defends as stoutly as he does his friends. I asked him once why he did so. And he said it was because he remembered the good things they had done for him, and forgot the bad things."

"A strange child!" buttered the Judge, in a low voice, as if to himself.

And then there was a silence, which none of us seemed anxious to break. It was the Judge who broke it, finally, saying:

"Well, Jeckerson, it is not so bad. Stephen still has his grandfather. It is not as though he were entirely alone, you know."

"I know, I know," said Jeckerson, but there was a tone of sadness in his voice. "But the kid has got me, Judge—I never met one like him—never one that I felt as sorry for. And all the time I'm thinking of that old hymn I used to sing, when I was a boy like him. One little lost sheep!"

A creaking sound drew our eyes to the door. It was slowly moving inward. Steadily we watched as the door came around, and then, with a timid slow movement, a face was shoved around the edge of the door.

"Stephen!" I exclaimed.

It was he. Poor little fellow! How pale he looked, now—all but his eyes—they were red around the edges, as though he had been crying—

"Come in, Stephen!" sang out Jeckerson.

With the same slow movement Stephen let go of the door and came in. Behind him came the little old woman, whom we called Mother Matin, and who had seemed to me, the first time I saw her in the mansion, like an old witch. But now there was no witch look about her—no, no! She, too, had been weeping, and she followed closely upon Stephen's steps as he moved into the spacious courtroom.

"Where—where are they?" asked Stephen, in a weak, faltering voice.

Jeckerson knew whom he meant. It was his beloved Lucky Thirteen boys, whom he inquired for now.

"They are gone," said Jeckerson, in a low voice. "Back home, Stephen, my dear boy. Each one to his own fireside—and I'm sure you're glad to know it."

Stephen nodded his head. There were tears in his eyes now.

"Yes, I suppose so," he said, weakly. "I should be terrible happy about that, but—somehow I'm goin' to miss 'em now." He turned slowly, and let his gaze wander around the empty chairs in the courtroom. "All gone!" he said, softly, as though to himself. "None left for me! All of the Lucky Thirteen—they found their mothers, their daddies—and none left for me!" He continued to stare at the empty chairs. And each of us stared at him! How I pitied him!

"Well, Stephen, God works His plans in mysterious ways!" said Judge Granbery. "You, for instance. He has left you your grandfather. Don't you see how it goes? A little balance here, a little there. And I doubt if any of those boys have a grandfather such as yours. How is he?"

The Judge intended his soft-spoken words to be kind, no doubt of that.

"My grandpa," said Stephen, in a shaking voice, "he is dead, sir!"

Jeckerson sprang to catch him, and closed his wiry arms about the little fellow as he fell. A sudden wailing came from old Mother Matin, as she hobbled hurriedly over.

"Oh, kind sirs, don't ask him any more questions, please, kind sirs!" Her voice was high-pitched, her eyes wild. "Give him to me, sirs—let old Mother Matin have him now, sirs, for he has no one in this big wide and cruel world to love him, sirs, but poor old Mother Matin—"

"Just a moment, Mother Matin!" rapped out the Judge. "Is this true—about his grandfather?"

"Yes, your honor, sir, the poor old man—he died this morning, sir—and only Stephen and I to watch his spirit take flight, sir—the poor little boy, he has nobody to look after him now, but me—poor old Mother Matin—let me take him, sir, and put him to bed!"

The judge got down from his high seat at his desk. He walked slowly and stooped over the fainting form of Stephen, as he lay in Jeckerson's arms. He laid his hand gently upon the fair brow and gently smoothed back the golden hair. Never had I seen such a look of pity on Judge Granbery's face as I saw in his eyes now, as he smiled sadly down upon the unconscious body. He turned to Mother Matin, and took her hand.

"Take him back," he said, speaking rapidly; "Take him back and be good to him, Mother Matin. We shall be at the mansion shortly, and we will take care of everything."

Judge Granbery stepped swiftly to the door and called in several of Jeckerson's men. They carried the boy out, with gentle hands, to a waiting car that would take him back to the comforts of the mansion.

"Poor little lost sheep!" he said, as if to himself. "One fine little chap, Hawkins, you and I—we're going to stick to that kid—"

Which we did.

Our Weekly Meeting

Well, here we are again in the midst of spring, and one of the surest signs to remind us of the fact is Circus Day. If there is one day that stands in a class by itself, this is it. There is always the big parade in the morning, the clowns and the elephants and the wild animals, the horseback acrobats and all that, and then at the end the screaming, booming big calliope.

And later in the day, when you are seated under the big white tent, there are those breath-taking, thrilling moments during the performance when the daring acrobats swing high up in the air between the trapeze swings, and everyone watches to see whether or not he will miss it—oh, boy! But to me the best thing in the whole show is the bunch of elephants—I like those big pets; they are so clumsy and kind-looking, you'd never think they'd ever get a notion to kill anybody, and the way they eat peanuts from your hand is a caution.

The title of our contest this week is going to be "CIRCUS DAY." And I know you will enjoy writing about the day the circus comes to your town. It will be fun to write about it, too, or draw pictures of the animals or the clowns, or any interesting circus people, because I don't believe there is a boy or girl in the world who doesn't like a circus. So get busy. Remember, send in your contest work as early as possible this week—don't delay it any longer than you must. And if you are not yet a member, be sure to fill out the membership blank and send it in with your contest work, and you will get a button and a membership card.

We will now open our meeting by introducing some new members. Any member of the club is eligible to try his or her hand at letter writing, and all the letters that are printed in "Our Weekly Meeting" will win for their writers a book of the club's earlier adventures down on the river bank. To win a book, the letter must be introduced with some comment.

Well, here's the first one, from a Buckeye member who already has been lucky enough to win one book, and tells about it in verse:

Dear Seck:
How often did I wish that I
Could win a book from you,
And now I'm writing this to say
That my dream has come true.

Can you imagine my surprise,
Or do you know my joy,
When I received one morning
A book called "Stoner's Boy!"

And, Seck, I've read it o'er and o'er
Enjoyed it every time;
That's the reason that I'm writing
This little bit of rhyme.

I wish to thank you for the book;
My badge I'll always wear.
And I remain as ever, Seck,
Your member, fair and square.

A CIRCUS DAY PASSWORD.

Last week our password described the idol of Mother's Day, "Your Best Friend." Everybody agrees that's Mother. And it was good to see how quickly every member knew that password, but I'm not surprised at all.

This week I'm going to give you a harder one than that. It is in keeping with Circus Day, of course. And here is the story: Dad came home that day, and little Beth jumped up on his knee and told him all about the circus parade she had seen that day. Dad didn't say anything until after the evening meal was over and Beth had become so interested in doing her lessons and home task that she looked up surprised when Dad said: "Wish go, Beth?" Now, Dad was in the habit of cutting his sentences as short as possible, which accounts for the strange way he put his question:

WISHGOBETH

But that was the password, you see. Because Beth took her pencil and paper and began to change the letters of his question around until she had three little words that told her where her daddy was going to take her. You know where. But what's the password?

Next we introduce an interesting boy member in Georgia who tells about the last day of school:

Dear Secketary Hawkins:

This is my third time writing you, and I have never won a book; but I believe in the motto "Try, try again." I have never read one of your books, but I hope this letter will win one.

I live in the country and go to school only seven months in a year. Our school was out today, and I was promoted to the fifth grade. Our teacher served us with hot chocolate and crackers. She sure was good today. But I reckon all teachers want to be kindly on the last day of school. Some of the girls cried, but I didn't. I'm a boy and a boy don't cry over things like that. Hoping to win a book.

Yours, fair and square,
JAMES EDWARD BLECKLEY,
Raburn Gap, Ga.

Another good verse, this time from one of our enthusiastic members in the Hawkeye State:

Dear Seck: Here is another letter
I'm writing again to you.
I've read some of your interesting books,
With them you won't get blue.
I tune in on our radio
Every Saturday night,
And always enjoy your meetings—
They surely are all right.
I always solve the passwords,
And enter your contests, too.
"Fair and Square" is a great motto
And your colors, white and blue.
Are the nicest any club could have.
So I'll say our club is just fine.
I guess I'll stop now, but will some day
Drop you another line.
And now, Seck, I'll say good-bye
To your members and to you.
Now all you members write to me,
I'll answer your letters, so please do.

Yours, fair and square,
HENRIETTA MOERSHEL, 14,
Box "B," Homestead, Iowa.

And we take pleasure next in presenting a communication from a new member in Pennsylvania:

Dear Secketary Hawkins:
I would like to join your club, but I cannot find a membership blank. I listen to your radio programs and stories, and I enjoy them very much. I think that the mystery of the Purple Light is very thrilling and very interesting. I like that idea of the fair and square slogan, and I will try to keep up to it.

I hope I may become a member of your great and widely known club. Here's hoping I will win a book as full of thrills as that of the Purple Light, as did many other children.

Well, good-bye, Secketary.
Your friend and fellow-member,
CHARLES DELOZIER,
418 Spruce Ave., Altoona, Pa.

Here we introduce a member in Old Kentucky who did not win a book the first time, but held to the old saying, "A quitter never wins, and a winner never quits:

Dear Seck:
I have written once before,
But did not get a book;
So won't you give this letter
Just one more little look?

I like your club and motto;
I like your adventures, too;
And I am going to get a book
No matter what I do.

I wish that I could watch you
Have a meeting just one day,
And see Jerry Moore have to pay a fine
For talking out that way.

I'll be glad when spring decides
To come in with all her might,
And the days are clear and sunny
And the nights are very bright.

Yours, fair and square,
ELOISE MAYHUGH, 11,
Walton, Ky.

HOW TO JOIN THE CLUB.

Every boy and girl who reads Seckatary Hawkins is invited to become a member of his famous club. It is a very big club and already has members in every state in the union, as well as Canada, and many foreign countries.

Fill out the membership blank at the bottom of this page. Write plainly. If you want a club badge be sure to enclose a two-cent stamp with your membership blank, and it will be mailed to you within a few days. No matter where you live, you can be a member of the Seckatary Hawkins Club. No matter how old you are—just fill out the membership blank and join.

Here's a snappy little letter from one of our jolly new members in the jolly state of Alabama:

Dear Seck:

Just because I am a new member of the club, I am not going to tell you a lot of baloney about my lovely blue eyes, my shimmering locks of gold, and my pearly teeth (which I have not), because I know you don't care a rap about that. Instead, I want to tell you how much I enjoy the club. I think it is just the jolliest, best club a person could belong to, and I fairly love your books and stories. And because I do so like your club, I am sending you my membership blank and hope you will write my name in your roster.

Fairly and squarely,
SUSANNE SLOANE, 14,
412 Yancey Ave., Montgomery, Ala.

This brings our today's meeting to a close, and we part until next week. Be sure to send in your contest work early. And if your letter has not been published yet, don't get discouraged, but try again. Maybe the next letter you write will win a book for you. Who knows? And don't forget to tune in to our radio meeting Saturday evening at 5 o'clock, eastern standard time, from station WLW. You'll enjoy it, and maybe you'll hear your name. Who knows?

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

A NEW CONTEST EACH WEEK

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY.

In this week's contest the title must contain the words "CIRCUS DAY." You may write letter, story or verse. Write on one side of paper only. Your composition must be written without any assistance from older persons. All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. The contest will close Thursday. Dear Seck:

Will you let a little girl, 11 years old, join your happy boys and girls. My birthday is June 13th.

My favorite study is history.

Gee, but school will soon be out, and I sure can have a good time. I like your club motto. Have I a twin. If so write and all answers will be received.

Yours fair and square,
EVILYN LYONS,
Palmetto, Ga.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I am very proud of your pin and I like to wear it.

I like your stories fine.

My age is 14. I have long, black curly hair and blue eyes.

I lived in Fair Bluff, N. C., when I wrote you for my pin but we have moved to Marion, S. C.

Yours fair and square,
MARGARET MURRAY,
Marion, S. C., R. 2, Box 69

Dear Seck:

I received my membership card and pin and I am sure very proud of them. I am very interested in your club and read about it in the daily and Sunday papers. Gee, Seck, but it's fun to belong to your club. I feel as if I know all of you boys as well as all the other boys and girls who have written to the page. I wish I could come to the meetings, but as I can't, I keep up with all the movements of the club in the paper.

Well, for pets I have a squirrel and a cat. Well, Seck, the old rooster is crowing for his feed, so I must close.

Yours, fair and square,
MARVIN AYERS,
Winston, Ga., R. No. 2.

Dear Seck:

Guess there's room for one more to join your club. I read your stories every day and sure do enjoy them. I sure am glad Link has found his mother.

Guess I had better describe myself. I am a little girl 14 years old and in the sixth grade at school. I am a brunette five feet tall.

Yours, fair and square,
GRACE RENTFROW,
Jonesboro, Ga., R. 1.

Hello, Seck:

Wonder what you are doing now. Out hunting another mystery to solve, I guess.

Well, Seck, I wonder what they are going to do with that Bluebeard of the forest. They need to put him in the pen for frightening you that New Year's night.

Well, as I have never described myself to you, I will now. I am 12 years old and am in the sixth grade. I am 56 inches tall, light hair, fair complexion and blue eyes.

I guess I had better close as I am taking up too much room.

Yours, fair and square,
CARROLL STEPHENS,
Lumberton, N. C., R. F. D. 4.

Dear Seck:

From Georgia writes another gal.
All she can say is that her name isn't Sal.
She dearly likes to read
And for books she pleads.
How is the news on the old river bank!
Don't let the Phelams play any pranks.
How is Skinny Guy and his mother!
I hope they'll be happy because
Uncle Rafael will be no more bother.
So goodbye, Seck, I'll read about you tomorrow.

MARY ELLEN NELSON,
Cartersville, Ga., Rt. No. 1.

Dear Seckatary:

My friend went to Washington—and, h, how I wish I could go there!

I am in the fifth grade and have made the honor roll three times.

I like to keep up with your stories of the mysteries of the red and green mansion and the low stone house. I hope that you and Jeckerson will save Stephen and get Shadow Loomis back.

I am going to join your club pretty soon and will write to you. Hope you good luck. Goodbye.

Your friend,
DANIEL M'CORMICK,
Clio, S. C.

Maytime.

I.
Maytime, Maytime,
Best of all the year;
Brigs happy playtime
For many children dear.

II.
Maytime, Maytime,
Brings violets so blue;
Roses and tulips
And happy children, too.

III.
Maytime, gaytime,
When we are out of school;
Then we can go a-fishing
And swimming in the pool.

EUNICE NEWBY,
Shawmut, Ala. (13).

Dear Seck:

I have just finished reading about your adventures on the old river bank.

I am 12 years old and five feet two inches tall. I am in the eighth grade at school. I have missed only one day in school in four years.

Yours, fair and square,
CATHERINE HEGE,
Palmer, Tenn.

Dear Seck:

I sure do enjoy reading your stories in the daily and Sunday papers. I sure was glad you and Link didn't get drowned.

I have been a member of your club a good while now.

This is the fourth time I have written you. I am in the fifth grade and ten years old. I am in the schoolhouse now.

Yours, fair and square,
SIDNEY MATHEWS,
Carlton, Ga.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

Hello, Fatty!

I have written many times, but so far I have not been successful

My age is eight years and I am in the second grade.

I hope you have a good time in Cuba. Tell all of the boys in Cuba to write me. And Seckatary Hawkins, you write me, too. I will answer their letters.

You are a good seckatary for your club.

Yours, fair and square,
WILLIAM R. HANSEND,
Monroe, Ga.

Dear Seck:

How are you feeling? I am feeling fine. May 29 is my birthday.

How are you getting along in school? I am getting along fine. I am nine years old and in the third grade. I like my teacher fine. She lives about five miles from Holly Hill.

I will be glad when I get 12 years old, so I can join the Boy Scouts.

I am not much on poems, but I am going to try one:

Dear little Violet,
Don't be afraid!
Lift your blue eyes
From the rock's mossy shade!
All the birds call for you
Out of the sky;
May is here, too, am I.

Your friend,
DICK KIZER, JR.,
Holly Hill, S. C.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I enjoyed reading your story. It was a nice story. I am a boy 13 years old. I am five feet four inches tall and I have one pet, and it is a dog. It's a Belgian shepherd and he loves to play with me very much. He will do most anything I say. I hope some of the girls and boys will write to me. I will answer all the letters.

Yours very truly, fair and square,
WILBUR EARL RIKARD,
Batesburg, S. C.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I have just finished your adventures and the letters and decided to write. I like boys' stories as well, if not better than girls' stories.

Your motto, "Fair and Square," means much to me—and you colors, "blue and white," appeal to me very much, too.

I am 14 years old and would like for some of your members to write, and I will be ready to answer any letter that is in my mail box.

Yours, fair and square,
MARY LOUISE RANDOLPH,
Gillsville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Spring is here at last! I sure like to hear the birds sing and see them build their nests. The pear and peach trees are blooming in our backyard and they are so pretty. A friend of mine and I went on top of a mountain and gathered spring flowers.

Yours, fair and square,
KATHERINE DEATHERLY,
York House, Mountain City, Ga.

Astonishing Electrical Invention

Protects Your Car from Thieves

...Automatically!

This unquestionably is the queerest, most incredible invention since the first discoveries of radio. A magical, shouting, automatic watchman that actually is far more than human! Never sleeps, rests or gets tired! Stands guard over your entire car from spare tire to headlights and steering wheel! Endorsed by police! Approved by insurance companies and motor associations! This invention makes possible the most startling, uncanny 3-minute demonstrations ever brought to direct selling. Now offered on generous 5-day test basis! This coupon brings full details.

AGENTS WANTED WITH CARS - Can Make Up to $5-$6 in an Hour

"What makes it work?" "Where on earth did you get it?" "Bet you five dollars he's got some one hiding in there!" "It simply can't be true." Flaming fire comment like this breaks out whenever and wherever this new invention is exhibited. And why not? When no one ever heard of such startling, uncanny device before! In fact, few people would even dare to dream there could be such a thing! So this, men, is something really NEW, something to grip the imagination of every one, something that sells to every autoist on sheer novelty alone. Distributors, "star salesmen;" every man who wants to double and triple his present income should note carefully the following facts:

The Secret of a Theft-Proof Car

Now in this amazing new way, every car can be protected from theft for 24 full hours a day. In the garage or parked on the street, if any thief so much as pulls at your spare tire or touches his foot to your running board—ZOWIE! A riot of noise starts instantly! And your car never shuts up till the thief leaves. And listen to this. Even if the thief is wise to what's up, you alone place the secret control button anywhere you want it around the car. The thief can't possibly find it. If he wastes time looking for it—Bingo! He's caught and on his way to jail! This astonishing invention guards your spare tire, headlights and spotlights as well as the car itself.

Installed in 10 Minutes-Costs Nothing to Operate

The inventor has asked the U. S. government to protect his patent rights in this revolutionary discovery. Because of its uncanny powers and to distinguish it from everything else on earth, this queer invention is now called "Devil Dog." Among its amazing features is the fact that it can be installed by anyone in ten minutes or less. There is absolutely no cost for operation. No extra batteries to buy. It will last as long as the car. Fits any car from Ford to Rolls Royce without adjustment or fussing. For introductory purposes a special 5-day test-offer is now being made. If you are interested in learning about the most astonishing invention since the radio first came in, use the coupon at once. If your present income is less than $50 a week, the profit possibilities as our agent may astonish you. The coupon brings details of exclusive territory and all offers. Mail it now.

A Mere Handfull

Note the tiny size of this amazing invention in the above picture. The switch wire and sealed tube containing the "activator" is all there is to it. The entire cost is scarcely more than an ordinary radio tube! Test it. Mail the coupon today.

What a Safety Director Says

"I am giving you a list separately of some of our people who want you to send them one of your inventions. We all need the best protection we can get against automobile thieves. I, myself, am in a position to know that not only are thousands of cars stolen every year, but spare tires and other accessories are taken in almost unbelievable numbers. For that reason the news of your electrical invention interested me very much.

"I sent over and got one and put it on my car. I expected to have to fuss around with it, but it only took me a couple of minutes to fasten it. It's really one of the most astonishing devices that I have ever seen.

"I tested it for a minute, then thought I would have a little fun. I asked one of the members to come over and try to take my tire cover off. You should have seen his face when the car barked at him like it was alive. By that time we had a little crowd around and everyone was trying to guess how it worked. Everyone asked questions and as I didn't have your address handy at the time I just took their names and am sending them to you now.

"Your invention that I think you call Devil Dog, has considerable merit and certainly is the first and only invention of its kind that has ever appeared. I wish you all success in your venture."

This Frederics Vita Tonic Wrapper holds the secret of the gorgeous Vita Tonic Permanent Wave — the wave that is enthusiastically praised by Hollywood's Lovely Screen Stars

BARBARA KENT

Universal Pictures Star says:

"Insist on a Genuine Vita-Tonic Wave"

"EVERYONE wants to know how I keep the soft, natural, lovely wave in my hair" says Barbara Kent, "Really, you can have the same wide, lustrous, gorgeous wave if you insist, as I do, on a Genuine Frederics Vita Tonic Wave."

To be sure, however, that you are getting a Genuine Frederics Vita Tonic Wave, ask to see the name "Frederics Vita Tonic" on each wrapper used on every wound tress of hair. Let us send you our interesting booklet, which tells how to take care of your wave, together with one of Frederics Vita Tonic wrappers. Take it with you when going for your permanent. See that no harmful imitations are used.

WALK-OVER HOSIERY AND MAIN SPRING ARCH SHOES

TO WHAT LENGTHS WILL THEY GO!—This maiden, of Paris, is wearing the very latest idea in women's wear. Cut full and long, the trousers give all the appearance of being skirts, except that they are supposed to give greater freedom of action for strolls.

AFTER ALL THE LOT OF SOME ORPHANS IS NOT SO HARD—Tiny, property of Carl Stovall, misses his mother not a whit as he contentedly "takes to the bottle." (Bill Mason)

SIGNS OF SPRING—More than 250,000 people participated in the informal style parade on Atlantic City's famous boardwalk Easter Sunday. Stylists varied between black and bright colors. (Associated Press)

SPRY AT 103—John L. Skinner, of Fairmount, W. Va., is still spry enough at 103 years of age to journey to Washington, D. C. He called at the pension office to straighten out the records of his Civil War service. (Associated Press)

WINS MARATHON SEVENTH TIME—Clarence DeMar, seven times winner of Boston, Mass., Athletic Association's annual marathon, made the 26-mile run in two hours 34 minutes 48 1-5 seconds.

BANISH SHOE FATIGUE

A tailored oxford for comfort.

An oxford of ombre design.

FLEXIBLE FOR COMFORT

This trade mark is a symbol of comfort, caused by the flexible arch.

SHOE FATIGUE is a danger signal. Fallen arches, backaches, drawing pains in your legs, nervous disorders, how often are they the result of improper shoes!

But you need not suffer. You can again make your steps lively and lovely.

Change to Cantilever Shoes. For these are shoes which really help your feet; the Cantilever flexible shank lets muscles and arches exercise. Gradually—with every step—they strengthen themselves. Each step is supported, cushioned and made easy. With each step a new measure of health returns. You get new energy and all-day comfort!

LEAPIN' LIZARDS! HERE COMES A CAR- NO TELLIN' WHO IT IS - I DON'T THINK THEY'D BOTHER TO FOLLOW ME FROM TH' COUNTY POOR FARM- BUT YUH NEVER CAN TELL-

NO USE TAKIN' ANY SILLY CHANCES- QUICK! UNDER TH' BRIDGE TILL THAT CAR GOES BY-

HAVEN'T SEEN A LITTLE GIRL GO BY HERE, HAVE YUH? RUN AWAY FROM TH' FARM- AND NOW THERE'S A REWARD OUT FER HER-

NOPE- SHE HAIN'T PASSED HERE- BEEN WATCHIN' FER STRAY DOGS ALL NIGHT- I'D 'A' SEEN HER-

WELL, SHE CAN'T GIT FUR- I'VE GOT TH' RIVER BRIDGE WATCHED-

HOW BIG'S TH' R'WARD?

WHEW! IF WE'D GONE ANOTHER STEP ON THAT ROAD WE'D HAVE BEEN GRABBED-

NOW THERE'S A REWARD OUT FOR ME- AN' IF THEY SEE YOU, SANDY, THEY'LL SHOOT YOU- THE ROADS AREN'T SAFE- WE'LL FOLLOW THIS DRY CREEK- NOT SO LIABLE TO MEET FOLKS-

THE RIVER! WE'VE GOTTA GET ACROSS- BUT HOW? IF WE HADN'T HEARD 'EM TALKIN' WE'D HAVE WALKED RIGHT INTO TROUBLE AT TH' BRIDGE-

GEE- IT'S NOT MUCH OF A BOAT, BUT IT'S BETTER'N NOTHIN'- C'MON, YOU GUYS- NO TIME NOW TO BE CAREFUL-

WE'VE FLOATED MORE'N A MILE DOWN-STREAM, BUT WE'RE ALMOST ACROSS AN' NOBODY'S SEEN US- IF WE ONLY HAD SOMETHIN' TO EAT NOW, I'D FEEL SWELL-

WHAT LUCK! LOOK! A LUNCH BOX IN TH' BOAT AND IT'S FULL O' SANDWICHES AND THERE'S A BOTTLE O' COFFEE - IT WAS UNDER TH' SEAT ALL TH' TIME -

COURSE IT ISN'T OURS, BUT I GUESS WE NEED IT MORE'N ANYBODY ELSE, RIGHT NOW- AN' IT ISN'T OUR BOAT, EITHER- BUT WE JUST BORROWED THAT- TH' OWNER WOULDN'T MIND, IF HE KNEW WHAT A TOUGH SPOT WE'RE IN-

THERE, NOW- I FEEL A HEAP BETTER- NOTHIN' LIKE A GOOD, SQUARE MEAL TO PEP YUH UP AN' MAKE EVERYTHING LOOK LOTS BRIGHTER- EH, BOYS?
